Red Ambush Kills 76 U. S. Paratroops In Viet Highlands

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese regulars caught a 130-man company of the 173rd Airborne Brigade in an ambush Thursday, killing 76 American paratroopers and wounding 24.

The bloody fight in the central highlands was disclosed Saturday by the U.S. Command in a delayed report. Estimates of enemy dead were 400 to 500.

AIRFIELD SHELLED

In Saturday's action, Viet Cong guerrillas shelled a U.S. airfield with an estimated 100 rounds of mortar fire, wounding 40 Americans, U.S. headquarters reported today.

Headquarters said the Communists fired on the air base at Dau Tieng, about 48 miles northwest of Saigon, just before midnight Saturday. Extent of damage to planes and airfield facilities has not been determined, the U.S. Command said.

The shelling was the only significant ground action reported in South Vietnam.

Over North Vietnam, U.S. jet bombers concentrated on railroad yards, rail bridges and storage areas Saturday. Pilots also claimed damage to a surface-to-air missile site 77 miles west of Hanoi, the North Vietnamese capital.

Navy fliers from U.S. aircraft carriers in the Tonkin Gulf swarmed over enemy installations around Thanh Hoa, a major transshipment point 75 miles south of Hanoi.

The carrier pilots reported heavy damage to the Thanh Hoa railroad yards, two miles south of the city, and to a storage area and two railroad bridges in the Thanh Hoa area.

U.S. Air Force pilots, flying in from Thailand bases, ranged over targets around Vinh and Dong Hoi in the southern end of North Vietnam. Pilots claimed they blew up three oil storage tanks, heavily damaged three others and sank between 10 and 20 cargo barges.

B52 bombers struck three times in South Vietnam on Saturday night and this morning. One of the raids hit at enemy troop concentrations 19 miles south of Da Nang, another hit at infiltration routes and enemy gun positions near Khe Sanh in the northwest corner of the country, and the third raid attacked a troop concentration and base camp near Phu My along the central coast.

Middle West Storms Send River Raging

By United Press International

Thunderstorms pummeled the Midlands again Saturday, spilling more runoff into the swollen Missouri River, which has flooded nearly a half a million acres of land.

Tornadoes menaced the Great Lakes region.

A tornado watch was in effect through mid-evening for sections of Indiana, Michigan and Ohio.

Severe thunderstorm warnings were posted through early evening in parts of Missouri, Illinois and Indiana, and through mid-evening for sections of Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas.

Winds up to 75 miles an hour struck the Charlotte, Mich., airport, damaging four hangars, three planes and injuring one man.

A thunderstorm at Chicago delayed landings at O'Hare International Airport, the nation's busiest, and left 2,000 customers without electric power in the city's north suburbs.

Kansas City, Kan., Springfield, Mo., and Madison, Wis., each collected about an inch of rain during the late morning and early afternoon. Joplin, Mo., had 1.2 inches.

Twelve stores in a shopping center near Chicago were flooded by torrential downpours. Sewers backed up, flooding basements of many homes.

King Hussein Flies To U. S. For U.N. Meet

NEW YORK (UPI)—King Hussein of Jordan, reportedly bitter over Arab bloc coolness toward a common post-war policy meeting, arrived Saturday to present his case at the U.N. General Assembly's debate on the Middle East crisis.

Hussein, 32, had told UPI in Rome he intended to "be speaking for Jordan and the Arab world" at the U.N. special session. He said, "I am going to try and do whatever I can to help the Arab cause and the cause of Jordan. We will seize the opportunity to put our case before the world."

After stops in Rome and Paris, Hussein arrived at Kennedy Airport here at 7:30 p.m. EDT. The youthful monarch wore a tightlipped smile as he spoke hesitatingly and with some emotion to airport newsmen.

"I am here once again with the privilege of representing my country and the Arab nations at the United Nations," he said. "I hope I will be able to present the Arab cause."

Despite speculation he would Charles de Gaulle, Hussein meet with French President made only a one hour stopover at Paris. De Gaulle was at his country estate 100 miles southeast of Paris.

Hussein piloted his royal Jordanian airlines' twin-jet Caravelle from Amman to Rome on the first leg of his trip to New York.

Sources close to Hussein told UPI correspondent David L. Dugas in Rome the king regretted the lack of support he received from his Arab neighbors during Jordan's disastrous three-day encounter with Israeli Arab block had failed to form a common post-war policy and "realistically" face defeat.

Hussein did not give Dugas details on his General Assembly arguments. He was expected to stress the plight of Palestinians who have fled across the Jordan River from the Israeli-occupied west bank.

Jordan claims about 150,000—15 per cent of the west bank's one million population—have thus far sought refuge in Jordan. Israel has rejected Jordanian charges it was purposely driving the Arabs out of captured Jordanian territory in a plot of "piecemeal extermination."

Body Sets Talks On Labor Crisis

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The State Labor Mediation Board began contracting those embroiled in a widespread labor dispute Saturday in an effort to start talks toward a settlement.

"If we can get a favorable response, we will likely meet again next week, said S. J. Taylor, board chairman and president of Louisiana Tech.

After the board's two-hour private meeting, Taylor conferred with Gov. John J. McKeithen.

The governor was unavailable for comment afterward.

"It is felt that the greatest service we can render is to assist in re-establishing lines of communications among all parties concerned," the board said.

The rash of labor disputes has resulted in the virtual shutdown of some $250 million worth of construction projects in the Baton Rouge area, idling about 15,000 workers.

Politburo Member Back From Mysterious Trip

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Politburo member Zenon Kliszko, No. 2 man in the Polish Communist party, returned Saturday night from a mysterious but long - rumored visit to North Vietnam.

The Polish delegation conducted talks with high-ranking Soviet officials in Moscow on the way back.

PAP, the official Polish press agency, announced Kliszko's arrival from the "friendship visit" without disclosing how long he had been there or whether he met North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh.

PAP also said nothing about Kliszko's talk in Moscow with Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and other Soviet leaders.

Hanoi dispatch from PAP said, meanwhile, that Kliszko told members of a Hanoi antiaircraft unit, "We are giving and will continue to give you material, political and military aid. Such aid is the duty of every Communist and workers' party." It was the first time the term "military aid" has been used to describe Polish assistance to North Vietnam.

Kliszko is regarded as the Polish party's ideological czar and most powerful figure next to party leader Wladyslaw Gomulka.

There was speculation last winter that Kliszko would undertake a mission to Hanoi to explore peacemaking prospects. Since then, Gomulka has taken an ever-tougher line against the United States, prompting observers to feel that any high-level Polish mission to Hanoi would be to stiffen Hanoi's will to continue the war.

PAP's Hanoi dispatch gave few details on Kliszko's political talks but said they were held in "a particularly cordial atmosphere."

"Members of the delegation were able to convince themselves at every step of the unusually high morale of the population and their unbreakable will for struggle and victory," PAP added.

In Moscow, the Soviet-Polish talks were announced by the official Soviet news agency Tass.

Without saying when the talks were held, the announcement said they were attended by Soviet party ideologist and Politburo member Mikhail A. Suslov, secret police chief and candidate Politburo member Yuri V. Andropov, and Party Secretary Ivan V. Kapitonov.

The announcement did not disclose what was discussed or what mission the Polish delegation had in North Vietnam.

It was the delegation and Kremlin officials "had an exchange of opinions" on questions of mutual interest, in an atmosphere of "fraternal friendship and utter mutual understanding."

Wreck Kills One, Injures Six Others

RAYVILLE (Special) — One person was killed and six others injured in an early morning head - on collision, 5.8 miles east of here on U.S. 80 Saturday.

Killed was John Thomas Barts, 23, of Fort Worth, Tex.

He was riding in a station wagon in which a family of four persons were injured. Their names and conditions as listed by authorities at St. Francis Hospital in Monroe were.

Mrs. Odora Bounds, 40, driver of the station wagon, in satisfactory condition; John Bounds, 17, in serious condition; Julia Bounds, 16, in serious condition; and Clay Bounds, 14, in critical condition. All were from Fort Worth.

The driver of the other vehicle, Earl Jones, 31, of Vicksburg, Miss., and a passenger in his vehicle, Miss Charlene Shivers, 19, of West Monroe, were treated for minor injuries at a Delhi clinic.

Jones was being held in the Richland Parish jail here on charges of negligent homicide, negligent injury, driving on the wrong side of the road and driving while under the influence of intoxicating beverages, according to state police.

Investigating officers reported the mishap occurred as the car driven by Jones was traveling west, and drifted over into the path of the oncoming Bounds vehicle, around 4:30 a.m. Police said Jones apparently fell asleep at the wheel of the vehicle he was driving.

Meredith Begins Walk

COLDWATER, Miss. (AP) — To both boos and applause, James H. Meredith stepped off 15 miles of his "walk against fear" Saturday — starting at the point where he was felled by shotgun blasts a year ago.

It was the second time that Meredith, key figure in two of the state's biggest racial uproars, had started his symbolic hike along sun-blistered U.S. 51 to Jackson.

"The most important thing thus far is the response of the Negroes who greeted me along the way," he said, massaging his aching feet. "They confirmed the existence of a state of fear by telling of the people who were afraid to come."

Authorities said no special security arrangements were set up. But they kept a wary eye on the situation.

Among others, highway patrolmen were on hand, sent by Gov. Paul Johnson to make sure there were no "traffic problems."

Much The Same Weather Seen

Monroe experienced another hot day with temperatures in the mid-90's and no rain Saturday.

Local temperatures, recorded at FAA at Selman Field, rose from a low of 76 between 6 and 7 a.m. to a high of 94 at 4 p.m.

Today's weather in the Twin Cities should be much the same as Saturday's with partly cloudy skies, hot temperatures and a slight possibility of widely scattered mainly afternoon thundershowers.

Today's high is predicted to be between 90 and 96 with the low falling between 72 and 77. The rainfall probability is 20 per cent in the afternoons and 10 per cent at other times. The forecast for Monday is much the same as for today.

Kosygin Takes Trip, Sees Niagara Falls In Meet Interlude

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin oh-ed and ah-ed at Niagara Falls like millions of tourists before him Saturday, and said the spectacle had made a "memorable impression" on him.

"We'll always maintain these impressions in our memories," he said before flying back to New York to prepare for the second half of his summit conference with President Johnson.

Back in New York after the 6½-hour trip, Kosygin greeted reporters at Kennedy Airport with a thumbs-up gesture and a smiling, "I enjoyed it, I enjoyed it."

Kosygin and President Johnson are scheduled to meet at 12:30 p.m. CDT today in Glassboro, N.J., the same little college town where they held the first half of their historic session on Friday.

The President loaned Kosygin one of his White House planes for the trip here. He had suggested Niagara Falls when Kosygin mentioned at Glassboro that he'd like to see some more sights.

Kosygin brought along his daughter, Ludmila Gvishianai, and some Soviet-bloc premiers of Byelo Russia, Czechoslovakia, Mongolia, and the Ukraine, plus the foreign minister of Hungary and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Mrs. Gvishiani told the attendant at a restaurant, where the party lunched, "I'm glad to see land again. I don't like New York because there is no land — open ground."

Kosygin arrived at 10:08 a.m. and left four hours and 22 minutes later. He was greeted briefly at the airport by Mayor E. Dent Lackey, who attempted to present the key to the city to Kosygin. The premier was anxious to get to the falls and the motorcade took off before the presentation.

At the luncheon, however, Lackey gave Kosygin and the other heads of government with him each a gold key, which the mayor said cost $7 each. He also gave each man in the party a silver coin commemorating the 75th anniversary of Niagara Falls' incorporation.

Lackey gave a gold charm bracelet to Kosygin's daughter. The bracelet had one gold charm bearing the city seal.

Lackey said that while he was describing the falls to Kosygin from the 218-foot-high Prospect Park observation tower, Kosygin expressed a desire to see the gigantic Niagara Falls power plant.

Kosygin asked the mayor why Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin had not put power plants on the agenda. The mayor did not reply, but said, "If I disappear, I am making a call so you can go there."

"Good, I'll understand your disappearance," the mayor quoted Kosygin as saying.

A delegation of Soviet experts visited the power plant last year so Kosygin was not the first Soviet Communist to tour it.

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin announced Saturday that he would hold a full-dress news conference, presumably to clarify Russia's position on vital summit issues, almost immediately after his second meeting with President Johnson Sunday.

Kosygin made the announcement through U.N. Headquarters where the conference is to be held at 8 p.m. EDT. A U.N. spokesman said the conference was scheduled at the request of the U. N. Correspondents Association.

The Soviet side has been tight - lipped about Kosygin's objectives in meeting President Johnson although Soviet sources have indicated that the Premier eagerly sought the top-level parley.

Between Summit Talks

Rusk Holds Meet With U.N. Envoys

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Between summit talks in Glassboro, N.J., Secretary of State Dean Rusk met Saturday with U.N. delegates working on a compromise resolution for the General Assembly's emergency session on the Middle East.

He gave a luncheon in U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg's Waldorf Towers suite for 14 men from nine Anglo-Saxon, West European and Latin-American countries, five of them Cabinet ministers. His guests are all attending the assembly session.

ACCEPTABLE PLAN

Among the countries were Venezuela, on a Latin-American committee trying to draft a generally acceptable resolution; Argentina and Brazil, being consulted by the committee; and Canada and Italy, among Western countries discussing the same problem. The others invited were Britain, Denmark, Ireland and the Netherlands.

"Right at the critical moment of takeoff," he said, "pilots are required to make steep banking turns and reduce engine thrust" to reduce ground-level noise in residential areas near airports.

After the luncheon Rusk planned to fly back to Washington, spend the night there, and join President Johnson in Philadelphia en route to the President's second meeting with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin in Glassboro at 1:30 p.m. EDT on Sunday.

An announcement was made that Kosygin would hold a televised news conference at U.N. headquarters at 1:30 p.m. EDT today, after the second Glassboro summit meeting. The U.N. Correspondents Association asked for the news conference.

There was an unconfirmed report that Kosygin would leave for Moscow on Monday, rounding out a 10-day trip to the United States that started merely as a journey to the United Nations to push for Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territory.

King Hussein of Jordan was due to speak to the 122-nation assembly Monday or Tuesday afternoon. He was expected to stay three or four days.

The assembly had speakers booked through next week on a list that totaled 78. Officials predicted that the week-old session, being held by Soviet request, would last another two weeks.

Diplomatic sources said they expected one or two new resolutions would be submitted to the assembly toward the end of next week in an effort to provide something that could get the two-thirds majority necessary for adoption.

They expressed doubt that either of two pending resolutions could get such a majority.

Plane Returns To Airport

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — An engine forced a Delta Airlines plane bound for New Orleans, La., to return to Newark Airport shortly after takeoff Saturday, a Port Authority spokesman said.

The plane, Flight No. 929, landed safely and none of its 53 passengers were hurt, an airport spokesman said. The aircraft was a Convair 880.

Investigators Probe Wreck Of Jetliner

BLOSSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Amid reports of sabotage, investigators probing the still-smoldering wreckage of a Mohawk Airlines jetliner crash that killed 34 persons reported Saturday the plane had come apart in the air.

Based on the first appraisal from the scene, it is obvious that the plane came apart in the air," said Edward E. Slattery Jr., safety information officer of the National Transportation Safety Board. "Part of the tail was found 1,000 feet from the main wreckage indicating that the plane broke up in the air."

Slattery said, however, that this did not affirm or reject the possibility of sabotage, raised Friday, after the plane had crashed by Mohawk President Robert E. Peach.

Peach wired FBI director J. Edgar Hoover Friday night, saying, "evidence has developed in course of notification of next of kin of crash victims which leads to strong suggestion of sabotage."

He did not elaborate, and a Mohawk spokesman in Utica, N.Y., replied "not necessarily" when asked if the evidence involved any particular passenger.

The FBI said in Washington that it had no determination of the accident cause and no evidence of sabotage which would justify its entering the investigation. FBI experts said they were on the scene to help identify the victims. They were keeping in touch with local and federal aviation authorities, a spokesman said.

President Takes Time To See New Grandson

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson saw Saturday the grandchild who already has figured in one summit conference and may in another summit session Sunday.

The trip from the LBJ ranch to an Austin hospital to see Patrick Lyndon Nugent, the new son of his younger daughter Luci, was interspersed among telephone conferences in preparation for a second meeting with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin at Glassboro, N.J.

Something of what the President described as the "The spirit of Hollybush" may have been attributable to the fact that the chiefs of state of the world's most powerful nations found a pleasant, convenient talking point in grandchildren.

Hollybush is the residence of the president of Glassboro State College where the President and Premier found a sort of a neutral ground in a comfortable atmosphere for a long summit conference Friday.

In about the second instant after they met, Kosygin was bragging a bit that he is an experienced grandfather with 18 years' start on Johnson — who at that time hadn't even seen his first grandchild born Wednesday.

And the two of them kept coming back to grandpaternal expressions during the five-odd hours they were together. Kosygin had a present for Patrick Lyndon, a gold baby cup he turned over to Johnson for delivery.

At one point in the discussions the President told Kosygin:

"You don't want my grandson fighting you and I don't want you shooting at him."

And then, after flying to Los Angeles toward the end of his 25-hour day, Johnson said in a speech at a Democratic political gathering that he and Kosygin "agreed that we wanted a world of peace for our grandchildren."

"We reached no agreement — almost, but not quite," Johnson said, "but I think we understand each other better."

Kosygin also brought a set of gold cups to the President. These were about demi-tasse size.

That 25-hour day began when Johnson woke up at 4:30 Friday morning and began reviewing position papers, as the diplomats call them, as part of his homework for the meeting with Kosygin.

PAP, the official Polish press agency, announced Kliszko's arrival from the "friendship visit" without disclosing how long he had been there or whether he met North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh.

PAP also said nothing about Kliszko's talk in Moscow with Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and other Soviet leaders.

Hanoi dispatch from PAP said, meanwhile, that Kliszko told members of a Hanoi antiaircraft unit, "We are giving and will continue to give you material, political and military aid. Such aid is the duty of every Communist and workers party." It was the first time the term "military aid" has been used to describe Polish assistance to North Vietnam.

Kliszko is regarded as the Polish party's ideological czar and most powerful figure next to party leader Wladyslaw Gomulka.

There was speculation last winter that Kliszko would undertake a mission to Hanoi to explore peacemaking prospects. Since then, Gomulka has taken an ever-tougher line against the United States, prompting observers to feel that any high-level Polish mission to Hanoi would be to stiffen Hanoi's will to continue the war.

PAP's Hanoi dispatch gave few details on Kliszko's political talks but said they were held in "a particularly cordial atmosphere."

"Members of the delegation were able to convince themselves at every step of the unusually high morale of the population and their unbreakable will for struggle and victory," PAP added.

In Moscow, the Soviet-Polish talks were announced by the official Soviet news agency Tass.

Without saying when the talks were held, the announcement said they were attended by Soviet party ideologist and Politburo member Mikhail A. Suslov, secret police chief and candidate Politburo member Yuri V. Andropov, and Party Secretary Ivan V. Kapitonov.

The announcement did not disclose what was discussed or what mission the Polish delegation had in North Vietnam.

It was the delegation and Kremlin officials "had an exchange of opinions" on questions of mutual interest, in an atmosphere of "fraternal friendship and utter mutual understanding."

Wreck Kills One, Injures Six Others

RAYVILLE (Special) — One person was killed and six others injured in an early morning head - on collision, 5.8 miles east of here on U.S. 80 Saturday.

Killed was John Thomas Barts, 23, of Fort Worth, Tex.

He was riding in a station wagon in which a family of four persons were injured. Their names and conditions as listed by authorities at St. Francis Hospital in Monroe were:

Mrs. Odora Bounds, 40, driver of the station wagon, in satisfactory condition; John Bounds, 47, in serious condition; Julia Bounds, 16, in serious condition; and Clay Bounds, 14, in critical condition. All were from Fort Worth.

The driver of the other vehicle, Earl Jones, 31, of Vicksburg, Miss., and a passenger in his vehicle, Miss Charlene Shivers, 19, of West Monroe, were treated for minor injuries at a Delhi clinic.

Jones was being held in the Richland Parish jail here on charges of negligent homicide, negligent injury, driving on the wrong side of the road and driving while under the influence of intoxicating beverages, according to state police.

Investigating officers reported the mishap occurred as the car driven by Jones was traveling west, and drifted over into the path of the oncoming Bounds vehicle, around 4:30 a.m. Police said Jones apparently fell asleep at the wheel of the vehicle he was driving.

Meredith Begins Walk

COLDWATER, Miss. (AP) — To both boos and applause, James H. Meredith stepped off 15 miles of his "walk against fear" Saturday — starting at the point where he was felled by shotgun blasts a year ago.

It was the second time that Meredith, key figure in two of the state's biggest racial uproars, had started his symbolic hike along sun-blistered U.S. 51 to Jackson.

"The most important thing thus far is the response of the Negroes who greeted me along the way," he said, massaging his aching feet. "They confirmed the existence of a state of fear by telling of the people who were afraid to come."

Authorities said no special security arrangements were set up. But they kept a wary eye on the situation.

Among others, highway patrolmen were on hand, sent by Gov. Paul Johnson to make sure there were no "traffic problems."

Much The Same Weather Seen

Monroe experienced another hot day with temperatures in the mid-90's and no rain Saturday.

Local temperatures, recorded at FAA at Selman Field, rose from a low of 76 between 6 and 7 a.m. to a high of 94 at 4 p.m.

Today's weather in the Twin Cities should be much the same as Saturday's with partly cloudy skies, hot temperatures and a slight possibility of widely scattered mainly afternoon thundershowers.

Today's high is predicted to be between 90 and 96 with the low falling between 72 and 77. The rainfall probability is 20 per cent in the afternoons and 10 per cent at other times. The forecast for Monday is much the same as for today.

Kosygin Takes Trip, Sees Niagara Falls In Meet Interlude

Between Summit Talks

Rusk Holds Meet With U.N. Envoys

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Between summit talks in Glassboro, N.J., Secretary of State Dean Rusk met Saturday with U.N. delegates working on a compromise resolution for the General Assembly's emergency session on the Middle East.

He gave a luncheon in U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg's Waldorf Towers suite for 14 men from nine Anglo-Saxon, West European and Latin-American countries, five of them Cabinet ministers. His guests are all attending the assembly session.

ACCEPTABLE PLAN

Among the countries were Venezuela, on a Latin-American committee trying to draft a generally acceptable resolution; Argentina and Brazil, being consulted by the committee; and Canada and Italy, among Western countries discussing the same problem. The others invited were Britain, Denmark, Ireland and the Netherlands.

"Right at the critical moment of takeoff," he said, "pilots are required to make steep banking turns and reduce engine thrust" to reduce ground-level noise in residential areas near airports.

After the luncheon Rusk planned to fly back to Washington, spend the night there, and join President Johnson in Philadelphia en route to the President's second meeting with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin in Glassboro at 1:30 p.m. EDT on Sunday.

An announcement was made that Kosygin would hold a televised news conference at U.N. headquarters at 1:30 p.m. EDT today, after the second Glassboro summit meeting. The U.N. Correspondents Association asked for the news conference.

There was an unconfirmed report that Kosygin would leave for Moscow on Monday, rounding out a 10-day trip to the United States that started merely as a journey to the United Nations to push for Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territory.

King Hussein of Jordan was due to speak to the 122-nation assembly Monday or Tuesday afternoon. He was expected to stay three or four days.

The assembly had speakers booked through next week on a list that totaled 78. Officials predicted that the week-old session, being held by Soviet request, would last another two weeks.

Diplomatic sources said they expected one or two new resolutions would be submitted to the assembly toward the end of next week in an effort to provide something that could get the two-thirds majority necessary for adoption.

They expressed doubt that either of two pending resolutions could get such a majority.

Plane Returns To Airport

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — An engine forced a Delta Airlines plane bound for New Orleans, La., to return to Newark Airport shortly after takeoff Saturday, a Port Authority spokesman said.

The plane, Flight No. 929, landed safely and none of its 53 passengers were hurt, an airport spokesman said. The aircraft was a Convair 880.

Investigators Probe Wreck Of Jetliner

BLOSSBURG, Pa. (AP)—Amid reports of sabotage, investigators probing the still-smoldering wreckage of a Mohawk Airlines jetliner crash that killed 34 persons reported Saturday the plane had come apart in the air.

Based on the first appraisal from the scene, it is obvious that the plane came apart in the air," said Edward E. Slattery Jr., safety information officer of the National Transportation Safety Board. "Part of the tail was found 1,000 feet from the main wreckage indicating that the plane broke up in the air."

Slattery said, however, that this did not affirm or reject the possibility of sabotage, raised Friday, after the plane had crashed, by Mohawk President Robert E. Peach.

Peach wired FBI director J. Edgar Hoover Friday night, saying, "evidence has developed in course of notification of next of kin of crash victims which leads to strong suggestion of sabotage."

He did not elaborate, and a Mohawk spokesman in Utica, N.Y., replied "not necessarily" when asked if the evidence involved any particular passenger.

The FBI said in Washington that it had no determination of the accident cause and no evidence of sabotage which would justify its entering the investigation. FBI experts said they were on the scene to help identify the victims. They were keeping in touch with local and federal aviation authorities, a spokesman said.

President Takes Time To See New Grandson

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson saw Saturday the grandchild who already has figured in one summit conference and may in another summit session Sunday.

The trip from the LBJ ranch to an Austin hospital to see Patrick Lyndon Nugent, the new son of his younger daughter Luci, was interspersed among telephone conferences in preparation for a second meeting with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin at Glassboro, N.J.

Something of what the President described as the "The spirit of Hollybush" may have been attributable to the fact that the chiefs of state of the world's most powerful nations found a pleasant, convenient talking point in grandchildren.

Hollybush is the residence of the president of Glassboro State College where the President and Premier found a sort of a neutral ground in a comfortable atmosphere for a long summit conference Friday.

In about the second instant after they met, Kosygin was bragging a bit that he is an experienced grandfather with 18 years' start on Johnson — who at that time hadn't even seen his first grandchild, born Wednesday.

And the two of them kept coming back to grandpaternal expressions during the five-odd hours they were together. Kosygin had a present for Patrick Lyndon, a gold baby cup he turned over to Johnson for delivery.

At one point in the discussions the President told Kosygin:

"You don't want my grandson fighting you and I don't want you shooting at him."

And then, after flying to Los Angeles toward the end of his 25-hour day, Johnson said in a speech at a Democratic political gathering that he and Kosygin "agreed that we wanted a world of peace for our grandchildren."

"We reached no agreement — almost, but not quite," Johnson said, "but I think we understand each other better."

Kosygin also brought a set of gold cups to the President. These were about demi-tasse size.

That 25-hour day began when Johnson woke up at 4:30 Friday morning and began reviewing position papers, as the diplomats call them, as part of his homework for the meeting with Kosygin.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin oh-ed and ah-ed at Niagara Falls like millions of tourists before him Saturday, and said the spectacle had made a "memorable impression" on him.

"We'll always maintain these impressions in our memories," he said before flying back to New York to prepare for the second half of his summit conference with President Johnson.

Back in New York after the 6½-hour trip, Kosygin greeted reporters at Kennedy Airport with a thumbs-up gesture and a smiling, "I enjoyed it, I enjoyed it."

Kosygin and President Johnson are scheduled to meet at 12:30 p.m. CDT today in Glassboro, N.J., the same little college town where they held the first half of their historic session on Friday.

The President loaned Kosygin one of his White House planes for the trip here. He had suggested Niagara Falls when Kosygin mentioned at Glassboro that he'd like to see some more sights.

Kosygin brought along his daughter, Ludmila Gvishianai, and some Soviet-bloc premiers of Byelo Russia, Czechoslovakia, Mongolia, and the Ukraine, plus the foreign minister of Hungary and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Mrs. Gvishiani told the attendant at a restaurant, where the party lunched, "I'm glad to see land again. I don't like New York because there is no land — open ground."

Kosygin arrived at 10:08 a.m. and left four hours and 22 minutes later. He was greeted briefly at the airport by Mayor E. Dent Lackey, who attempted to present the key to the city to Kosygin. The premier was anxious to get to the falls and the motorcade took off before the presentation.

At the luncheon, however, Lackey gave Kosygin and the other heads of government with him each a gold key, which the mayor said cost $7 each. He also gave each man in the party a silver coin commemorating the 75th anniversary of Niagara Falls' incorporation.

Lackey gave a gold charm bracelet to Kosygin's daughter. The bracelet had one gold charm bearing the city seal.

Lackey said that while he was describing the falls to Kosygin from the 218-foot-high Prospect Park observation tower, Kosygin expressed a desire to see the gigantic Niagara Falls power plant.

Kosygin asked the mayor why Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin had not put power plants on the agenda. The mayor did not reply, but said, "If I disappear, I am making a call so you can go there."

"Good, I'll understand your disappearance," the mayor quoted Kosygin as saying.

A delegation of Soviet experts visited the power plant last year so Kosygin was not the first Soviet Communist to tour it.

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin announced Saturday that he would hold a full-dress news conference, presumably to clarify Russia's position on vital summit issues, almost immediately after his second meeting with President Johnson Sunday.

Kosygin made the announcement through U.N. Headquarters where the conference is to be held at 8 p.m. EDT. A U.N. spokesman said the conference was scheduled at the request of the U. N. Correspondents Association.

The Soviet side has been tight - lipped about Kosygin's objectives in meeting President Johnson although Soviet sources have indicated that the Premier eagerly sought the top-level parley.

Plant Dedication Slated At Ruston

RUSTON (Special)—Gov. John McKeithen will be in Ruston Monday for the second time in a week.

There will be a private dedication of the new Stowe-Woodard plant, including plant officials and others.

President of the plant, D. W. Stapleton, from the home office in Newton, Mass.; Charles E. Hoffman, manager of the Ruston plant, and S.C. Turnbull, superintendent of the Ruston plant, will be among the officials dedicating the plant.

After a noon luncheon at the Holiday Inn in Ruston, the group will motor to the plant site on McDonall Avenue, to dedicate the plant.

The new Stowe-Woodard plant wil lemploy around 25 men to start production. The plant will produce rubber coverings to cover large metal rollers for paper mills.

According to plant officials, the plant will be able to handle rollers up to 6 feet in diameter and 120,000 pounds in weight and 336 inches long.

The Ruston site was choosen for this sixth plant after a through survey was made of different soils in the South.

Officials said a certain type soil is best for the building of the plant, because such heavy equipment is involved in the production process. Construction was started on the Ruston plant in August of 1966.

Penal System 'Snaps To' For Former Military Boss

By BILL NEIKIRK

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—Since the general came on the scene about two months ago, the Louisiana state prison system has been snapping to attention.

Retired Air Force Lt. Gen. David Wade, 56, a former top man in the Strategic Air Command, believes in running things the military way.

He has applied that touch in his new job as director of the State Institutions Department, where his friend, Gov. John McKeithen, put him to bring about stability it has not enjoyed in the past

Wade is approaching his job positively. He wants to improve what he calls the department's poor image and beef up its organization.

Ask him what the department's most pressing problems are and he replies, "let me tell you about our goals."

The first is simpler than it sounds: "To reorganize the department and get it more in an operating role so that there will be more direction from the department to each operating unit."

In other words, Wade said, he is going to exercise more control from the central office over the state prisons and institutions

The second goal is to upgrade the system's job of rehabilitation, particularly in the area of education, while continuing its task of confinement and work at hard labor

A native of Claiborne Parish who retired after 32 years in the Air Force, Wade believes the jobs of running a penal system and a military operation are similar

"I think a military man is ideally suited to step into the job I did," he said. "Here we have our own real estate, our bases, family housing, dormitories, dining halls and a disciplinary problem."

The pitfalls of politics haven't concerned him greatly. "I have not been asked by anyone—by any politician—to put somebody on the payroll," he said. Later, he added: "I think we can keep this out of politics. The governor hired me to run the Department of Institutions. He's going to be, I hope, my buffer."

Wade's first brush with politics was the well-publicized "battle of Baker." When he decided to spend $2 million in bond money, originally set aside to build a new institution, for improvements at the Industrial School for Colored Youth near Baker, the mayor and city council protested loudly.

LT. GEN. DAVID WADE
. . . Former SAC Chief

Wade said he was "flabbergasted" at their opposition and led newsmen on a tour of the rundown institution to prove his point.

But when it was all over, McKeithen stepped in — backing down on the plan to use bond money for the improvements and promising Wade funds from other sources to finance the expansion.

During a recent meeting of the Board of Institutions, Wade ruffled a few television cameramen when he said he wasn't going to hold up a meeting just for them.

Wade, who owns a huge citrus farm in the Rio Grande Valley in Harlingen, Texas, spent his last 17 years in SAC. He headed Air Force Bases, most notably the Vanderburg Base, a key missile base in this country.

Wade is a veteran of World War II and the Korean War. When he was at Barksdale Air Force Base, he invited McKeithen to a special event. He told McKeithen: "As a native Louisiana many times I have been ashamed of my state. But since you've been governor, I'm real proud. I'd like to come back and live here and help you out in any way I can." McKeithen ac-

Four Persons Injured In Area Wreck

COLUMBIA (Special) — Four persons were injured Saturday afternoon when vehicles driven by a Caldwell Parish mother and her 15-year-old son collided head-on about 12 miles west of here on La. 4.

Injured were Mrs. Ouida Marie Finley, 36, her son, Charles D. Finley, 15, Donnie Mills, 16, all of Route 2 Columbia, and Mrs. Phyllis Moore of Monroe.

This was the second Caldwell Parish accident this week involving members of the same family. Tuesday morning, S.L. Warner of Kelly was seriously injured when his pick-up truck collided head-on with a log truck driven by his son, Claude Warner, also of Kelly. This accident happened about 15 miles southeast of Columbia near Roseville.

According to state troopers, Mrs. Finley was traveling west when her car collided head-on with the jeep driven by her son as he was attempting to turn into Franklin's Grocery. Mrs. Moore was a passenger in the car, and Mills was riding in the jeep.

The injured were carried to Columbia Heights Hospital where Mrs. Finley was reported to have suffered internal injuries. The other three were treated for numerous cuts and bruises.

Troopers said that no charges have been filed pending further investigation.

Wade said he was "flabbergasted" at their opposition and led newsmen on a tour of the rundown institution to prove his point.

But when it was all over, McKeithen stepped in — backing down on the plan to use bond money for the improvements and promising Wade funds from other sources to finance the expansion.

During a recent meeting of the Board of Institutions, Wade ruffled a few television cameramen when he said he wasn't going to hold up a meeting just for them.

Wade, who owns a huge citrus farm in the Rio Grande Valley in Harlingen, Texas, spent his last 17 years in SAC. He headed Air Force Bases, most notably the Vanderburg Base, a key missile base in this country.

Wade is a veteran of World War II and the Korean War. When he was at Barksdale Air Force Base, he invited McKeithen to a special event. He told McKeithen: "As a native Louisiana many times I have been ashamed of my state. But since you've been governor, I'm real proud. I'd like to come back and live here and help you out in any way I can." McKeithen ac-

Ticket Sales For Pageant Said Brisk

"Advance ticket sales are moving along more briskly than in any preceding year that we have handled the Miss Louisiana Pageant," said John Young, Monroe Jaycee pageant publicity chairman, Friday.

Young went on to say, "This year we are selling advance tickets only in four-night blocks. Tickets for an individual performance will be sold at the door each night. The tickets for Saturday night will not go on sale until 9 a.m. Saturday, July 1."

The 1967 Miss Louisiana Pageant is sponsored by the Monroe Jaycees and will open at Neville auditorium here Wednesday night running through the crowning of the new state beauty queen Saturday night, July 1. The pageant is an official preliminary event of the Miss America pageant, to be held in Atlantic City, N.J., in September.

Tickets for the annual event are on sale Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Miss Louisiana Pageant headquarters, 347 DeSiard Street. Roy Post is the Jaycee ticket sales chairman, and the Monroe Jaycee Jaynes have been handling the ticket sales at the headquarters.

Tickets may also be ordered by mail. Post said, "Mail orders are being received at Miss Louisiana Pageant Ticket Sales, P.O. Box 8, Monroe.

Miss Mary Ann Mobley, Miss America 1959 and Miss Mississippi 1958, will serve as Mistress of ceremonies for the pageant which will feature performances by four visiting beauty queens and 3 contestants.

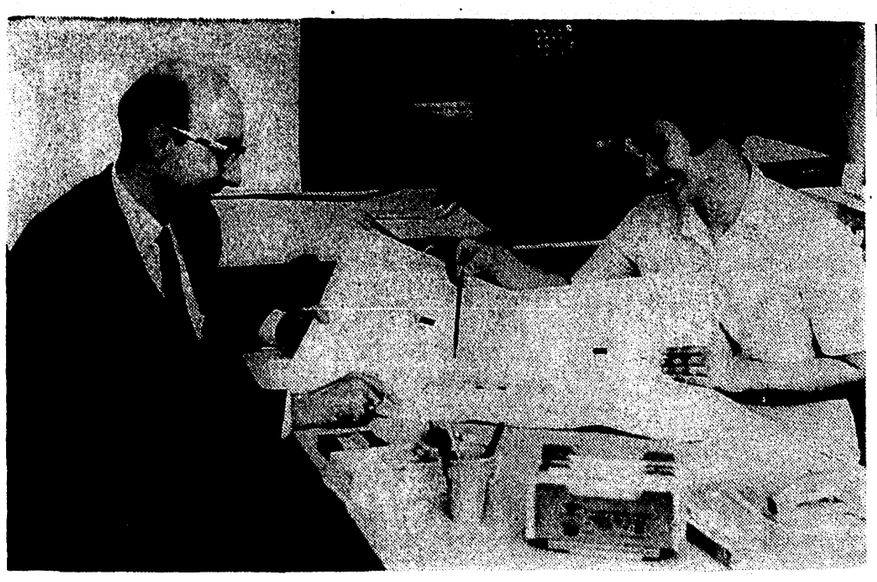
The four visiting queens are Miss Mississippi 1966, Robbie Robertson; Miss Arizona, Bea Willis; Miss Tangipahoa 1966, Donna Fields; and Miss Greater New Orleans 1966, Barbara Bollinger.

The pageant judges will have all varieties of Louisiana Beauties from which to choose. The contestants range from the Cajun dark - haired, dark - eyed, olive complexioned Miss Lafayette, to auburn-haired, green-eyed Miss North Caddo, to blonde, blue - eyed Miss Franklin Parish. They represent cities, parishes, colleges and organizations.

The girls vary in height from 5'11" Miss Patterson to 5'2" Miss Ouachita, and in age from the 24-year-old Soybean Queen to several girls not quite 18.

Several of the girls, Miss Louisiana, Watermelon, the Louisiana Soybean Queen, Cotton Queen and Stockshow Queen have participated in the pageant in former years.

Pageant goers will have a chance to view the contestants each night of the preliminary judging, and area residents may take their pick at the "Parade of Beauties" through downtown Monroe and West Monroe Saturday, July 1 at 2 p.m



TICKET SALES are moving quickly for the Miss Louisiana Pageant which opens in Monroe next week. Roy Post, Jaycee ticket sales chairman, goes over the seating arrangement at Neville auditorium, where the pageant will be held Wednesday through Saturday, July 1, with Alice Burderux. Tickets are being sold at the pageant headquarters, 347 DeSiard.

Kosygin On TV

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Broadcasting Co. said Saturday it would carry the news conference by Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin on live television at p.m. EDT Sunday.

The Columbia Broadcasting System and the National Broadcasting Co. said decisions were expected later today on whether the news conference would be carried live or on tape at a later hour.

Many View World-Wide TV Program

LONDON (AP)— The world's biggest television show—with a global audience of nearly 500 million—added a prize final item Saturday: Live shots of the U.S. Soviet summit meeting in Glassboro, N.J. today.

It is "Our World", the first live round - the-world television program, to which 13 countries will be contributing and at least 25 receiving.

Leading men at the British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC) will be its editors and switch-pullers. The show starts at 2:55 p.m. EDT.

And although the Soviet Union withdrew from the program for political reasons this week, Moscow may be contributing one of its stars in Premier Alexei N. Kosygin who will be meeting again with President Johnson.

Moscow and some of its East European allies based their withdrawal from the historic two-hour program on allegations some Western contributors were being unfair to Arab states, losers in the recent Middle East War, and spoiling the project's "original humanitarian idea." But since then Czechoslovakia, which backed out as a contributor, has been seeking to catch on as a receiver, BBC officials said.

The Paris market section of Les Halles dates back to 1110, says the National Geographic.

Dodd Censure Puts End To Long Action

WASHINGTON — The Senate censure of Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., put an unhappy end to Sen. Russell B. Long's imitation of a white knight in shining armor, riding to the defense of his friend.

Over a month ago, Long stunned the public, horrified his staff, and shocked Senate leaders by announcing he thought Dodd was innocent of any wrongdoing and that Long would defend the Connecticut Democrat to the bitter end.

After 10 days of hard debate, sleepless nights, and constant working, Long can wearily say he has done exactly that.

Dodd faced censure on two ethics committee charges: He diverted into his personal account about $116,000 in funds News Perspective No 5 Benday Box raised at political testimonial dinners; he double-billed the government and private organizations for travel expenses of trips he took from 1961-65.

If Dodd gains any consolation from the Senate's acquiting him of the double - billing charge, he can thank Long for it.

It is most probable that had not Long stepped into the case, the Senate would have disposed of the matter by censuring on both counts within a few days back in May.

But Long was out to see that Dodd got as fair a trial as he could get, and forced the Senate to hear and re-hear all the facts of the matter, which the body would probably have preferred to push under the rug silently and swiftly.

It was Long who asked for the quorum calls to get members into the chamber to hear the defense. It was Long who sometimes offended colleagues in demanding that Dodd's parliamentary rights as he saw them be observed.

While Dodd approached the Senate on bended knee, Long made a fight of it all the way, sometimes in the crude and abrasive manner typical of the man.

Long, near the end of the debate, told the Senate this was all done from the loyalty he had learned as a child. It was the simple loyalty of a man who feels a friend is being done a great injustice.

Long comes away from the Dodd issue with a slightly tarnished stature. He will probably have to mend a few fences in Louisiana, and has injured his chances of ever becoming the Senate majority leader, if, indeed, he wants the job.

But Long's defense of Dodd, while sometimes flamboyant and repetitious, was well - done under the circumstances.

At the very least, there will be members who remember that Long stood by his friend in the time of greatest need, even though he was only one of 100.

The knight in shining armor routine didn't save Dodd, but it proved that Long is not afraid to stand up for what he believes, right or wrong, no matter what the odds.

Authorities To Backtrack On Murders

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (UPI) — Authorities Saturday tried to determine if a tatooed Texan being held in connection with the murders of two men and a woman killed three other persons as he claims.

Authorities backtracked the trail of Hubert B. McClelland, 42, Beaumont, Tex., from Iowa to Texas and looked for a new car he drove in hopes of gaining clues to his story.

McClelland is charged with slaying Mrs. Gladys Schwab, 53, Belle Plaine, Iowa, on a country road Wednesday night. McClelland also is charged with shooting to death Leland Skogg.

Other Communist nations reported the meeting with terse stories and no editorial comment, apparently waiting until the Kremlin had evaluated the final results of the talks.

Soviet citizens got only a brief, two paragraph report of the meeting from the government news agency Tass.

Communist Cuba published several brief stories in the government controlled press, but not on the front pages.

The Rome daily "Il Tempo" editorialized that the meeting of Kosygin and Johnson was a blow to Charles de Gaulle's hopes for resolving the Middle East crisis in a four-way meeting that would include Britain and France.

Commission Study Shows U.S. In For More Crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — The President's crime commission issude its final report Saturday night—and accompanied it with a warning that the nation can "expect increasing amounts of reported crime for the next several years."

The warning came from Undersecretary of State Nicholas Katnzenbach, chairman of the commission, who said, "New and more effective measures of crime prevention and control are urgently needed."

In its final report, the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice issues an urgent plea for the establishment of a National Criminal Justice Statistics Center as an effective beginning in the fight against crime.

The commission found present statistics inadequate and often misleading. "Without the kind of information that can only be obtained through such a center," the commission said, "the country is doomed to continue its fight against crime without really knowing its enemy."

The commission calls Negro ghetto riots—such as the five-day Watts eruption in 1965—a "cry for help" to eliminate the deprivations of ghetto life.

James Vorenberg, commission executive director, said at a briefing for newsmen on the final report that the whole movement to do something about crime is hanging in the balance on the Johnson administration's proposed anticrime legislation.

Vorenberg referred to the law enforcement and criminal justice bill which, before House Republicans forced a change in the name was the "safe streets and crime control" bill. It would provide $50 million the first year for grants to cities and states to help improve crime control.

The measure has been favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee and now is awaiting action on the House floor, probably sometime after the July 4 holiday.

If Congress passes that act it will be an ample continuation of the crime commission's work, Vorenberg said, but "if they don't, a large part of the commission's work will have gone to waste."

Vorenberg described the commission's final report—"Crime and its Impact—An Assessment"—as more an attempt to give as clear a picture as possible of the nation's crime problem than as an attempt to recommend solutions.

Katzenbach, in a statement that accompanied the report, ticks off these reasons as accounting in part for the increasing volume and rate of crime:

—A much larger percentage of the population is in its teens and early twenties, "the high-risk ages for involvement in crime."

—"Greatly increased concentration of our population in the cities where crime rates have usually been highest."

—"The growing sense of deprivation and frustration of segregated minority group members who are keenly aware of the opportunities of an affluent society, but are denied access to them."

—"Part of the increase in reported crime is also due to the fact that the system of crime reporting is steadily improving."

Cuban Papers Ignore Summit

HAVANA (UPI) — Cuban newspapers gave little space Saturday to the summit meeting of Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and President Johnson.

El Mundo carried a brief article on an inside page, mentioning the two planned to meet again today. The newspaper Granma published a similar dispatch an done picture.

Observers said the reaction indicated the Cuban government's dissatisfaction with the Soviet Union's position during the Middle East war.

Commission Study Shows U.S. In For More Crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — The President's crime commission issude its final report Saturday night—and accompanied it with a warning that the nation can "expect increasing amounts of reported crime for the next several years."

The warning came from Undersecretary of State Nicholas Katuzenbach, chairman of the commission, who said, "New and more effective measures of crime prevention and control are urgently needed."

In its final report, the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice issues an urgent plea for the establishment of a National Criminal Justice Statistics Center as an effective beginning in the fight against crime.

The commission found present statistics inadequate and often misleading. "Without the kind of information that can only be obtained through such a center," the commission said, "the country is doomed to continue its fight against crime without really knowing its enemy."

The commission calls Negro ghetto riots—such as the five-day Watts eruption in 1965—a "cry for help" to eliminate the deprivations of ghetto life.

James Vorenberg, commission executive director, said at a briefing for newsmen on the final report that the whole movement to do something about crime is hanging in the balance on the Johnson administration's proposed anticrime legislation.

Vorenberg referred to the law enforcement and criminal justice bill which, before House Republicans forced a change in the name was the "safe streets and crime control" bill. It would provide $50 million the first year for grants to cities and states to help improve crime control.

The measure has been favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee and now is awaiting action on the House floor, probably sometime after the July 4 holiday.

If Congress passes that act it will be an ample continuation of the crime commission's work, Vorenberg said, but "if they don't, a large part of the commission's work will have gone to waste."

Vorenberg described the commission's final report—"Crime and its Impact—An Assessment"—as more an attempt to give as clear a picture as possible of the nation's crime problem than as an attempt to recommend solutions.

Katzenbach, in a statement that accompanied the report, ticks off these reasons as accounting in part for the increasing volume and rate of crime:

—A much larger percentage of the population is in its teens and early twenties, "the high-risk ages for involvement in crime."

—"Greatly increased concentration of our population in the cities where crime rates have usually been highest."

—"The growing sense of deprivation and frustration of segregated minority group members who are keenly aware of the opportunities of an affluent society, but are denied access to them."

—"Part of the increase in reported crime is also due to the fact that the system of crime reporting is steadily improving."

Cuban Papers Ignore Summit

HAVANA (UPI) — Cuban newspapers gave little space Saturday to the summit meeting of Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and President Johnson.

El Mundo carried a brief article on an inside page, mentioning the two planned to meet again today. The newspaper Granma published a similar dispatch an done picture.

Observers said the reaction indicated the Cuban government's dissatisfaction with the Soviet Union's position during the Middle East war.

Many New Books Added To Library

By FRANCES FLANDERS,
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Hundreds of new books are being added to the collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library each week. Today my column will be devoted to new books in the field of art and literature. A beautiful and inforative book is "French Art, 1350-1850" edited by Michel Laclotte. The illustrations are good and the text is well-written. "The Arts in Americal the Colonial period" edited by Louis B. Wright is a very fine study of colonial art in our country. David Aaron and Bonnie Winawer are the author of "Child's Play", a very interesting approach to the need of playgrounds for today's children. John Ely Burchard is the author of "The Architecture of America" which is a social and cultural history of our country as protrayed in it's architecture. "European and American Arms" by Claude Blair is a well illustrated history of arms used in Europe and America in the years from 1100 to 1850. "Colonial Ironwork in Old Philadelphis" by Philip B. Wallace is a fascinating book showing the work of the master craftsmen who lived in that city during and immediaterly after the American Revolution. "Decorating your Home With Photographs" by Wayne Floyd will be interesting to the decorator, and to the homemaker who wants to use family photographs effectively.

There are many camera enthusiasts in Ouachita Parish and we have several good new books for them. "Darkroom Magic" by Otto Litzel should be very useful. Michael arin is the author of "Successful Weding Photography" which should certainly be in demand at this time of year. "Practical portrait photography for Home and Studio" is an extremely useful book by Edwin A. Falk. Musicians will be interested in "The Life and Death of Tin Pan Alley" by David Ewen. This book discusses the golden age in American popular music. For the sports enthusiast there is a fascinating new book "There's A Fox in the Spinney" written by Stuart Rose. This consists of the author's memories of fox hunting, racing and publishing books.

There are a variety of new books in the literature category. "Worlds to Come" by Damon Knight is a fascinating collection of nine science fiction stories. "In Defense of Historical Literature" by David Levin is a fine dissertation on the art of historiography and should be useful to history and literature students. Ther are several new books of poetry: "Poems of James Dickey, 1957-1967" is a compilation of the work of a modern poet. "Trees and Other Poems" by Joyce Kilmer is a collection of the works of a young poet who was killed in World War I, but whose works are immortal. "The Poetry of the Negro, 1746-1949" is an anthology of poems written by negroes in the years from 1746 to 1949. It is edited by Langston Hughes and Arne Bontemps. An outstanding literary event is the publication of "By-Line: Ernest Hemingway" a life time collection of non-fiction writings of Ernest Hemingway as a reporter. Particularly good are his articles from Spain before and during the Spanish Civil War. Every student of Hemingway will want to read this book. Another interesting collection is "The Complete Essays of Mark Twain". This is the first time that all of his essays have appeared in a single volume. A lovely quiet book of day by day living in the country is "Stillmeadow Calendar" written by Gladys Taber. "Collected Poems of Douglas Keith" is an interesting volume by a modern English poet. A Walton Litz is the author of "Jane Austinl a study of her artistic development". This book will be used extensively by students. Another book for literature students is "The Charles Dickens Companion" by John Michael Drinkrow.

Two men reference books are available in this group of books. "The World of Vermeer, 1632-1675" by Hans Koningsberger is another volume in the Lime-Life Library of Art. "Encyclopedia of Poetry and Poetics" edited by Alex Preminger is a poetical dictionary and also contains much valuable critical material.

The Main Library will be open this afternoon from 2:00 to 5:00. Come out and examine some of these interesting books.

Mississippi Senate Faces Hectic Week

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The Mississippi Senate faces a hectic week with a four-bill package of legislation to bring a shipyard to the Gulf Coast and a hearing-investigation against a senator charged with bribery.

The House passed Gov. Paul Johnson's shipyard package in a sudden and unexpected burst Friday afternoon and released the measures to the Senate Saturday.

The Senate returns Monday at 10 a.m. and is expected to try to attempt quick action on the package so the two houses can begin conferring on amendments when the House returns at 2 p.m. Tuesday.

The Senate indicted it would lke to take a break before returning Friday at 9 a.m. to consider bribery charges against Sen. W. M. Jones of Brookhaven.

Jones was charged by a General Legislative Investigating Committee with accepting a $2,500 kickback from three contractors involved in a project at Alcorn A&M College.

This will be the first such hearing in 57 years. The last was when then Sen. Theodore Bilbo was accused, but acquitted of accepting a $645 bribe.

On the bond issue the Senate passed one of the package's four bills but amended it in six places. The bill passed unanimously, however.

There appeared to be less opposition than expected to the proposed $130 million full faith and credit bond issue to finance the giant shipyard.

The problem now seems to be agreement between the House and Senate on exactly how the bills should be worded.

Litton Industries asked for the bond issue to build an automated shipyard on the west bank of the Pascagoula River. The yard would be a sister to the Litton owned Ingalls yard on the East bank.

In addition to the bond issue bill there are three companion bills. One would appropriate $4 million of state money to aid in site development and dredging of a 40 foot channel to the yard.

Another would authorize the Agricultural & Industrial Board to spend the $4 million and allow Jackson County to add an additional $7 million to the preliminary work.

A third bill would authorize Jackson County to transfer title of the lands to the state.

The bills met virtually no opposition in the House.

Gov. Paul Johnson watched the legislators at work Saturday and commented on the lack of opposition saying "this is real fine. . . .I'm quite proud."

Actor's Trial

LUCCA, Italy (AP) — The manslaughter trial of actor William Holden, involved in a fatal highway collision last summer, was postponed Saturday until Oct. 26 to give the prosecution and the defense time to re-evaluate the damage claim.

Deputy Public Prosecutor Angelo Antofermo has asked damages of $128,000 to $160,000. Holden, 49, was charged with manslaughter after his car and an Italian car collided July 26 on a road from Florence to Pisa. The Italian at the wheel of the other car was killed. Holden was uninjured.

Loan To Egypt

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)— Former King Saud of Saudi Arabia, who lives in exile in Egypt, signed an agreement with the Egyptian government Saturday to give Egypt a one-year interest-free loan of $10 million from his personal fortune, Radio Cairo reported. The loan will be used to permit "the import of essential supplies and foodstuffs requiring hard currency," the broadcast said.

Film Boycott

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria has imposed a boycott on all films from the United States, Britain and West Germany on the ground that those countries supported Israel in the June 5-10 Mideast War.

Negroes Try To Defuse 'Powder Keg' In Florida

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Operation Cool Summer, a pilot project designed to stave off race riots by removing the cause, will be launched Monday in this city of 25,000 which Negro leaders call a "powder keg."

The National Association for Advancement of Colored People said Saturday that if the experiment—aimed at placing Negroes in jobs—succeeds, it will be repeated in cities throughout the country in an effort to stem the wave of racial violence.

But if it fails, said Florida's NAACP field director, Marvin Davies, Fort Myers could go the way of Tampa, where Negroes rioted for three nights early this month.

City officials deny that the racial situtation in Fort Myers is as explosive as it is pictured by Negroes, but Davies said the city had made little progress in race relations and "any incident could set this thing off."

"We predicted a long, hot summer," Davies said, "and it appears to have become a reality. But things are not hopeless. If people will cooperate with us, Fort Myers can have a cool summer.

"If the project works here, it could prove an effective instrument to prevent disorders everywhere."

The operation, proposed by Davies and approved by NAACP national headquarters as a test project, will be aimed at getting Negroes off the streets and into jobs.

An intensive drive which Davies said would involve 90 per cent of Negro youths over 16 years of age will start Monday with a total survey of available job opportunities.

Then a concerted campaign will be launched to place Negroes who can qualify and to train others who cannot.

"The community should meet these young people halfway," Davies said, "because the white man has more to lose than the Negro.

"They talk about how bad we are when we get into riots. We are saying to them that if you don't want riots, give us jobs. This is the cry of the Negro everywhere.

"We have made strides in civil rights, but too many Negroes are on the street corners because they have no jobs."

Mass meetings are scheduled every night next week at which Negroes will fill out job questionnaires and be taught how to improve their personal appearance and how to approach employers. Training classes will be started for those not qualified. Employers will be invited to talk about their needs.

Davies said the City Commission had agreed to cooperate and the County Commission was expected to follow suit. There now are no Negroes in responsible jobs in the City Hall or the courthouse complex.

Some employers have refused to hire Negroes, he added, and "this program is designed to produce quick action. We intend to tackle this problem forcefully."

Ansley Reed Elected To State Post

Seven representatives of the Northeast Chapter of the Magnolia State Peace Officers Association of Louisiana recently attended the organization's annual state convention in Opelousas.

During the four day meet June 18 - 21, John Rapheal, New Orleans police department, was elected president Ansley Reed, of the Monroe police department was chosen as the group's vice - president.

Reed said the Northeast chapter's objective for the coming year will be to attempt to support a little league basball team in the area, sponsor a youth to Bayou Bay's State, and issue grants to deserving students. In addition to local group, Reed said, will seek to contribute to charitable organizations, sponsor benefit programs, and continue in their effort to create a more pleasant image of the law enforcement officer.

Reed said the group's 1968 state convention will be held sometime during June of next year in Monroe.

Grandson Of Couple Here Killed

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Wassan of West Monroe were informed Saturday that their grandson, U. S. Marine Cpl. Kenneth Lee Wassan of Holden and formerly of West Monroe, was among the 22 marines killed in a two-copter collision Friday near Jacksonville, N. C.

Cpl. Wassan, who would have been 21 on Aug. 13, was stationed at Camp Lejeune near the New River Marine Air Facility of the Cherry Point Air Station where the tragedy occurred at 9:02 a.m. He was the son of the late A. L. Wassan of West Monroe.

The cause of the accident which was termed by Marine officials "the worst tragedy in the history of the helicopter troop training program," was still unknown Saturday night.

Both choppers were on a routine training mission at the time of the firey crash. One, a CH-53-A "Sea Stallion," carried 20 of its 33 occupants to their deaths, and the two pilots of the smaller HU-IE, "Huey," were also killed. The "Sea Stallion," pilots escaped with only minor injuries.

Six of the 13 survivors of the crash remained hospitalized at Camp Lejeune today, with three listed in critical condition.

The air facility will hold memorial services Monday at 4 p.m. at the base chapel.

Cpl. Wassan, a native of West Monroe, attended West Monroe High School but was graduated from Holden High School in 1965. After graduation, he attended Louisiana Tech in Ruston while living with his grandparents in West Monroe. He was a journalism major at Tech.

He enlisted in the Marines at the Monroe recruiting station in February of 1966. He was stationed in North Carolina for helicopter training to be used in Vietnam.

Cpl. Wassan had been scheduled to return to West Monroe on leave next month before shipping out for his tour in the Vietnamese war.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete pending the arrival of the body.

Survivors besides his paternal grandparents include his mother, Mrs. Clara M. Sullivan of Holden; maternal grandmother, Mrs. Nellie Williams of Baton Rouge; maternal grandfather, J. H. Saucier, also of Baton Rouge; and one brother, Jimmy Wassan of Holden.

Texas has 25 Air Force bases, most in the San Antonio area.

CHANDLER, Ariz. AP—Mrs. Henry L. Dunn almost drove through a stop sign a block from her home when she saw the anniversary gift from her husband who is in the Army in Vietnam.

It was a billboard 10 by 25 feet, stating:

"Wanda. Happy 12th anniversay. I love you. Lee."

Capt. Dunn had written to a sign company in nearby Mesa ordering the sign, and the company insisted on doing the work free of charge.

Company officials called Mrs. Dunn Friday to tell her the anniversary gift was ready but didn't say what it was. Dunn had written his wife saying he planned something different for their details.

Loses Cap

A small mattress fire Saturday on the 7th floor of the Frances Hotel seemingly claimed more than a portion of the hotel's bedding.

Monroe fireman, Dolan Jackson of the city's No. 4 fire station reported he had lost his cap as he rode the city's snorkel fire truck to the site of the downtown alarm.

Jackson said the cap took flight somewhere in the 2600 or 2700 block of Jackson St.

The capless fireman said he would appreciate it if the finder would return the lost helmet to the No. 4 station.

Group Wants To Release Information

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A congressional subcommittee, convinced the federal government is sitting on a wealth of information that would be a boon to consumers, has launched a drive to make the data public.

Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., has announced that his special consumers subcommittee would hold hearings Tuesday and Wednesday to question officials of several federal agencies.

The subcommittee wants to know why the federal government can't share with the American taxpayer the information it has gathered while testing products and amassing statistics. As the world's largest consumer and history's greatest collector of facts, the federal government is in the unique position of knowing more about the marketplace than anyone else.

The Rostenthal subcommittee is not asking the federal government to state for the record that brand "A" is a better buy than brand "B."

Negroes Try To Defuse 'Powder Keg' In Florida

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Operation Cool Summer, a pilot project designed to stave off race riots by removing the cause, will be launched Monday in this city of 25,000 which Negro leaders call a "powder keg."

The National Association for Advancement of Colored People said Saturday that if the experiment—aimed at placing Negroes in jobs—succeeds, it will be repeated in cities throughout the country in an effort to stem the wave of racial violence.

But if it fails, said Florida's NAACP field director, Marvin Davies, Fort Myers could go the way of Tampa, where Negroes rioted for three nights early this month.

City officials deny that the racial situtation in Fort Myers is as explosive as it is pictured by Negroes, but Davies said the city had made little progress in race relations and "any incident could set this thing off."

"We predicted a long, hot summer," Davies said, "and it appears to have become a reality. But things are not hopeless. If people will cooperate with us, Fort Myers can have a cool summer.

"If the project works here, it could prove an effective instrument to prevent disorders everywhere."

The operation, proposed by Davies and approved by NAACP national headquarters as a test project, will be aimed at getting Negroes off the streets and into jobs.

An intensive drive which Davies said would involve 90 per cent of Negro youths over 16 years of age will start Monday with a total survey of available job opportunities.

Then a concerted campaign will be launched to place Negroes who can qualify and to train others who cannot.

"The community should meet these young people halfway," Davies said, "because the white man has more to lose than the Negro.

"They talk about how bad we are when we get into riots. We are saying to them that if you don't want riots, give us jobs. This is the cry of the Negro everywhere.

"We have made strides in civil rights, but too many Negroes are on the street corners because they have no jobs."

Mass meetings are scheduled every night next week at which Negroes will fill out job questionnaires and be taught how to improve their personal appearance and how to approach employers. Training classes will be started for those not qualified. Employers will be invited to talk about their needs.

Davies said the City Commission had agreed to cooperate and the County Commission was expected to follow suit. There now are no Negroes in responsible jobs in the City Hall or the courthouse complex.

Some employers have refused to hire Negroes, he added, and "this program is designed to produce quick action. We intend to tackle this problem forcefully."

Ansley Reed Elected To State Post

Seven representatives of the Northeast Chapter of the Magnolia State Peace Officers Association of Louisiana recently attended the organization's annual state convention in Opelousas.

During the four day meet June 18 - 21, John Rapheal, New Orleans police department, was elected president Ansley Reed, of the Monroe police department was chosen as the group's vice - president.

Reed said the Northeast chapter's objective for the coming year will be to attempt to support a little league basball team in the area, sponsor a youth to Bayou Bay's State, and issue grants to deserving students. In addition to local group, Reed said, will seek to contribute to charitable organizations, sponsor benefit programs, and continue in their effort to create a more pleasant image of the law enforcement officer.

Reed said the group's 1968 state convention will be held sometime during June of next year in Monroe.

Those area officers attending the meet were: Joseph G. Poe, Monroe police; Levis T. Jackson, Grambling police; Huey Daily, D. L. Williams and Howard Claxton, all of the Tallulah police; and Fred Davis, of the West Monroe police department.

The Gallup Report

Lack Of Funds Holds Back Office Seekers

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N. J., June 24, — The current debate on how best to pay for political campaigns has brought out one important fact. At a time when the nation needs its ablest men to chart its course, the costs of campaigning are so high that only the very rich can afford to become candidates. If the candidate isn't lucky enough to be rich, then he is forced to seek sizable contributions from persons and organizations who all too often expect and demand political favors in return.

Evidence that an extraordinary number of men of high character and ability would like to run for office — if they were asked and if they did not have to worry about campaign expenses — has been systematically gathered by the Gallup Poll.

It has been estimated that in congressional districts where races are tightly contested, a candidate for the House of Representatives must spend between $50,000 and $100,000. Some compaigns in recent years have cost far more, and the trend in spending is constantly upward.

By way of contrast, a candidate for a seat in Parliament in Great Britain is limited by law to an expenditure that ranges between $2,000 and $3,000 depending upon the number of voters in the constituency where he runs. Each candidate has the right to send one mailing to the voters with free postage.

Persons of greatest distinction in the United States are listed in Who's Who. To discover how many of these individuals would look favorably upon service in elective office, this question was put to a representative sample of the 61,967 individuals listed:

"If a committee came to you and asked you to run on your party's ticket for the United States Senate, and offered to pay all campaign expenses, do you think you would accept?"

Nearly one person in every four replied in the afirmative. Many of those who replied in the negative were over sixty and commented that they would like to run if younger.

Outstanding persons listed in Who's Who represent every profession — teaching, journalism, law, clergy, science, medicine.

To discover the attitude of America's top executives, including the presidents and board chairmen of some of the nation's largest companies, a special survey was made of this group to see how top management regards politics and campaigning.

When the same question was put to this group the results show that about one person in five (18 per cent) would be interested in running for the U.S. Senate if all campaign expenses were paid.

Limit Campaign Expenses?

Key to the problem of controlling campaign expenditures is an upper limit on the total amount that can be spent. Although many persons in politics say that fixing an upper limit is "unrealistic," no one can deny that as long as candidates can spend all they wish, competition to outdo each other will continue despite laws that require detailed accounting of expenditures and contributions.

Limitations placed upon contributors have been notably unsuccessful in the United States. When an upper limit was placed upon the amount that any committee could give, candidates merely created new committees. Present laws prohibit corporations and labor unions from making contributions to parties, but these laws are ignored despite the public's views that they should be observed.

The public agrees that a top limit should be placed on the expense as evidenced by the results of a recent survey covering this point: The question asked was:

"Would you favor or oppose a law which would put a limit on the total amount of money which can be spent for or by a candidate in his campaign for public office?"

	%
Yes	73
No	16
No opinion	11

A survey made a year ago showed almost exactly the same result:

1966

	%
Yes	72
No	18
No opinion	10

In Great Britain a law controls the total amount that candidates for parliament can spend and is closely observed by those running for this office.

New Ways To Cut Expenses

The problem of most candidates, and especially those new to public life, is to become known to the voters. Vast sums are spent on television and radio advertising, and in the public press, to achieve this end.

To help defray these costs in the case of presidential candidates. President Johnson has recommended Federal subsidies to pay major costs.

The public believes that television and radio stations, as a condition to holding their franchises, should be required to give free time to candidates during election years. A proposal advanced in recent days by Senator Clark of Pennsylvania would require TV and radio to give this free time.

A second way of cutting costs of campaigning is also approved by the public. This is a plan now followed by the state of Oregon, where a pamphlet is distributed free to all voters. One page is given to each candidate where he can state his reasons as to why he should be elected.

When this same plan was presented to the public, a majority expressed approval. The question and results:

"To reduce the cost of running for Congress, it has been suggested that the government print and distribute free a pamphlet dealing with the qualifications and views of each candidate, prepared in standard form. The pamphlet would be mailed to all households in each district. Do you think this would be a good idea, or a poor idea?"

	%
Good idea	57
Poor idea	33
No opinion	11

A third way of cutting costs would be to make greater use of volunteer workers.

Survey findings show that:

(1) An estimated 32 million people say they would be willing to work as a volunteer for their party.

(2) An estimated 20 million families would be willing to contribute $5 to the compaign fund of the political party they perfer during the coming campaign.

The Gallup Report

Lack Of Funds Holds Back Office Seekers

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N. J., June 24, — The current debate on how best to pay for political campaigns has brought out one important fact. At a time when the nation needs its ablest men to chart its course, the costs of campaigning are so high that only the very rich can afford to become candidates. If the candidate isn't lucky enough to be rich, then he is forced to seek sizable contributions from persons and organizations who all too often expect and demand political favors in return.

Evidence that an extraordinary number of men of high character and ability would like to run for office — if they were asked and if they did not have to worry about campaign expenses — has been systematically gathered by the Gallup Poll.

It has been estimated that in congressional districts where races are tightly contested, a candidate for the House of Representatives must spend between $50,000 and $100,000. Some compaigns in recent years have cost far more, and the trend in spending is constantly upward.

By way of contrast, a candidate for a seat in Parliament in Great Britain is limited by law to an expenditure that ranges between $2,000 and $3,000 depending upon the number of voters in the constituency where he runs. Each candidate has the right to send one mailing to the voters with free postage.

Persons of greatest distinction in the United States are listed in Who's Who. To discover how many of these individuals would look favorably upon service in elective office, this question was put to a representative sample of the 61,967 individuals listed:

"If a committee came to you and asked you to run on your party's ticket for the United States Senate, and offered to pay all campaign expenses, do you think you would accept?"

Nearly one person in every four replied in the afirmative. Many of those who replied in the negative were over sixty and commented that they would like to run if younger.

Outstanding persons listed in Who's Who represent every profession — teaching, journalism, law, clergy, science, medicine.

To discover the attitude of America's top executives, including the presidents and board chairmen of some of the nation's largest companies, a special survey was made of this group to see how top management regards politics and campaigning.

When the same question was put to this group the results show that about one person in five (18 per cent) would be interested in running for the U.S. Senate if all campaign expenses were paid.

Limit Campaign Expenses?

Key to the problem of controlling campaign expenditures is an upper limit on the total amount that can be spent. Although many persons in politics say that fixing an upper limit is "unrealistic," no one can deny that as long as candidates can spend all they wish, competition to outdo each other will continue despite laws that require detailed accounting of expenditures and contributions.

Limitations placed upon contributors have been notably unsuccessful in the United States. When an upper limit was placed upon the amount that any committee could give, candidates merely created new committees. Present laws prohibit corporations and labor unions from making contributions to parties, but these laws are ignored despite the public's views that they should be observed.

The public agrees that a top limit should be placed on the expense as evidenced by the results of a recent survey covering this point: The question asked was:

"Would you favor or oppose a law which would put a limit on the total amount of money which can be spent for or by a candidate in his campaign for public office?"

	%
Yes	73
No	16
No opinion	11

A survey made a year ago showed almost exactly the same result:

1966

	%
Yes	72
No	18
No opinion	10

In Great Britain a law controls the total amount that candidates for parliament can spend and is closely observed by those running for this office.

New Ways To Cut Expenses

The problem of most candidates, and especially those new to public life, is to become known to the voters. Vast sums are spent on television and radio advertising, and in the public press, to achieve this end.

To help defray these costs in the case of presidential candidates, President Johnson has recommended Federal subsidies to pay major costs.

The public believes that television and radio stations, as a condition to holding their franchises, should be required to give free time to candidates during election years. A proposal advanced in recent days by Senator Clark of Pennsylvania would require TV and radio to give this free time.

A second way of cutting costs of campaigning is also approved by the public. This is a plan now followed by the state of Oregon, where a pamphlet is distributed free to all voters. One page is given to each candidate where he can state his reasons as to why he should be elected.

When this same plan was presented to the public, a majority expressed approval. The question and results:

"To reduce the cost of running for Congress, it has been suggested that the government print and distribute free a pamphlet dealing with the qualifications and views of each candidate, prepared in standard form. The pamphlet would be mailed to all households in each district. Do you think this would be a good idea, or a poor idea?"

	%
Good idea	57
Poor idea	33
No opinion	11

A third way of cutting costs would be to make greater use of volunteer workers.

Survey findings show that:

(1) An estimated 32 million people say they would be willing to work as a volunteer for their party.

(2) An estimated 20 million families would be willing to contribute $5 to the compaign fund of the political party they perfer during the coming campaign.

Shot in the middle of the forehead from a gun his father is accused of firing, a Monroe man disappeared twice Saturday while receiving treatment for the minor wound.

Investigating Monroe police said Mike Townsend has been treated at both St. Francis and E. A. Conway Memorial Hospitals for the same wound and had slipped away from doctors at both emergency rooms.

While at St. Francis doctors removed a .32 pistol bullet from Townsend's forehead, police said.

Shortly after leaving Conway Memorial the 46 - year - old Townsend was discovered at his mother's house in West Monroe apparently not seriously suffering from the pistol wound.

Officers arrested Townsend's father, Tom Townsend, 79, 112 N. 8th St., about noon Saturday.

Police charged the injured man's father with aggravated battery in connection with the shooting which officers said stemmed from a family argument at the father's home.

American Wives In Vietnam Face Variety Of Problems

Monroe Morning World
Sunday Features
Editorials — Spotlight
Monroe, La., June 25, 1967 1-B

The American Consulate in Saigon lists 249 American wives in Vietnam — wives of diplomats, businessmen, missionaries and newsmen. One of these is Joyce Nance, wife of AP newsman John Nance. She has kept house in Saigon for more than a year, and while she finds it possible to adapt to soaring prices, physical inconvenience and the grim atmosphere of war, one of the worst problems is not keeping busy enough; husband and wife togetherness is a sometime thing.

By JOYCE NANCE
Written For The Associated Press

SAIGON (AP) — When bomb blasts rattle the windows, when the electricity is off, when the water taps give forth only a few drops at a time, when her husband is running around the jungle somewhere—well, an American wife may find housekeeping in Saigon unnerving. But once the initial shock wears off and she learns to adjust to a few hundred irregularities, life can become tolerable, even enjoyable—at least to the adaptable.

Of course, she never gets used to the occasional long - planned dinner that abruptly ends with the appetizer, leaving wives to mumble amidst the candlelight as husbands dash out in response to sudden telephone calls men seem to find important.

Yet most wives get accustomed to sirens, low-flying jets and the rumble of artillery in the night, the same as in the United States they get accustomed to—or at least put up with—screaming children, blaring TV, the roaring vacuum cleaner, the washer and the dryer.

MAINLY ADAPTED

In Saigon, however, you can't shut off the noise. And there is always the underlying thought that our noises often mean war. You either adapt, get out or go out of your mind. The few who now remain have mainly adapted.

The everyday business of keeping house calls for plenty of adjustment.

Shopping can be an adventure, or catastrophe, depending on whether the monsoon rain waits until you get home and whether the shopkeepers have pity for your fumbling ways—an unlikely happening.

The fun begins when you try to buy something. First, you are a foreigner, probably American; and second, you don't speak Vietnamese.

Prices become about triple what they are to the Vietnamese.

Haggling without a common language becomes slapstick comedy.

You scribble your offer on a scrap of paper; the merchant scribbles his. Both of you shake heads furiously. You start to stomp off; he calls you back. He writes another figure; you throw up your hands and mark a lesser figure. About this point the merchant unleashes his English; "This numbah! Numbah!"

Buying food is a bit different. By patronizing the same place regularly you can at least standardize your overpayment.

There is no bargaining in the higher class shops. Prices are just high.

American goods, for example, sell for astronomical prices: A can of fruit selling for 35 cents in Chicago goes for 175 piasters or about $1.50. A 45-cent box of soap powder goes up to $1.60; a 15-cent can of pork and beans is 60 cents.

A dinner out in what was once a good French restaurant can easily cost a couple $20 for an ordinary meal, with maddeningly indifferent waiters. A bottle of mediocre wine - all imported - will add another $8 to $14.

Eating at home has its drawbacks, too. Our tiny kitchen, about 5 feet by 5 feet, is one-quarter filled by the bottled gas stove which turns the already sultry room into a sauna bath. The refrigerator takes another quarter of the space but is a big blessing. In the months we did not have one, lugging cakes of dripping ice up four flights of stairs to the apartment was hardly the most pleasant way to start a day.

WATER STORAGE

The apartment, one main high-ceilinged large room divided by a folding screen, is liveable. The bathroom is roomy but jammed with urns, pans, and buckets which we fill with water during the two or three hours a day the water is running. This is not a universal problem, though. Most people have running water most of the time.

Rent for such apartments ranges from the equivalent of $110 a month to $250, depending on the landlord and the need of the tenant. Larger apartments and houses start at about $400 and go up to $1,200. These are for the expense account set.

We are the only Americans in our building. Our Vietnamese neighbors pay, roughly $50 a month.

A happy feature here is that you can get help. Almost all households have a maid. The maid's casual attitude toward work may drive you crazy, but at least she's a maid.

In Vietnam, as everywhere, women like to make the most of their appearance. The heat doesn't help. And the price of cosmetics is high enough to make some women settle for the beatnik look. A well-known brand of fingernail polish costs about $3.50 a bottle. Hair-spray is about $4.00.

SCARCE ITEMS

Ready-made clothes are next to impossible to find in the right sizes. Nearly everything is hand-made. It usually isn't expensive by Western standards.

But good quality fabrics are rare. Even after you have your material, it is not clear sailing. Dressmakers are temperamental. None will work from a pattern even if you provide it; they like pictures from magazines but change anything they think the original designer messed up. That slim little number you had in mind from Yves St. Laurent may come out looking like a maternity housedress.

Getting around these streets can be a major frustration. Traffic is hectic. Drivers of automobile taxis, three-wheel bicycle taxis and motorized three-wheelers all have a sharp eye for a foreigner. Their prices escalate according to how many prospective passengers are on the streets, the weather, and how gullible you appear.

My solution is a bicycle which I peddle almost everywhere I want to go. The bad feature to the bike is that it must be lugged up to our apartment when not in use. At first it was chained to a post in the entrance walkway to the apartment building. After two days it was moved, someone had tried to take the handelbars.

As for danger — the bombings that make headlines, for example — I've found that you can move about fairly freely without undue caution. Of course, in Saigon as in New York, Chicago or San Francisco, there are places you don't go. There are just a few more such places here. And getting any distance outside Saigon is a very touchy matter.

Husbands seem to be working all of the time. To see them a few hours a day is doing pretty well; sometimes it's only a few hours a week.

You must find things to fill the day. With a little imagination and energy the time can be interesting and enjoyable.

There are excellent opportunities for studying languages. The French Cultural Institute has day and evening classes. The Vietnamese American Association offers classes in Vietnamese.

The demand for English teachers is endless. It is not necessary to be a scholar to fill a teaching post and to do a worth - while job.

Volunteer hospital workers are always welcome to read to GIs, play cards or just talk.

NEGOTIATING SAIGON'S hectic traffic is difficult — and costly for foreigners who take taxis, four - or three-wheel variety. Joyce Nance, wife of Associated Press newsman John Nance, solves the problem with an English bicycle. But she has to carry it to and from the Nances' fourth floor apartment in downtown Saigon — as she is doing here. She tried chaining the bike to a post in the building entranceway, but after two days missed a tire, seat and headlight. (AP Newsfeatures Photos)

PRICES ARE special for Americans in the markets of Saigon — especially high. By haggling, American wives, with no common language for the bargaining, can bring down the prices, not to anything close to what the Vietnamese pay, but to perhaps two-thirds of the original asking price. Here Joyce Nance, bargains in sign language with a Vietnamese child over a plastic box at a sidewalk stall near the big central market. The seller asked 30 piasters, Joyce offered 15, and bought at 20.

AMERICAN WIVES IN Vietnam can buy food and other goods from home. A few have access to the military commissary and PX. The others find it via the black market in shops and sidewalk stalls. Prices are astronomical. Here Joyce Nance looks at butter stored in an ice chest at a stand in downtown Saigon. Most of the merchandise in this market is black market goods from the PX.

Liberal Arts College For Policemen Unique

By JERRY BUCK

NEW YORK (AP) — The student arose from his desk, adjusted the pistol at his hip, and began to discuss his homework assignment: "Romeo and Juliet."

The student is a policeman, and he is enrolled in what is thought to be the nation's — and probably the world's — only liberal arts college for policemen, John Jay College of Criminal Justice.

It is a school where the policeman can examine his profession — and search for an understanding of his alienation from the society he is sworn to protect.

The heavy emphasis on liberal arts is no accident.

"These are men who want to know about themselves," said the college president, Leonard E. Reisman. School officials believe that it is this training that will determine a policeman's ultimate worth.

"A policeman's job is a lot more than just walking down the street and trying doorknobs," said Dick Ward, a senior and a patrolman in the detective division of New York's Police Department.

MANY SIDED

"You've got to be doctor, lawyer, psychiatrist, marriage counsellor and father confessor. You've got to be a nice guy on one side of the street and the meanest guy on the other side if you run into trouble. That's part of the job."

This split personality forced upon policemen, and demands heaped upon them to stop an exploding crime rate — while at the same time being more humane and tolerant — have driven a wedge between policemen and society.

"Everybody loves a fireman — but not us," said a student - policeman.

John Jay's faculty comes from both the academic field and the practical side of police work, and sometimes the two are found in a single person. In none is this more true than Reisman, who looks like he might once have been a tough precinct sergeant.

He is, in fact, a former deputy police commissioner, Manhattan assistant district attorney and assistant state attorney general. He once practiced law on Wall Street and for a time taught criminal law at Columbia University and at New York University.

The fledgling college, an outgrowth of the Baruch School program, is housed in the striking marble and glass Police Academy building, a few blocks from Gramercy Park in mid-Manhattan.

Settling into a black leather rocking chair in his office, Reisman said: "There's a growing realization that the police of the future must be college trained. When you recognize that the New York City police budget is over $400 million, you want to see that it's in good professional hands.

"It's quite clear in New York City that you're not going to be able to attract college-trained men in great numbers for many years," he said. "So the police departments must recognize that the way to get college - trained men is to have them attend school after they become policemen."

All but a few of the 1,475 students at John Jay, founded in 1965 as a branch of the City University of New York, are policemen, policewomen, federal agents or correction officers who attend part time. The rest are high school graduates interested in becoming policemen.

Mike Felming, a patrolman for 2½ years, discussed his own feelings of what it means to be a policeman.

"The police department tries to tell you that when someone attacks a policeman, he's attacking the government and not the policeman. But we don't buy that one hundred per cent. The policeman sees so much emotion worked up and aimed at him he knows they're attacking him simply because he is a policeman.

LEARNS TO ENDURE

"But this college program shows us that we're not just soldiers for eight hours. A man becomes reborn into society. He learns to put up with the frustrations that come with the job of being a policeman."

Although the college is geared to the needs of the policemen, it discourages them from attending full time. Only one policeman carried a full schedule in the spring semester.

The fact that the students attend only part time, however, means that it takes eight to 10 years to earn enough credits for graduation. Fleming, 25, figures he won't graduate before 1973.

Not surprisingly, the drama course is designed for policemen. "It traces law and order and civil disobedience through drama," said Ben Termine, who heads the drama program. "After all, what is a play but one man's view of social and moral order?

"'Romeo and Juliet,' for instance, is about a politically oriented society. 'West Side Story' is about an economically oriented society."

Termine, who has directed summer stock and off-Broadway productions, has a critical eye for his policeman-actors. "Part of what makes a good actor is the ability to observe, and policemen are trained to observe. It's an easy transition for them to make."

Acting also has had another fallout effect. Said Dick Ward: "It's taught me to perform in front of an audience — and that's something policemen are called on to do all the time."

When a policeman has to control a crowd or handle an accident he may be as frightened as the next guy, but he can't show it. You may be scared, but you've got to know how to take command of the situation."

General Tackles 'Endless Struggle'

The commander of a task force which spearheaded the Bastogne breakthrough against Nazi armor in World War Two, now is a cigar-chomping general with an important job in Vietnam fighting. Here's a report on Gen. Creighton Abrams, Jr.

By GEORGE McARTHUR

SAIGON (AP) — Creighton Abrams Jr. is a testy, impatient four-star general determined to find out what's wrong, and what's not wrong, in Vietnam. He likens the job to trying to drink all the water from a spouting fire hydrant.

Since being named in April as the top-ranked deputy to Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Abrams has been attacking that fire hydrant 16 hours daily.

One reason for the fast pace is the likelihood that Abrams, the cigar - chomping tankman who broke the Nazi encirclement of Bastogne, soon will move into Westmoreland's paneled office as commander of all U. S. forces in Vietnam.

Headquarters insiders believe that "Westy" after three years in Vietnam, will get a top Pentagon post or some over-all theater command.

IN EVERY DECISION

For 28 months, as Army vice chief of staff, Abrams participated in every decision during America's big buildup. He made four trips to Vietnam as a Pentagon watchdog and knows what President Johnson wants and what the Saigon brass has said it can deliver.

Having fought from Normandy to Czechoslovakia as Gen. George S. Patton's favorite tank commander, Abrams has solid military credentials. Ultimate success here, however, is likely to depend more on patience and understanding of the politico - military complexities of Vietnam.

"You have to eat an elephant bite by bite," Abrams says — one of his favorite sayings.

The rumpled and somewhat burly Abrams, with sometimes Pattonesque profanity, is becoming almost as well known in Vietnam as trimly tailored Westmoreland. Dressed in unstarched fatigues, Abrams crisscrosses the country visiting American and South Vietnamese installations and talking to GIs, generals and even war prisoners.

When he dropped in by helicopter to see his eldest son, Creighton III, an artillery captain with the 1st Division, Abrams spent most of the short visit talking to sergeants and privates.

In Saigon, callers stream into his office. Twice daily he gets a full war-room briefing. At night he goes to a well - guarded villa, shared with two staff generals, and slips into a sports shirt to read stacks of papers. Only occasionally does he get to listen to classical music on the tape recorder he brought with him.

The man-of-action image came early to the young farm boy from Springfield, Mass., who liked football better than books at West Point — where he was a scrappy but unspectacular guard. The senior yearbook called him the "loudest, happiest, fightin'est man on the squad."

His classmate, Westmoreland, was first captain of the Cadet Corps, graduated 112th to Abrams, 185th — in a class of 270 — and got into action before him in World War II. He also got his fourth star a month ahead of Abrams.

In 1936, Abrams got married and went happily off to Ft. Bliss as a second lieutenant in the "horse cavalry."

"It was all horses," he still reminisces. "We rode horses seven days a week. We rode horses, we trained horses and we played polo. The first leave I had, another lieutenant and I even took two horses and rode 150 miles into the mountains."

That ended when Hitler's blitzkrieg doomed the horse cavalry. Abrams found himself in a tank, training for a war he hadn't thought too much about.

HAIR THINNING

The fair hair is thinning now at 53 and the waistline is a bit bulgy. But the eyes glint as he recalls fighting his tank "Thunderbolt" across Europe.

At the outbreak, Abrams joined the 4th Armored Division, which became part of fiery Gen. Patton's famed 3rd Army. Patton found Abrams his kind of tanker, violent and ready to go. Old "Blood and Guts" once said that Abrams, then 29, was his only peer as a tank commander.

When Patton made the abrupt wheeling movement to join the Battle of the Bulge, an intricate maneuver which awed armored tacticians, Abrams was given the task force headed for vital Bastogne. Abrams recalls the breakthrough, certainly one of the war's dramatic moments, almost casually.

It was four days before Christmas 1944, dark and cold. After a day of fighting, the task force had finally smashed through a thinly held wood and along a snow-covered road hastily strewn with German mines. Without fanfare, Abrams pushed through and within half an hour was poring over maps with Brig. Gen. Anthony McAuliffe, the commander who replied "Nuts!" when the Germans asked him to surrender.

At war's end, Abrams had driven the last of a series of tanks named Thunderbolt across Europe and into Czechoslovakia. At 30, the one time 4-H Club member, nicknamed "Tootsie," was a bemedaled full colonel, a recognized armored expert and firmly on the military ladder to the top.

By August 1964, he was Army vice chief of staff in the Pentagon, reading the reports from Saigon.

PROFESSIONAL SHOCK

He acknowledges that the defeat at Dien Bien Phi in 1954, which lost France the curtain raiser to the present war, was a professional shock. He was serving in Korea at the time.

"I couldn't believe that the French could be licked," he says. "I thought they had enough strength, enough forces. In Korea we didn't know much about Vietnam. My understanding of the political problems was zero."

Had the United States been in France's position in 1954, Abrams feels, the same disastrous mistakes would have been made.

Since then, Abrams has paid more attention to the study of political war, reading French and American writers on Vietnam and Algeria and studying the works of Mao Tse-tung, Ernesto Guevara of Cuba and North Vietnam's victor at Dien Bien Phu, Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap.

"What they have done is to develop a highly sophisticated technique of waging war by a thorough integration of political and military methods," he says.

Abrams sees no quick solution for that Communist technique.

Attempting to breathe new life into the South Vietnamese army is now one of Abrams' major areas of responsibility. He thinks the job can be done.

"It can't be done overnight," he warns.

How long will it take?

"If there's one thing I've learned in Vietnam," he says, "it is that you can't lay down a hard and fast blueprint."

American Wives In Vietnam Face Variety Of Problems

The American Consulate in Saigon lists 249 American wives in Vietnam — wives of diplomats, businessmen, missionaries and newsmen. One of these is Joyce Nance, wife of AP newsman John Nance. She has kept house in Saigon for more than a year, and while she finds it possible to adapt to soaring prices, physical inconvenience and the grim atmosphere of war, one of the worst problems is not keeping busy enough; husband and wife togetherness is a sometime thing.

SAIGON (AP) — When bomb blasts rattle the windows, when the electricity is off, when the water taps give forth only a few drops at a time, when her husband is running around the jungle somewhere—well, an American wife may find housekeeping in Saigon unnerving. But once the initial shock wears off and she learns to adjust to a few hundred irregularities, life can become tolerable, even enjoyable—at least to the adaptable.

Of course, she never gets used to the occasional long - planned dinner that abruptly ends with the appetizer, leaving wives to mumble amidst the candlelight as husbands dash out in response to sudden telephone calls men seem to find important.

Yet most wives get accustomed to sirens, low-flying jets and the rumble of artillery in the night, the same as in the United States they get accustomed to—or at least put up with—screaming children, blaring TV, the roaring vacuum cleaner, the washer and the dryer.

MAINLY ADAPTED

In Saigon, however, you can't shut off the noise. And there is always the underlying thought that our noises often mean war. You either adapt, get out or go out of your mind. The few who now remain have mainly adapted.

The everyday business of keeping house calls for plenty of adjustment.

Shopping can be an adventure, or catastrophe, depending on whether the monsoon rain waits until you get home and whether the shopkeepers have pity for your fumbling ways—an unlikely happening.

The fun begins when you try to buy something. First, you are a foreigner, probably American; and second, you don't speak Vietnamese.

Prices become about triple what they are to the Vietnamese.

Haggling without a common language becomes slapstick comedy.

You scribble your offer on a scrap of paper; the merchant scribbles his. Both of you shake heads furiously. You start to stomp off; he calls you back. He writes another figure; you throw up your hands and mark a lesser figure. About this point the merchant unleashes his English; "This numbah! Numbah!"

Buying food is a bit different. By patronizing the same place regularly you can at least standardize your overpayment.

There is no bargaining in the higher class shops. Prices are just high.

American goods, for example, sell for astronomical prices: A can of fruit selling for 35 cents in Chicago goes for 175 piasters or about $1.50. A 45-cent box of soap powder goes up to $1.60; a 15-cent can of pork and beans is 60 cents.

A dinner out in what was once a good French restaurant can easily cost a couple $20 for an ordinary meal, with maddeningly indifferent waiters. A bottle of mediocre wine - all imported - will add another $8 to $14.

Eating at home has its drawbacks, too. Our tiny kitchen, about 5 feet by 5 feet, is one-quarter filled by the bottled gas stove which turns the already sultry room into a sauna bath. The refrigerator takes another quarter of the space but is a big blessing. In the months we did not have one, lugging cakes of dripping ice up four flights of stairs to the apartment was hardly the most pleasant way to start a day.

WATER STORAGE

The apartment, one main high-ceilinged large room divided by a folding screen, is liveable. The bathroom is roomy but jammed with urns, pans, and buckets which we fill with water during the two or three hours a day the water is running. This is not a universal problem, though. Most people have running water most of the time.

Rent for such apartments ranges from the equivalent of $110 a month to $250, depending on the landlord and the need of the tenant. Larger apartments and houses start at about $400 and go up to $1,200. These are for the expense account set.

We are the only Americans in our building. Our Vietnamese neighbors pay, roughly $50 a month.

A happy feature here is that you can get help. Almost all households have a maid. The maid's casual attitude toward work may drive you crazy, but at least she's a maid.

In Vietnam, as everywhere, women like to make the most of their appearance. The heat doesn't help. And the price of cosmetics is high enough to make some women settle for the beatnik look. A well-known brand of fingernail polish costs about $3.50 a bottle. Hair-spray is about $4.00.

SCARCE ITEMS

Ready-made clothes are next to impossible to find in the right sizes. Nearly everything is hand-made. It usually isn't expensive by Western standards.

But good quality fabrics are rare. Even after you have your material, it is not clear sailing. Dressmakers are temperamental. None will work from a pattern even if you provide it; they like pictures from magazines but change anything they think the original designer messed up. That slim little number you had in mind from Yves St. Laurent may come out looking like a maternity housedress.

Getting around these streets can be a major frustration. Traffic is hectic. Drivers of automobile taxis, three-wheel bicycle taxis and motorized three-wheelers all have a sharp eye for a foreigner. Their prices escalate according to how many prospective passengers are on the streets, the weather, and how gullible you appear.

Industrial Progress Noted

A ground breaking ceremony and a dedication at plant locations were held this past week near Ruston in Lincoln Parish and at Oak Grove in West Carroll. Another ceremony is planned Monday in Ruston when the Stowe-Woodward Company's new roll - covering plant will be dedicated.

These welcome activities once again emphasized the progress being made in Northeast Louisiana and the area's bright economic future.

This point was noted by Gov. John McKeithen, guest speaker at both functions the past week when he said what many people have already come to realize — that Northeast Louisiana has the resources, climate, people, and progressive civic, business and public leaders necessary to attract industry.

It would be difficult to state unequivocally the most important factor in a manufacturer's decision to locate in a given place. But there is no doubt that the economic and political atmosphere in this area is meriting more attention from industrialists who want to expand southward.

On last Tuesday, the Lauren Glass Company held ground breaking ceremonies at a site between Ruston and Simsboro, just off Interstate 20. The plant is expected to be in production by 1968 and will employ 100 persons in its inital stage. Company President E. D. Easterby said projected normal growth is expected to raise employment figures to 500 by the early 1970s. The plant will manufacture emerald green glass, flent (clear) glass for the Southwest, and light green glass. There are 31 other Laurens glass plants in the United States. President Easterby said "we are glad to be here," and local officials expressed a mutual sentiment.

In Oak Grove, Gov. McKeithen delivered the dedication address at the recently completed Wells Lamont Corporation glove factory Wednesday afternoon. Seventy - five persons are now employed at the plant. Carroll G. Wells, company vice president, said he expected employment to grow steadily and reach a level of 300 or more in the next few years.

The plant, opened in March, was located in Oak Grove after extended surveys by the parent company in Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas. Vice President Wells said that the company chose the site because "we liked your government, your leaders and the people. . .and you liked us."

The securing of the ultra-modern plant for Oak Grove was the result of a two - and - one - half year effort by state officials, parish officials, and corporation personnel, and was constructed through Louisiana's industry inducement program. This involved a $450,000 bond issue voted by West Carroll taxpayers, $400,000 of which will be repaid by the company.

The Stowe - Woodward Company is a Massachusetts - based industry with seven plants across the nation and abroad. It is the country's largest manufacturer of roll coverings for the paper industry. The new Ruston plant will serve the Gulf South.

Certainly the people of Northeast Louisiana are glad the officials of these three companies included this area in their expansion plans. All will benefit from them.

As more industrial plants and businesses move in or expand, the more Northeast Louisiana will grow.

All three of the plants involved in the mentioned activity will make good neighbors and will be an asset in many ways to our areas.

All officials, local and state, who made possible these new industries, as well as officials of the three companies, should be commended for their vision and progressive outlook.

U Thant Should Quit

Events and information coming to light in the wake of the Middle East war indicate that U Thant has lost whatever value he has had as the secretary-general of the United Nations.

It has been obvious throughout the Security Council debate that he has never been in command of the situation, even considering the dificulties the task imposed. Now his unprecedented and intemperate criticism of Israel during the General Assembly session shows he has been touched on a very sore spot and has lost the equanimity his position demands.

U Thant's inadequacy and his failure to arrange means of communication between his office and his own observers in the area during the emergency were reflected in his sullen attitude during the Security Council sessions. His frustrations were in marked contrast to the cool and skillful handling of that debate by the Dane Hans Tabor, who was serving as Council president during May.

All during that period U Thant held fast to his position that he had been unable to do anything to prevent the outbreak of the war.

Specifically, he said he had no alternative but to withdraw the United Nations Emergency Forces which had been placed between the Arab and Israeli forces late in 1956 when Egypt ordered their removal. Israel now has charged there was no legal basis for that withdrawal, and it was this that caused U Thant's outburst in the General Assembly session.

The fact is there not only was no legal basis for the withdrawal as U Thant handled it, but there was in fact an agreement that any such request by Egypt would be handled by the secretary-general as a matter for the General Assembly to decide.

This has been made clear by the disclosure just this week of memorandum by the late Dag Hammarskjold, U Thant's predecessor at the United Nations.

That document explained the dificulty Hammarskjold had in getting the United Nations Emergency Force into Egypt over President Nasser's objections. Hammerskjold said he had to threaten immediate withdrawal of UNEF troops, leaving Egypt at the mercy of Israel at that time, in order to get Egypt's acceptance.

The memorandum states that Egypt had a constitutional right to demand the withdrawal. But is also said that it "limited their freedom of action as to withdrawal dependent upon the completion of the task — a question which, in the UN, obviously would have to be submitted to interpretation by the General Assembly."

Those are Hammarskjold's own words.

Yet, the record shows United Nations forces remained in Egypt until May 16, when Cairo demanded their redeployment from the frontier region to permit the Egyptians to move up, and were withdrawn when U Thant received the redeployment request on May 18. Thant did this without notifying the General Assembly as the Hammarskjold memorandum required.

Thus there were at least 17 days between the withdrawal and the start of the shooting war.

It would have been prudent for U Thant to have arranged facilities for withdrawal during that period to protect his own troops in the event the General Assembly agreed to such action or was unable to reach agreement. But this was not the course Thant followed. He took it upon himself to order the withdrawal in direct violation of the Hammarskjold memorandum.

U Thant did not seek his present term as secretary-general. He was drafted because it appeared at the time he was the only person of sufficient caliber to handle the task. It is clear now that the United Nations delegates erred in this judgment. The weary, distraught secretary-general now should be urged to discreetly resign his position and permit a more able individual to try to salvage what little respect the United Nations retains after this fiasco.

SDS Convention Starting Today

May Reveal Bitterness of New Splits

WASHINGTON—The impending national convention of the militant leftist Students for a Democratic Society is attracting more than usual attention as a result of the recent Middle East war and the Kremlin's violent castigation of Israel and strident support of the Arabs.

This has caused heated fissures in communist and other radical ranks, and the SDS meeting will be closely watched for revealing indications on how deep and serious this inner confusion and dissension is.

Starts Today

The SDS convention starts today at the University of Michigan. It will be immediately followed by a July 1-2 session of the organization's National Council, also at Ann Arbor. Originally, both affairs were to be held at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, O., but authorities there withdrew consent on second thought.

SDS officers say "up to 500 delegates" will attend.

They claim more than 150 chapters on campuses throughout the country, and that "About 30,000 young Americans consider themselves members of these chapters. Over 6,000 have National SDS membership cards."

The convention agenda, as sent out over the name of Neil Buckley, national correspondent, calls for workshops, discussions, papers and proposals on the following

The draft; foreign policey and anti-war activities; civil rights; the woman question; the quality of life, sex, drugs, etc.; electoral politics; the new working class and professionals; the poor.

Middle East Strife

While significantly Buckley's list does not include the explosives Middle East strife, it is virtually certain vigorous efforts will be made to raise the question of the Soviet's bellicose pro-Arab stand. This policy is known to have evoked vehement denunciation in some eastern SDS chapters.

While characterizing itself as the "front runner of the New Left," the Students for a Democratic Society makes no bones it has Communist members and ties.

Prominent among them is Bettina Aptheker, a self-admitted Communist who has long been active in SDS affairs. She is the daughter of Herbert Aptheker, theoretician of the U. S. Communist Party. He and a Yale faculty member made an illegal trip to North Vietnam last year.

Youth Group

Noting SDS Communist connections, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover described the organization as "a militant youth group which receives support from the Communist Party and which in turn supports communist objectives and tactics." Hoover cited the statement of Gus Hall, Communist general secretary, who referred to SDS as an organization the party has "going for us."

Shortly thereafter, "New Left Notes," official SDS weekly, published an article stating: "J. Edgar Hoover is right. There are communists in SDS. Every reader of 'New Left Notes' must be fully aware of that fact, and he must also know that some of these communists have openly admitted their membership in both organizations."

Thomas Hayden, credited by SDS as the chief architect of its "Port Huron Statement," the "bible" of the organization, accompanied Communist Herbert Aptheker to Vietnam. A highlight of this lengthy ideological preachment is the following:

"Our pugnacious anti - communism and protection of interests has led us to an alliance inappropriately called the 'Free World'. . . .An unreasoning anti-communism has become a major social problem for those who want to construct a more democratic America.

No Agreement

"Our paranoia about the Soviet Union has made us incapable of achieving agreements absolutely necessary for disarmament and the preservation of peace. . . .Our America is still white. . . .White, like might, makes right in America today."

Nicholas Egleson, 1966 graduate of Swarthmore College, Pa., president of SDS, has been in the forefront of the anti-Vietnam war agitation. At a big rally in New York in April, he glowingly acclaimed some demonstrators who burned their draft cards and shouted, "Refuse to go to war. Join us in acts of disobedience if the war continues."

SDS vice president is Carl Davidson, 1964 graduate of Penn State University and an instructor at Nebraska University, where he organized and headed an SDS chapter.

National headquarters is on West Madison Avenue, Chicago.

Draft Dodging

—Main SDS interest and activity has focused on opposing the Vietnam war and the draft.

Throughout, it has followed the Communist Party line on that.

The February 3, 1967, issue of "New Left Notes" contained an article spelling out in detail how to evade the draft. Its author was Mark Kleiman, who dropped out of high school in Evanston, Ill., in 1966, and is now in California functioning as an SDS organizer.

In Kleiman's article, he boasts there are "numerous ways of messing up draft boards. Some are only harassment techniques, while others may be good for organizing." Following are some of his "helpful" suggestions:

"You have a right to see the file your (draft) board has on you if you make an appointment. Under most circumstances, there is nothing to prevent you from absconding with all or part of your file or, possibly, inserting new data.

"It might also be good to simply send your board a card saying, 'I appeal,' and leave it up to them to find out precisely what it is that you are appealing. A beneficial side effect to this form of harassment is that you cannot be drafted while anything relating to your draft status is on appeal.

"It is possible to register people who do not exist. You can get a photostatic (of a birth certificate for a deceased individual). . . .go to a draft board and register under a false name and address. The fun ensues when this mythical person does not respond to any mail, and fails to report for a physical or induction.

Use Of Drugs

"It is possible to fake a IV-F without using drugs to wreck yourself. You could go to a doctor, and complain of ulcer symptoms (sickness after drinking alcohol, sickness if you don't eat, burning sensation if you do, etc.). He will tell you to come back for an X-ray. The night before the X-ray, take some peanut butter, roll it into a ball ¼ inch in diameter, and leave it out to harden overnight. The next day, swallow it just a few minutes before the X-ray. It will show up in your stomach as a duodenal ulcer. At this point, it shouldn't be too hard to get a letter from the doctor stating that you have his condition.

"At the physical itself, you could keep a straight pin on the inside of your shorts, and prick your finger lightly when asked for a urine sample, so that a drop of blood becomes mixed with your urine, which would look very much like kidney trouble.

"One thing which is very important to remember is that these centers are rarely on federal property, in which case orders from soldiers should be resisted firmly and as loudly as possible. At the very worst, the police might be summoned to arrest you for disturbing the peace."

New Left Notes

A poster on the front page of the March 13, 1967 issue of "New Left Notes" features a caricature of Secretary Rusk, with labels referring to him as "scum of the earth," "boob," "bum," "bald - faced liar," "youth corrupter," "child of satan," "dirty clod."

The Communists notoriously indulge in this sort of frenetic vituperation.

What's Ahead

Both the Republican and Democratic national conventions will be held in Chicago. Long the favorite convention city of both parties, the Midwest metropolis has been quietly agreed on by leaders for 1968. Decisive factor in this backstage understanding was the TV networks, which exerted their combined pressure for the choice. . . . .The gross national product, after lagging in the first quarter, will show quite a bit of improvement in the second. Preliminary compilations strongly indicate that. . . . .Vice President Humphrey will go to Alaska sometime this summer to bolster sagging Democratic forces there, and to boost Senator Ernest Gruening, D., who faces a tough re-election fight next year.

While the administration and Congress wrestle with trying to find a solution for the long - threatened railroad strike, two leading labor negotiators are retiring this month. They are James (Doc) Wolfe, who has long represented railroad labor in bargaining, and Joseph Ramsey, vice president of the Machinists, one of the six shopcraft unions involved in the protracted dispute. Both have been hardline negotiators, and their retirement for age may improve the chances for a settlement . . . Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black, 81, will undergo a second cataract operation. He has no intention of quitting the bench, and after he is fitted with glasses, will make a trip to Europe with his wife. . . . .A series of lectures Justice William O. Douglas was to deliver at Hebrew University, in Jerusalem, has been suspended because of the war. They may be rescheduled later this summer, depending on peace developments.

Soaper Says

United Nations debates are much like family squabbles, except that in the latter various opponents do not refer to one another as "distinguished."

The barefoot boy with the cane fishing pole and the bent pin is supposed to catch more fish than the city slicker with $200 worth of equipment. Unfortunately it doesn't always work out that way.

A retired friend says he gets up at 6 a.m., but leaves the morning paper in the yard until 10 so that the envious neighbors can see it on the way to work and eat their hearts out.

RALPH de TOLEDANO

GOP Liberals Give Demos Victory Margin

For years, a "liberal" Republican cabal has scolded the rest of the GOP like a shrewish wife. It has argued and prated that the road to success for their party is to strike out on its own down a road that outliberals the Democrats. And all the while, it has loudly proclaimed that it represented "true" Republicanism.

A careful study of Congressional voting records, "The D.M.V. Report," now shows us precisely what the role of the GOP's "liberals" has been. The report was prepared by the American Conservative Union (328 Pennsylvania Ave. S. E., Washington, D.C. 20003), an organization that works within the Republican framework. And ACU, with statistical clarity, has been able to show that, rather than advancing a program of their own or enhancing the Republican posture in the Congress, these GOP "liberals" have simply cast their votes to give the Democrats their margin of victory.

Let me quote from the foreword of the ACU study:

"To illustrate in graphic detail just exactly how these liberal Republicans have voted against the GOP and for Democrat sponsored legislation, the American Conservative Union examined all roll call votes during the years 1961 through 1967. The 24 major roll calls the ACU selected are representative of the issues before the House of Representatives during that time. On each of these roll calls, Republican liberals caused the legislation in question to be passed. Had they voted with the Republican leadership, the bills would have been defeated. In each case, then, liberal Republicans provided what we call the Democratic Margin of Victory, or DMV."

In the Senate, the DMV has been provided not through votes but through the dedication of Republican Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen.

"For every major piece of of liberal legislation he has thwarted in recent years (such as his admirable leadership against the move to repeal Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act), two others can be named for which he almost single - handedly was responsible."

The consular treaty with the Soviet Union, opposed by most Republicans, would have been left on the Senatorial cutting room floor but for the night-and - day efforts of Mr. Dirksen.

That "liberal" Republicans have on all key occasions cast their lot with the Kennedy-Johnson Administrations has, of course, been known. But that the spendthrift and useless programs of the Great Society owe their enactment to Republican votes comes as a shock even to those who are reasonably well informed. The ACU study spells it out chapter by chapter and verse by verse. It gives the tally on the 24 key measures of Democratic and Republican votes for or against. Simple arithemetic does the rest. The voting records of Republican House members on these bills demonstrate the pattern of party disloyalty among the GOP "liberals."

The ACU points up, by citing the voting records, what the GOP "liberals" have tended to fuzz up. Despite the wide press coverage that they get, these "liberals" are completely unrepresentative of the mainstream of Republican thought and action. The Republican Party, in its Congressional representation (and therefore at the grass roots), is overwhelmingly conservative. It votes five-to - one and six - to - one for conservative measures and against the crypto - socialist measures that pour into the Congressional hopper. Yet its purposes are betrayed by a handful of "liberals" who hog the headlines.

That handful is organized into the Wednesday Club, made up of 26 members of the House. The Wednesday Club has an office, a "chief of staff," and varying numbers of hired personnel. It issues position papers running counter to the policies of the Republican leadership and membership. At present, they are undercutting the Republican position on such issues as trade with the same Soviet Union which is providing the Viet Cong with 80 percent of its war materiel. The Wednesday Club's members favor this kind of trade, even though that materiel is being used to kill American boys.

For Republicans, there is only one answer — party discipline — and this has been urged by Representative John Ashbrook (R. - Ohio), the chairman of ACU. For the "liberals" in the GOP who consistently and systematically defy party policy, the prerogatives of seniority and patronage must be taken away.

The ACU report should be read carefully and in full, and copies are available to those who write to the organization.

Suppose McNamara Had Been Israel's Leader

SUPPOSE, heaven forbid, that Robert Strange McNamara instead of Moshe Dayan had been Israel's defense secretary during the Middle Eastern war.

The most obvious result would be that the Israeli army would now be boning up on the Koran instead of patrolling the verges of the Sinai and the Suez.

One can imagine the state of an Israeli army under such a man as McNamara. Rather than being honed to a hard fighting edge, it would have been used for social rehabilitation purposes — as McNamara now wants to use the American armed forces.

Israeli arms procurement would have been cut to the bone in keeping with a budget befitting a small nation. They would not have been able to afford those very expensive jet aircraft which they bought from France.

After all, under McNamara, this, the richest nation on earth, has not been able to afford enough aircraft to keep up with the high losses of the Vietnamese war. In a situation such as that of Israel, McNamara surely would have suggested that they buy some surplus balloons instead of the Mystere jets with which Israel saved its life.

THERE would also be the matter of offending the Soviet Union. Certainly McNamara wouldn't want the Israelis to do that. He regards avoidance of that very thing, apparently, as the prime purpose of his role in the American government, so why not in the Israeli government?

This would have meant that Israel, when faced with clear evidence of Soviet mischief-making and supplies pouring into the Arab world, would have taken the typical McNamara line of reducing its own arms commitments in an effort to convince the "mellow" Soviets that it had no aggressive intentions.

He might have suggested, for instance, that he would stop Israel from training jet pilots if the Arabs would stop showing

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16

Man's whole future is dependent on what he does with God's Son on earth. Jesus said, "If ye believe not that I am He, ye shall die in your sins."

re - runs of "Lawrence of Arabia" or something of the sort.

AFTER all, under McNamara, the United States has reached a perilous low point in pilot training and has based its entire defense research program on the thesis that it must seek no advances that good the Soviets.

With McNamara in Tel Aviv we probably would have heard some sage advice along these lines: "Look, fellows, if you will just learn to ride camels instead of tearing around the desert in those tanks we might be able to convince the Arabs that we want to keep any future conflict on a strictly native level and not escalate by introducing modern weapons."

After all, that's the sort of foolish advice that McNamara has peddled in Vietnam where he has opposed, time after time, efforts to use modern weapons and tactics rather than slugging it out with the enemy on the enemy's own terms and terrain.

THEN, of course, McNamara would never have let a man like Moshe Dayan into the Defense Department if he were running things in Israel. For one thing, McNamara doesn't respect professional military men, and Dayan is about as great a pro as anyone is likely to see in our time. For another thing, McNamara would turn pale and swoon at the blunt, brass - tacks way Dayan approached the Middle East war. He hit hard and fast. And he kept on hitting until he had won.

There is the word that would have got Dayan fired in any McNamara department. If there is one word McNamara can't seem to stand, when it comes to war, it is the word "win."

Industrial Progress Noted

A ground breaking ceremony and a dedication at plant locations were held this past week near Ruston in Lincoln Parish and at Oak Grove in West Carroll. Another ceremony is planned Monday in Ruston when the Stowe-Woodward Company's new roll - covering plant will be dedicated.

These welcome activities once again emphasized the progress being made in Northeast Louisiana and the area's bright economic future.

This point was noted by Gov. John McKeithen, guest speaker at both functions the past week when he said what many people have already come to realize — that Northeast Louisiana has the resources, climate, people, and progressive civic, business and public leaders necessary to attract industry.

—Main SDS interest and activity has focused on opposing the Vietnam war and the draft.

Throughout, it has followed the Communist Party line on that.

The February 3, 1967, issue of "New Left Notes" contained an article spelling out in detail how to evade the draft. Its author was Mark Kleiman, who dropped out of high school in Evanston, Ill., in 1966, and is now in California functioning as an SDS organizer.

In Kleiman's article, he boasts there are "numerous ways of messing up draft boards. Some are only harassment techniques, while others may be good for organizing." Following are some of his "helpful" suggestions:

"You have a right to see the file your (draft) board has on you if you make an appointment. Under most circumstances, there is nothing to prevent you from absconding with all or part of your file or, possibly, inserting new data.

"It might also be good to simply send your board a card saying, 'I appeal,' and leave it up to them to find out precisely what it is that you are appealing. A beneficial side effect to this form of harassment is that you cannot be drafted while anything relating to your draft status is on appeal.

"It is possible to register people who do not exist. You can get a photostatic (of a birth certificate for a deceased individual) . . .go to a draft board and register under a false name and address. The fun ensues when this mythical person does not respond to any mail, and fails to report for a physical or induction.

Use Of Drugs

"It is possible to fake a IV-F without using drugs to wreck yourself. You could go to a doctor, and complain of ulcer symptoms (sickness after drinking alcohol, sickness if you don't eat, burning sensation if you do, etc.). He will tell you to come back for an X-ray. The night before the X-ray, take some peanut butter, roll it into a ball ¼ inch in diameter, and leave it out to harden overnight. The next day, swallow it just a few minutes before the X-ray. It will show up in your stomach as a duodenal ulcer. At this point, it shouldn't be too hard to get a letter from the doctor stating that you have his condition.

"At the physical itself, you could keep a straight pin on the inside of your shorts, and prick your finger lightly when asked for a urine sample, so that a drop of blood becomes mixed with your urine, which would look very much like kidney trouble.

"One thing which is very important to remember is that these centers are rarely on federal property, in which case orders from soldiers should be resisted firmly and as loudly as possible. At the very worst, the police might be summoned to arrest you for disturbing the peace."

The Communists notoriously indulge in this sort of frenetic vituperation.

What's Ahead

Both the Republican and Democratic national conventions will be held in Chicago. Long the favorite convention city of both parties, the Midwest metropolis has been quietly agreed on by leaders for 1968. Decisive factor in this backstage understanding was the TV networks, which exerted their combined pressure for the choice. . . . .The gross national product, after lagging in the first quarter, will show quite a bit of improvement in the second. Preliminary compilations strongly indicate that. . . . .Vice President Humphrey will go to Alaska sometime this summer to bolster sagging Democratic forces there, and to boost Senator Ernest Gruening, D., who faces a tough re-election fight next year.

While the administration and Congress wrestle with trying to find a solution for the long - threatened railroad strike, two leading labor negotiators are retiring this month. They are James (Doc) Wolfe, who has long represented railroad labor in bargaining, and Joseph Ramsey, vice president of the Machinists, one of the six shopcraft unions involved in the protracted dispute. Both have been hardline negotiators, and their retirement for age may improve the chances for a settlement. . . . .Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black, 81, will undergo a second cataract operation. He has no intention of quitting the bench, and after he is fitted with glasses, will make a trip to Europe with his wife. . . . .A series of lectures Justice William O. Douglas was to deliver at Hebrew University, in Jerusalem, has been suspended because of the war. They may be rescheduled later this summer, depending on peace developments.

Soaper Says

United Nations debates are much like family squabbles, except that in the latter various opponents do not refer to one another as "distinguished."

The barefoot boy with the cane fishing pole and the bent pin is supposed to catch more fish than the city slicker with $200 worth of equipment. Unfortunately it doesn't always work out that way.

A retired friend says he gets up at 6 a.m., but leaves the morning paper in the yard until 10 so that the envious neighbors can see it on the way to work and eat their hearts out.

GOP Liberals Give Demos Victory Margin

For years, a "liberal" Republican cabal has scolded the rest of the GOP like a shrewish wife. It has argued and prated that the road to success for their party is to strike out on its own down a road that outliberals the Democrats. And all the while, it has loudly proclaimed that it represented "true" Republicanism.

A careful study of Congressional voting records, "The D.M.V. Report," now shows us precisely what the role of the GOP's "liberals" has been. The report was prepared by the American Conservative Union (328 Pennsylvania Ave. S. E., Washington, D.C. 20003), an organization that works within the Republican framework. And ACU, with statistical clarity, has been able to show that, rather than advancing a program of their own or enhancing the Republican posture in the Congress, these GOP "liberals" have simply cast their votes to give the Democrats their margin of victory.

Let me quote from the foreword of the ACU study:

"To illustrate in graphic detail just exactly how these liberal Republicans have voted against the GOP and for Democrat sponsored legislation, the American Conservative Union examined all roll call votes during the years 1961 through 1967. The 24 major roll calls the ACU selected are representative of the issues before the House of Representatives during that time. On each of these roll calls, Republican liberals caused the legislation in question to be passed. Had they voted with the Republican leadership, the bills would have been defeated. In each case, then, liberal Republicans provided what we call the Democratic Margin of Victory, or DMV."

In the Senate, the DMV has been provided not through votes but through the dedication of Republican Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen.

"For every major piece of of liberal legislation he has thwarted in recent years (such as his admirable leadership against the move to repeal Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act), two others can be named for which he almost single - handedly was responsible."

The consular treaty with the Soviet Union, opposed by most Republicans, would have been left on the Senatorial cutting room floor but for the night and - day efforts of Mr. Dirksen.

That "liberal" Republicans have on all key occasions cast their lot with the Kennedy-Johnson Administrations has, of course, been known. But that the spendthrift and useless programs of the Great Society owe their enactment to Republican votes comes as a shock even to those who are reasonably well informed. The ACU study spells it out chapter by chapter and verse by verse. It gives the tally on the 24 key measures of Democratic and Republican votes for or against. Simple arithemetic does the rest. The voting records of Republican House members on these bills demonstrate the pattern of party disloyalty among the GOP "liberals."

The ACU points up, by citing the voting records, what the GOP "liberals" have tended to fuzz up. Despite the wide press coverage that they get, these "liberals" are completely unrepresentative of the mainstream of Republican thought and action. The Republican Party, in its Congressional representation (and therefore at the grass roots), is overwhelmingly conservative. It votes five- to - one and six - to - one for conservative measures and against the crypto - socialist measures that pour into the Congressional hopper. Yet its purposes are betrayed by a handful of "liberals" who hog the headlines.

That handful is organized into the Wednesday Club, made up of 26 members of the House. The Wednesday Club has an office, a "chief of staff," and varying numbers of hired personnel. It issues position papers running counter to the policies of the Republican leadership and membership. At present, they are undercutting the Republican position on such issues as trade with the same Soviet Union which is providing the Viet Cong with 80 percent of its war materiel. The Wednesday Club's members favor this kind of trade, even though that materiel is being used to kill American boys.

For Republicans, there is only one answer — party discipline — and this has been urged by Representative John Ashbrook (R. - Ohio), the chairman of ACU. For the "liberals" in the GOP who consistently and systematically defy party policy, the prerogatives of seniority and patronage must be taken away.

The ACU report should be read carefully and in full, and copies are available to those who write to the organization.

Suppose McNamara Had Been Israel's Leader

SUPPOSE, heaven forbid, that Robert Strange McNamara instead of Moshe Dayan had been Israel's defense secretary during the Middle Eastern war.

The most obvious result would be that the Israeli army would now be boning up on the Koran instead of patrolling the verges of the Sinai and the Suez.

One can imagine the state of an Israeli army under such a man as McNamara. Rather than being honed to a hard fighting edge, it would have been used for social rehabilitation purposes — as McNamara now wants to use the American armed forces.

Israeli arms procurement would have been cut to the bone in keeping with a budget befitting a small nation. They would not have been able to afford those very expensive jet aircraft which they bought from France.

After all, under McNamara, this, the richest nation on earth, has not been able to afford enough aircraft to keep up with the high losses of the Vietnamese war. In a situation such as that of Israel, McNamara surely would have suggested that they buy some surplus balloons instead of the Mystere jets with which Israel saved its life.

THERE would also be the matter of offending the Soviet Union. Certainly McNamara wouldn't want the Israelis to do that. He regards avoidance of that very thing, apparently, as the prime purpose of his role in the American government, so why not in the Israeli government?

This would have meant that Israel, when faced with clear evidence of Soviet mischief-making and supplies pouring into the Arab world, would have taken the typical McNamara line of reducing its own arms commitments in an effort to convince the "mellow" Soviets that it had no aggressive intentions.

He might have suggested, for instance, that he would stop Israel from training jet pilots if the Arabs would stop showing re - runs of "Lawrence of Arabia" or something of the sort.

AFTER all, under McNamara, the United States has reached a perilous low point in pilot training and has based its entire defense research program on the thesis that it must seek no advances that good the Soviets.

With McNamara in Tel Aviv we probably would have heard some sage advice along these lines: "Look, fellows, if you will just learn to ride camels instead of tearing around the desert in those tanks we might be able to convince the Arabs that we want to keep any future conflict on a strictly native level and not escalate by introducing modern weapons."

After all, that's the sort of foolish advice that McNamara has peddled in Vietnam where he has opposed, time after time, efforts to use modern weapons and tactics rather than slugging it out with the enemy on the enemy's own terms and terrain.

THEN, of course, McNamara would never have let a man like Moshe Dayan into the Defense Department if he were running things in Israel. For one thing, McNamara doesn't respect professional military men, and Dayan is about as great a pro as anyone is likely to see in our time. For another thing, McNamara would turn pale and swoon at the blunt brass - tacks way Dayan approached the Middle East war. He hit hard and fast. And he kept on hitting until he had won.

There is the word that would have got Dayan fired in any McNamara department. If there is one word McNamara can't seem to stand, when it comes to war, it is the word "win."

How Not To Fight

Ever wonder what would have happened had the Israelis fought the Arabs using the ground rules that restrict United States servicemen in Vietnam?

Suppose there had been a telephone call from the chief of state of Israel to the commanding general when the action in the Middle East was building to a crescendo that went something like this:

Hello, is this General Dayan? This is the premier calling from Tel Aviv.

General, we are getting some disturbing reports about the way you're running the war against the Arabs and I'd like to offer a few suggestions. As some of my advisers point out, there are a lot of serious political considerations that you're ignoring completely. You are moving too fast and killing too many.

That airfield you're trying to destroy — better leave it alone. We understand the Russians are flying in equipment for the Egyptains. We know they are going to shoot it back at you, but we don't want to upset them in any way. We just might get along with them if we give them what they want. And — that other airfield, and railroad, better leave them alone also. The Chinese are sending supplies into those areas and we don't want to make them mad either.

Yes, we know you're in the middle of things and these advisers are far from the action, but look, general you just can't ignore world opinion. And world opinion is dead set against winning wars, escalation and things like that. Do you want us to start getting demonstrations here, like in the United States?

Besides I got an election coming up next year.

Actually, General that is only part of it. You also overlook the fact that nowadays, unless you are a Communist, you don't fight a war to win but to get your opponent to the negotiating table. You think what you're doing is going to get Nasser to sit down with us?

All right, General, I know the majority of our people want victory with the war ending as quickly as possible, but why can't you give them something to cheer about without being so destructive.

You mashed a lot of their equipment? Don't do that. Don't you know they're buying it on the installment plan from Russia. Turn your pilots loose in the Sinai Desert and let them blast away at the rocks, or maybe they can find an oasis somewhere. But make sure there aren't any people around. We have some fellows in the Foreign Relations Department who'll start holding hearings if they suspect we have injured any civilians — like you know those in the United States such as Senator Fulbright or Kennedy.

There's something else, too, General. Some of the people in the computer department are unhappy about the cost-effectiveness aspects of this war. They say it's out of balance. So you'd better stop and prepare some studies to show what we're getting for what we've invested. Send it in quadruplicate, and then stand by in case we need you back here for hearings.

Now look, General, I know you're supposed to be the military leader. But there's more to a war than fighting, and you know what Truman had to do with. McArthur when he forgot that. So if you can't stand the heat you'd better get out of the Sinai.

After all you know how all those countries the United States have helped are doing. They poured billions of dollars into many of those nations, fed them when they were starving, built schools, health centers and stuff. Look what they are doing.

Yes, I know your men want to win and get back home, but we just can't afford to upset our friends. You mean you want me to name our friends — er - well. . . .

General I don't have time to talk with you further. What I'm telling you is to cool the war down. If you can't fight a war without making people mad at you, we'll get someone who can.

Can you imagine what would have happened had this actually happened to Israeli military leaders during the Middle East War?

Random Thoughts On War

In the aftermath of the Middle East war, European leaders are reported to have cast a wary eye on the Kremlin as a result of its performance in the Middle East. They note the Soviet intelligence estimates were apparently as misleading about the relative strength of Israel and the Arabs as they were about the probable U. S. reaction to missiles in Cuba. Europeans seem to fear that if the Russians are that badly misinformed, maybe war by miscalculation — long considered impossible in Europe — is not so impossible after all. . .

ANOTHER strikeout for French President de Gaulle. According to informed sources, De Gaulle told his Cabinet before the fighting broke out in the Middle East that he did not expect war in that area, and that if fighting did break out it would turn into a long war, favoring the Arabs after a few limited Israeli victories. At the same time, De Gaulle lost more backing from his armed force leaders. Many of them on bending knees begged him to back Israel and to sell the tiny country equipment. De Gaulle refused. This leads one to the question of how long is this nation going to put with this arrogant, self - centered, blow - hard. He's enough to make true Frenchmen hang their heads in shame. . .

A CHANGE could be in the making in India — and there should be. Reports say the peculiar behavior of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi is worrying Indians. She backed Nasser of Egypt against Israel, as well as criticized the United States. Her own party leaders fretted over that. Her public statements came as Nasser closed the Suez Canal, blocking U.S. food shipments to India's famine areas, while thousands starved daily.

The World's Week In Focus

LBJ, Kosygin Hold Summit As Senate Censured Dodd

WHILE President Johnson and Premier Kosygin went through an elaborate After You Alphonso act, finally agreeing to the first U.S.-Soviet summit meeting in six years, and while the Senate dragged out its Dodd censure deliberations to agonizing length, other incidents and developments across the country pleaded for a share of attention.

(Late Friday the censure verdict was returned on a 92-5 vote. Dodd was found guilty of spending personally money he collected politically. But the Senate dropped a second misconduct charge against him, that involving double billing. The vote was identical. Those backing the Connecticut Democrat were Dodd himself, Senators Russell Long, Strom Thurmond, Abraham Ribicoff and John Tower).

In Omaha, Nebraska, Barry Goldwater spoke his mind to the Young Republican National Federation convention. He remained firmly committed to Richard Nixon for the GOP nomination in 1968, but as of now, he bluntly conceded, no Republican hopeful has even a 50-50 chance of beating President Johnson.

The 1964 nominee, now a candidate for his old Senate seat, analyzed the possibilities of Nixon, Governors Reagan, Rockefeller and Romney, and Senator Charles Percy of Illinois. He concluded in an embarassingly honest fashion that none of these had better than an even chance to beat Johnson because "when the chips are down, this fellow produces."

GOLDWATER said Johnson's political position had been bolstered because the Vietnam war is going better (a dubious point), economic signs look good, and because the President acted commendably in the Middle East crisis.

Goldwater had advice to the Young Republicans and to his pal, Nixon. To the youngsters boiling with presidential nomination fever, he counseled against allowing the senior party organization to submerge them until they had no voice in GOP affairs. He hoped Nixon would stay out of the primaries, but guessed he couldn't. At any rate, he winced at the idea of a Nixon-Reagan collision that would permit a moderate like Michigan Governor Romney to be nominated. Goldwater is still sour on Romney for his refusal to support him in 1964.

Ray Bliss, National GOP chairman, fought to restore national committee checks on the often rampant youth organization. He made his usual case for unity, pointing out that the federation's mission is to elect — but not to select — the presidential nominee. Considerable maneuvering went on over a senior party member sitting on the federation board as a sort of watchdog.

Draft Compromise

Congress completed action on the new draft bill Tuesday when the House, on a 377 to 29 roll call vote, endorsed a compromise between a bill it passed earlier and one approved by the Senate. President Johnson must sign it before June 30, the date his present draft authority expires.

The most significant features of the bill are a virtual guarantee of deferments for undergraduate college students regardless of class ranking, and a prohibition on the use of a lottery to select eligible youths for service.

In addition, the bill shuts off the graduate school escape route for most graduating seniors. No longer can they use this gimmick to elude the call. Nineteen year-olds will go first. Currently, local draft boards start with 26-year-olds and work back in seeking men to meet their quotas.

Under the new proposal, the only way undergraduate college students could be drafted would be for the Defense Department to declare it necessary. That failing, the student could be drafted only after only after graduating, dropping out of school, or reaching age 24, whichever came first.

In a related matter, an all-white Houston jury convicted former Heavyweight Champion Cassious Clay on a charge of refusing to be inducted into the Army. He was sentenced to a maximum penalty of 5 years in prison and fined $10,000. Clay claims that he should be exempt from the draft because he is a Muslim minister. His attorneys said it would probably be 24 months before all the appeals are settled in the case. Meantime, Clay planned to embark on a series of speaking engagements at colleges and in slum districts. Future fights? He wasn't thinking about them, although "everybody knows I'm the best."

THE District of Columbia received a judicial shock when Federal Judge J. Skelly Wright ruled that the voteless city must provide transportation for busing pupils who voluntarily choose to attend schools outside their neighborhoods.

At the same time, Wright ordered substantial faculty integration in the city's schools next fall, and struck down the system under which the District places students in ability groups ranging from remedial education to college preparatory. It is referred to as the "track" system. In Wright's opinion, it is weighted in favor of white children and those from higher socio-economic groups.

NINE out of 10 students in the capital's public schools are Negro. This means that they may have to be transported some distance in order to attend a white school or one more evenly balanced racially. Massive changes in the school system obviously will have to be made.

The verdict was a victory for Julius Hobson, a federal employe and civil rights leader, who hoped the school board would appeal the ruling to the Supreme Court. Then, if the high court upheld Wright's ruling it would strike a death blow to so-called de facto segregation, or racial imbalance in the schools, with sweeping ramifications for big Northern cities.

IN the South Negro schools have been segregated from the whites by plan and in the North by neighborhood, since Negroes live together in large sections referred to, sometimes erroneously, as ghettoes. Segregation by neighborhood is called de facto segregation (in reality). Civil rights leaders say this is discrimination.

Judge Wright stopped short of barring the use of the neighborhood school system, but it was a close shave.

The ruling was a long step away from what President Kennedy had in mind about school integration. He opposed busing Negro students anywhere to achieve racial balance.

THE 90TH Congress has had its share of confusion, the House, no less than the Senate. Things came to a pretty pass in the larger chamber last week during a vote to protect Old Glory.

One might say the membership burned with embarassment. In a tide of patriotism, the House drowned out all objections and passed its bill to make it a federal crime to desecrate the national banner. But when the 385-16 final vote was taken, members discovered they had voted to bar mutilating, defacing, defiling or trampling on the flag, but burning had been eliminated in the parliamentary chaos.

AN OUTRAGED New York Republican said, "in that case, we have spent the whole day discussing how to deal with the burning of a flag in Central Park, and have come to a conclusion that does not deal with the problem." The burning of a flag in New York's Central Park during an anti-Vietnam war demonstration this spring set off the whole flag uproar.

At one point during the debate, Rep. James Haley, D - Fla., said flag burners should be taken out to sea, tied to anchor, thrown overboard, and told to swim to another country. Lusty applause.

Violaters of the law could be fined $1,000 and imprisoned for one year. The Senate will take up the bill next and it is assumed will insert "burning" omitted in the House scramble.

IN OTHER House action, a bill aimed at jailing professional agitators who stir up race riots was rushed through the Judiciary Committee and quickly endorsed by House Speaker John McCormack. The bill provides safeguards against depriving Negroes of their civil rights, but would jail up to five years anyone who crosses a state boundary to "incite, organize, promote or encourage a riot." Prompt action is expected in the House.

THE HOUSE members had reason to be stringent. Several riots have already hit major cities North and South. And last week, 16 members of a Negro anarchist group were arrested on charges of planning to assassinate moderate civil rights leaders including Roy Wilkins, NAACP director, and Whitney Young, executive director of the National Urban League. Seized in the pre-dawn raids Wednesday in New York and Philadelphia were more than 30 weapons, 1,000 rounds of ammunition, explosives, 275 packets of heroin, Red Chinese flags, and a large portrait of Mao Tse-Tung. The suspects allegedly belong to a Revoluntary Action Movement (RAM) directed from Peking.

Atlanta sustained four straight nights of rioting during which a Negro man was shot to death and a young Negro boy critically wounded. A dispute flared over who fired the shots, a sniper or the police. Mayor Ivan Allen clamped a curfew on a six-block area encompassing the center of violence in predominately Negro Dixie Hills.

Garrison Challenged

NEW ORLEANS District Attorney Jim Garrison was accused by the National Broadcasting Company of foisting a JFK conspiracy case on the public composed of lies, threats, fear, suspicion, and exploitation. NBC made the claims in a television documentary.

Garrison immediately branded the program "the big lie." Main points made by NBC were (1) that Garrison's case against Clay Shaw is based on testimony that did not pass a lie detector test Garrison ordered — and Garrison knew it. (2) Garrison's staff has threatened and offered inducements to potential witnecces. (3) The results of his 4-months of litigation have been to damage reputations, to spread fear and suspicion, and worst of all, to exploit the nation's sorrow and doubts about President Kennedy's death.

GARRISON claims Clay Shaw and a mysterious "Clay Bertrand" is one and the same. NBC said a "Clem" Bertrand does exist. It is a pseudonym used by a homosexual in New Orleans.

PERRY RUSSO, a key witness for Garrison, supplied NBC with data, all the time keeping in close contact with Garrison's office. Russo later charged that the NBC news team sought his help to "wreck the Garrison investigation." He said NBC alternated promises and threats in repeated efforts to enlist his cooperation. The network denied it.

Russo was the witness whom the network claimed failed the lie detector test.

Garrison blamed the Washington Establishment, namely the CIA, for getting NBC to blast him.

AS THE controversy took on tiresome proportions, the New Orleans Metropolitan Crime Commission asked for a full state inquiry — in short, an investigation of the investigators. The appeal was made to Louisiana Attorney General Jack Gremillion. He refused.

Garrison said the Commission should turn its complaints over to a grand jury.

Meanwhile, Judge Edward Haggerty said that the "conduct of some persons" involved in the assassination conspiracy case had acted deplorably and contemptuously of the court's orders. Did he mean Russo alone, or was Garrison included? Haggerty said he would attend to the violators after the Shaw trial.

THE American Medical Association liberalized its stand on therapeutic abortion while the Vatican stuck to its guns on the Catholic Church's ancient rule of celibacy for its priests.

POPE Paul VI voiced "great pain" over criticism and defections in the rank of the clergy, saying the law is as good and necessary as ever in the 20th century world. An estimated 2,000 cases are under review involving priests who have renounced the priesthood for married life.

By an overwhelming vote, the AMA's ruling House of Delegates adopted a policy statement that it was medically proper for a physician to induce abortion on three conditions, but only if the abortion was documented in a prescribed hospital and if the decision was concurred in by two other physicians in writing.

A LOT OF THINGS happened at the United Nations on the way to the summit meeting in Glasboro New Jersey. Premier Kosygin demanded that Israel be branded the aggressor in the Israeli-Arab war, to give up captured territory immediately, and to pay reparations. Israili Foreign Minister Abba Eban rejected the notion, and said Russia, supplier of Arabian arms, should be censured for making such a suggestion.

American Ambassador Arthur Goldberg rejected the demands, too, as he did Soviet charges that the United States instigated the conflict.

President Charles de Gaulle of France blamed Israel for starting the war and urged that she give up her new territorial gains. De Gaulle conceded, however, that Israel should be allowed to lead its own life, an dcondemned the Arabs for threatening to destroy Israel.

ISRAEL, The United States, and Russia all gave their plans for solving the Middle East friction. They involved rights of passage in the Gulf of Aqaba, refugee problems, disposition of Jerusalem, limits on the arms race, and so on. Egypt, meanwhile, was convinced the Soviets had not abandoned them following Kosygin's address. And Soviet President Nikolia Podgorny flew to Cairo to reassure them more.

Highlight of the week's session was a heated reply by Secretary-General U Thant to Israel's charge that he withdrew the Sinai peace - keeping force too soon. Thant appeared furious as he noted Israeli provocations for 10 years across the border, and furthermore, that he had asked Israel to place the force inside their frontiers when Nasser demanded they be withdrawn. Israel refused. Foreign Minister Eban made his usual eloquent repiy, but ignored Thant's main point.

To complicate things a bit more, Red China exploded a hydrogen bomb. This probably accounted as much for the summit meeting as the Middle East nut cracker.

The Week's Twin Cities-Area News In Review

NEWS IN the Twin Cities and Northeast Louisiana the past week ranged from the selection of beauty queens and plant dedications to a bank robbery with all the elements of a tragi-comedy.

In the robbery, the Bank of Choudrant was robbed of $4,200 by a gunman who entered shortly before noon Thursday. Later arrested after his automobile had wrecked near Sibley and charged with the robbery by Lincoln Parish authorities was Cedric Clay Walker, 45, who gave many places as his address. Authorities found approximately $4,000 in the wrecked automobile. Held in connection with the case was the man's wife, Mrs. Vera Walker,24. At the wreck scene, a 16-year-old youth, Mike Rogers, who had gone to the aid of Walker when he was injured in the wreck, was wounded with a .22 caliber pistol bullet in the face. Mrs. Walker, who had taken the youth to the hospital, was arrested on her way back to the scene of her husband's wreck. The boy was working in a nearby field when he went to Walker's aid. Walker, who suffered severe injuries, was arrested at the wreck scene and taken to the Lincoln General Hospital.

In Monroe, two persons were killed in a two-car headon collision on the U.S. 165 bypass. The victims were Walter F. Mann, 74, of Finley, Ohio, driver and only occupant of one of the cars, and Frances Shirley Frazier, 14, a Negro, a passenger in the other car. Officers said the accident happened when Mann apparently turned the wrong way into the south-bound lanes of the bypass. At Delhi, Ferris Newpon Moore, 45, a farmer from Dunn, was killed when the tractor he was driving overturned.

AT MINDEN, 21 residents began taking rabies shots on Thursday after Authorities reported a dead kitten was found to be rabid. Each person taking the shots was believed to have come into contact with the animal.

The Ouachita Valley Council of the Boy Scouts of America walked off with a top honor during the week. It was named the number one council in membership growth in Region Five during 1966-67. The growth represents a 22 per cent gain in membership from May 31, 1 66, to May 31, 1967.

DECIDES DISPUTE

At Bastrop, the Morehouse Parish Police Jury finally decided a long dispute when it authorized Sheriff Hughie Perry to notify owners of 112 confiscated doe deer that they could have the animals. The doe deer were killed during a controversial half-day hunt at the Georgia-Pacific Game Management area on Nov. 25, 1966, set by the Louisiana State Wild Life and Fisheries Commission. The Morehouse jury had opposed it and ordered Perry to seize all animals killed. The courts finally ruled that the state commission was within its rights in setting the half-day season.

UNION Parish's school board was placed under federal court order to desegregate its school system for the 1967-68 school year. The order was issued by Federal District Judge Ben C. Dawkins Jr., at Shreveport and includes all grades in the system. On the subject of schools, State Superintendent of Education William J. Dodd told the Monroe Rotary Club that Louisiana's greatest resource is our youth and our biggest job is educating them. He also commented that Louisiana is fortunate in having only 66 school systems as compared with the hundreds of systems in some states.

As a result of the defeat of the one-cent Fifth District Sales Tax proposal, sharp economy measures were being taken in some areas. In Monroe, Mayor W. L. Howard said that 30 employes were eliminated from the city payroll on Thursday. He said the employes were taken from "all the departments in which they could possibly be done without. The mayor said the possibility of a five-day week for police officers is, as yet, not in sight.

MEANWHILE, the Legislature got its first chance to decide whether it wants a 10-day special session to override vetoes by Gov. John McKeithen. A constitutional amendment approved last November made the veto session possible after each regular or fiscal session if they are voted by the lawmakers. Secretary of State Wade O. Martin sent the ballots out the past Monday, giving legislators 14 days to return them. However, there was a general feeling that no session would be held. Said House Speaker Vail M. Delony, "There is nothing to have a veto session."

Tickets for the 1967 Miss Louisiana Pageant, scheduled for June 28-July 1 in Neville Auditorium went on sale. Miss Mary Ann Mobley, a native of Mississippi and a Miss America in 1959 will emcee the pageant.

A fire early in the week damaged three businesses on DeSiard Street. Damaged were the Capitol Steak House, the Star Hardware and Furniture Company annex and the Mark Brown Credit Cothiers. No estimate of damage was available.

AT A Ouachita Parish School Board meeting Tuesday night, the possibility of another sales tax for education was raised, following defeat of the Fifth District Tax proposal just 10 days before. Parish Supt. Milton C. Hall said he had contacted Van D Odom, superintendent of the city system, about the possibility. However city board members at that time were not willing to take a stand for or against the possibility of a one-half cent sales tax until it could study the matter. Hall said many people had told him after defeat of the other tax that "we could come back with a one-half cent sales tax for education only and pass it. The plan is under study by the board's finance committee.

PROGRESS NOTED

The progress Northeast Louisiana is making in industrial expansion was also noted. A groundbreaking ceremony was held for the Lauren Glass Company at a site between Ruston and Simsboro. The new plant will be a multi-million dollar facility. Gov. John McKeithen, participating in the event, praised the company for its decision to locate in this area. The plant will be named the "Easterby Plant" in honor of the firm's president, E. D. Easterby, who also attended the event and predicted the facility would employ 500 persons by early 1970's.

MCKEITHEN also participated in the dedication of the Wells Lamont Corporation glove factory at Oak Grove at which he re-emphasized the "New Louisiana." The plant was constructed through Louisiana's industry inducement program, with a $450,000 bond issue voted by the taxpayers of West Carroll Parish. Donald J. Wells, president of the corporation of Chicago, Ill., performed the ribbon cutting ceremonies.

Meanwhile, Northeast Louisiana State College reported a record number of students enrolled for the institution's 12-week summer session. Officials said a total of 3,091 students are enrolled, an increase of 23.9 per cent over last year's total of 2,494.

ON FRIDAY, the Monroe City Council adopted what was termed "a tight budget" of $5 million for the 1967-68 fiscal year. Mayor W. L. Howard emphasized at the council meeting that the budget provides no surplus and that the budget must be followed since there is no surplus. "I am going to refuse to sign checks for anything not in the budget," he said. The budget does provide for a number of expenditures, including retention of the $60 per month bonus for city policemen and firemen. Also included was permission to Police Chief James C. Kelly Jr. to hire about 25 new officers, $180,000 to extend runways at the Municipal Airport, $184,000 for the Monroe Civic Center, and money for the purchase of two new police vehicles. In other action, the council issued a directive to all department heads and superintendents, stating that effective immediately Ed Waldron, secretary to the council, was authorized to act in behalf of the council toward "each and every department in order to better coordinate manpower and equipment under certain conditions." Also at the meeting, Commissioner H. W. McSherry announced changes in the city bus schedules to become effective July 1. According to McSherry, certain of the buses are taking in "very little revenue" and the discontinuation of some service will result in a savings to the city of $12,000 per year.

WANTS COMMITTEE NAMED

MEANWHILE, the Ouachita Parish Industrial Coordinating Committee recommended that Twin Cities councils and the Ouachtia Parish Jury "as soon as possible" appoint members to the Ouachita Port Commission. The move in effect meant that a majority of the commissioners would be appointed by this coming week as the coordinating committee is chaired by West Monroe Mayor W. B. Hatten and includes Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard.

The motion for the recommendation came only after nearly an hour's discussion with T. W. Humphries desenting. Humphries, president of the Ouachita Parish Police Jury, maintained throughout that the seven - man commission, once appointed, had the authority to issue bonds, backed, according to the constitutional amendment, by the "full faith and credit" of the police jury.

Leslie L. Glasgow, director of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, reported that William J. Gillespie Jr., had been cleared of accusations by a former agent. At the same time, Glasgow announced Gillespie's promotion to assistant chief of the enforcement division. Parnell Barfield had charged earlier that Gillespie had ordered agents to seine the Tensas River for a fish fry. Glasgow said he was personally convinced that Gillespie was guiltless in the issue.

BEAUTY PAGEANT

Forty - three beauty queens, and former beauty queens, including Miss America, 1959, Mary Ann Mobley, will begin arriving in Monroe today for the 1967 Miss Louisiana Pageant which opens Wednesday. The pageant, sponsored by the Monroe Jaycees, will get underway with the "Parade of Beauties" through downtown Monroe. Formal competition will begin Wednesday night at Neville High School auditorium and will run through the crowning of the new state beauty queen Saturday night.

Mal Cooley was installed as the new president of the Advertising Club of Monroe - West Monroe the past week. Other officers installed at the group's annual banquet Friday night at the Paragon Club were Norman Perry, vice president, and Eric Wade, secretary - treasurer.

Serving as acting president of the Student Government Association at Northeast Louisiana State College during the summer session is Nelda Culpepper of Jonesboro. She was elected SGA secretary last spring. The president, Steve Huffman of Monroe, is not attending summer school.

NEW PEACH QUEEN

At Ruston, Pam McCarty was selected Queen Dixie Gem XVIII at the Louisiana Peach Festival Friday night. Valerie Lynn Ellis, age 5, won the title of Princess Peach.

The School of Pharmacy at Northeast Louisiana State College has received a $5,000 grant from the National Science Foundation for the purchase of instructional scientific equipment. Announcement of the grant was made by Dr. Ben F. Cooper, dean of the School of Pharmacy, who said the grant would be matched by Northeast funds.

Meanwhile in Washington, Fifth District Congressman Otto E. Passman urged caution rather than enthusiasm over the prospects of coastal states receiving 37½ per cent royalties from offshore mineral production adjacent to their respective coasts. A prepared statement by Passman said that Louisiana people should not take too much encouragement from tidelands legislation pending in Congress. "The prospects of getting such a bill passed is a touch - and - go matter," Passman said.

DID YOU know that Israel General Moshe Dayan spent several weeks with U.S. troops in Vietnam last August? In battle after battle, he reported he was astonished at the mobility and firepower of the American forces. In one fight, he noted U.S. units laid down 21,000 shells — more than the total artillery fire expended by Israeli troops in the 1948 and 1956 victories over the Arabs.

She Tolled 'Em

Out in California, where they grow a lot of nuts, a curious new custom was recently started in churches which might be described as Orthodox Liberal. To express their outrage when a convicted murderer was executed — the first in 10 years — certain clergymen tolled their church bells.

Said Mrs. Ronald Reagan, wife of the governor: "I think it would be nice, too, if they rang church bells everytime a man is murdered."

Peace-Loving Soviets

The peace - loving Soviet Union — this is written in jest — is reported to have offered to sell the government of India 200 of the latest type fighter-bombers, and India is said to be seriously considering the offer.

How do they expect to pay for them? With borrowed money from the United States.

Man in white shirt is Michael Natale Rocco, 42, who walked through police barriers and tried to enter the Soviet Mission in New York. Police seized him at the door. He was carrying a loaded .32 caliber pistol and hunting knife in a small bag. Police said they let him through the lines to see if he was operating alone. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

The Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold,

And the sheen of their spears was like stars on the sea,
When the blue waves roll nightly on deep Galilee.

How Not To Fight

Ever wonder what would have happened had the Israelis fought the Arabs using the ground rules that restrict United States servicemen in Vietnam?

Suppose there had been a telephone call from the chief of state of Israel to the commanding general when the action in the Middle East was building to a crescendo that went something like this:

Hello, is this General Dayan? This is the premier calling from Tel Aviv.

General, we are getting some disturbing reports about the way you're running the war against the Arabs and I'd like to offer a few suggestions. As some of my advisers point out, there are a lot of serious political considerations that you're ignoring completely. You are moving too fast and killing too many.

That airfield you're trying to destroy — better leave it alone. We understand the Russians are flying in equipment for the Egyptains. We know they are going to shoot it back at you, but we don't want to upset them in any way. We just might get along with them if we give them what they want. And — that other airfield, and railroad, better leave them alone also. The Chinese are sending supplies into those areas and we don't want to make them mad either.

Yes, we know you're in the middle of things and these advisers are far from the action, but look, general you just can't ignore world opinion. And world opinion is dead set against winning wars, escalation and things like that. Do you want us to start getting demonstrations here, like in the United States?

Besides I got an election coming up next year.

Actually, General that is only part of it. You also overlook the fact that nowadays, unless you are a Communist, you don't fight a war to win but to get your opponent to the negotiating table. You think what you're doing is going to get Nasser to sit down with us?

All right, General, I know the majority of our people want victory with the war ending as quickly as possible, but why can't you give them something to cheer about without being so destructive.

You mashed a lot of their equipment? Don't do that. Don't you know they're buying it on the installment plan from Russia. Turn your pilots loose in the Sinai Desert and let them blast away at the rocks, or maybe they can find an oasis somewhere. But make sure there aren't any people around. We have some fellows in the Foreign Relations Department who'll start holding hearings if they suspect we have injured any civilians — like you know those in the United States such as Senator Fulbright or Kennedy.

There's something else, too, General. Some of the people in the computer department are unhappy about the cost-effectiveness aspects of this war. They say it's out of balance. So you'd better stop and prepare some studies to show what we're getting for what we've invested. Send it in quadruplicate, and then stand by in case we need you back here for hearings.

Now look, General, I know you're supposed to be the military leader. But there's more to a war than fighting, and you know what Truman had to do with MacArthur when he forgot that. So if you can't stand the heat you'd better get out of the Sinai.

After all you know how all those countries the United States have helped are doing. They poured billions of dollars into many of those nations, fed them when they were starving, built schools, health centers and stuff. Look what they are doing.

Yes, I know your men want to win and get back home, but we just can't afford to upset our friends. You mean you want me to name our friends — er - well. . .

General I don't have time to talk with you further. What I'm telling you is to cool the war down. If you can't fight a war without making people mad at you, we'll get someone who can.

Can you imagine what would have happened had this actually happened to Israeli military leaders during the Middle East War?

Random Thoughts On War

In the aftermath of the Middle East war, European leaders are reported to have cast a wary eye on the Kremlin as a result of its performance in the Middle East. They note the Soviet intelligence estimates were apparently as misleading about the relative strength of Israel and the Arabs as they were about the probable U. S. reaction to missiles in Cuba. Europeans seem to fear that if the Russians are that badly misinformed, maybe war by miscalculation — long considered impossible in Europe — is not so impossible after all. . .

ANOTHER strikeout for French President de Gaulle. According to informed sources, De Gaulle told his Cabinet before the fighting broke out in the Middle East that he did not expect war in that area, and that if fighting did break out it would turn into a long war, favoring the Arabs after a few limited Israeli victories. At the same time, De Gaulle lost more backing from his armed force leaders. Many of them on bending knees begged him to back Israel and to sell the tiny country equipment. De Gaulle refused. This leads one to the question of how long is this nation going to put with this arrogant, self - centered, blow - hard He's enough to make true Frenchmen hang their heads in shame. . .

A CHANGE could be in the making in India — and there should be. Reports say the peculiar behavior of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi is worrying Indians. She backed Nasser of Egypt against Israel, as well as criticized the United States. Her own party leaders fretted over that. Her public statements came as Nasser closed the Suez Canal, blocking U.S. food shipments to India's famine areas, while thousands starved daily.

The World's Week In Focus

LBJ, Kosygin Hold Summit As Senate Censured Dodd

WHILE President Johnson and Premier Kosygin went through an elaborate After You Alphonso act, finally agreeing to the first U.S.-Soviet summit meeting in six years, and while the Senate dragged out its Dodd censure deliberations to agonizing length, other incidents and developments across the country pleaded for a share of attention.

(Late Friday the censure verdict was returned on a 92-5 vote. Dodd was found guilty of spending personally money he collected politically. But the Senate dropped a second misconduct charge against him, that involving double billing. The vote was identical. Those backing the Connecticut Democrat were Dodd himself, Senators Russell Long, Strom Thurmond, Abraham Ribicoff and John Tower).

In Omaha, Nebraska, Barry Goldwater spoke his mind to the Young Republican National Federation convention. He remained firmly committed to Richard Nixon for the GOP nomination in 1968, but as of now, he bluntly conceded, no Republican hopeful has even a 50-50 chance of beating President Johnson.

The 1964 nominee, now a candidate for his old Senate seat, analyzed the possibilities of Nixon, Governors Reagan, Rockefeller and Romney, and Senator Charles Percy of Illinois. He concluded in an embarassingly honest fashion that none of these had better than an even chance to beat Johnson because "when the chips are down, this fellow produces."

GOLDWATER said Johnson's political position had been bolstered because the Vietnam war is going better (a dubious point), economic signs look good, and because the President acted commendably in the Middle East crisis.

Goldwater had advice to the Young Republicans and to his pal, Nixon. To the youngsters boiling with presidential nomination fever, he counseled against allowing the senior party organization to submerge them until they had no voice in GOP affairs. He hoped Nixon would stay out of the primaries, but guessed he couldn't. At any rate, he winced at the idea of a Nixon-Reagan collision that would permit a moderate like Michigan Governor Romney to be nominated. Goldwater is still sour on Romney for his refusal to support him in 1964.

Ray Bliss, National GOP chairman, fought to restore national committee checks on the often rampant youth organization. He made his usual case for unity, pointing out that the federation's mission is to elect — but not to select — the presidential nominee. Considerable maneuvering went on over a senior party member sitting on the federation board as a sort of watchdog.

Draft Compromise

Congress completed action on the new draft bill Tuesday when the House, on a 377 to 29 roll call vote, endorsed a compromise between a bill it passed earlier and one approved by the Senate. President Johnson must sign it before June 30, the date his present draft authority expires.

The most significant features of the bill are a virtual guarantee of deferments for undergraduate college students regardless of class ranking, and a prohibition on the use of a lottery to select eligible youths for service.

In addition, the bill shuts off the graduate school escape route for most graduating seniors. No longer can they use this gimmick to elude the call. Nineteen year-olds will go first. Currently, local draft boards start with 26-year-olds and work back in seeking men to meet their quotas.

Under the new proposal, the only way undergraduate college students could be drafted would be for the Defense Department to declare it necessary. That failing, the student could be drafted only after only after graduating, dropping out of school, or reaching age 24, whichever came first.

In a related matter, an all-white Houston jury convicted former Heavyweight Champion Cassious Clay on a charge of refusing to be inducted into the Army. He was sentenced to a maximum penalty of 5 years in prison and fined $10,000. Clay claims that he should be exempt from the draft because he is a Muslim minister. His attorneys said it would probably be 24 months before all the appeals are settled in the case. Meantime, Clay planned to embark on a series of speaking engagements at colleges and in slum districts. Future fights? He wasn't thinking about them, although "everybody knows I'm the best."

THE District of Columbia received a judicial shock when Federal Judge J. Skelly Wright ruled that the voteless city must provide transportation for busing pupils who voluntarily choose to attend schools outside their neighborhoods.

At the same time, Wright ordered substantial faculty integration in the city's schools next fall, and struck down the system under which the District places students in ability groups ranging from remedial education to college preparatory. It is referred to as the "track" system. In Wright's opinion, it is weighted in favor of white children and those from higher socio-economic groups.

NINE out of 10 students in the capital's public schools are Negro. This means that they may have to be transported some distance in order to attend a white school or one more evenly balanced racially. Massive changes in the school system obviously will have to be made.

The verdict was a victory for Julius Hobson, a federal employe and civil rights leader, who hoped the school board would appeal the ruling to the Supreme Court. Then, if the high court upheld Wright's ruling it would strike a death blow to so-called de facto segregation, or racial imbalance in the schools, with sweeping ramifications for big Northern cities.

IN the South Negro schools have been segregated from the whites by plan and in the North by neighborhood, since Negroes live together in large sections referred to, sometimes erroneously, as ghettoes. Segregation by neighborhood is called de facto segregation (in reality). Civil rights leaders say this is discrimination.

Judge Wright stopped short of barring the use of the neighborhood school system, but it was a close shave.

The ruling was a long step away from what President Kennedy had in mind about school integration. He opposed busing Negro students anywhere to achieve racial balance.

THE 90TH Congress has had its share of confusion, the House, no less than the Senate. Things came to a pretty pass in the larger chamber last week during a vote to protect Old Glory.

One might say the membership burned with embarassment. In a tide of patriotism, the House drowned out all objections and passed its bill to make it a federal crime to desecrate the national banner. But when the 385-16 final vote was taken, members discovered they had voted to bar mutilating, defacing, defiling or trampling on the flag, but burning had been eliminated in the parliamentary chaos.

AN OUTRAGED New York Republican said, "in that case, we have spent the whole day discussing how to deal with the burning of a flag in Central Park, and have come to a conclusion that does not deal with the problem." The burning of a flag in New York's Central Park during an anti-Vietnam war demonstration this spring set off the whole flag uproar.

At one point during the debate, Rep. James Haley, D - Fla., said flag burners should be taken out to sea, tied to anchor, thrown overboard, and told to swim to another country. Lusty applause.

Violaters of the law could be fined $1,000 and imprisoned for one year. The Senate will take up the bill next and it is assumed will insert "burning" omitted in the House scramble.

IN OTHER House action, a bill aimed at jailing professional agitators who stir up race riots was rushed through the Judiciary Committee and quickly endorsed by House Speaker John McCormack. The bill provides safeguards against depriving Negroes of their civil rights, but would jail up to five years anyone who crosses a state boundary to "incite, organize, promote or encourage a riot." Prompt action is expected in the House.

THE HOUSE members had reason to be stringent. Several riots have already hit major cities North and South. And last week, 16 members of a Negro anarchist group were arrested on charges of planning to assassinate moderate civil rights leaders including Roy Wilkins, NAACP director, and Whitney Young, executive director of the National Urban League. Seized in the pre-dawn raids Wednesday in New York and Philadelphia were more than 30 weapons, 1,000 rounds of ammunition, explosives, 275 packets of heroin, Red Chinese flags, and a large portrait of Mao Tse-Tung. The suspects allegedly belong to a Revoluntary Action Movement (RAM) directed from Peking.

Atlanta sustained four straight nights of rioting during which a Negro man was shot to death and a young Negro boy critically wounded. A dispute flared over who fired the shots, a sniper or the police. Mayor Ivan Allen clamped a curfew on a six-block area encompassing the center of violence in predominately Negro Dixie Hills.

Garrison Challenged

NEW ORLEANS District Attorney Jim Garrison was accused by the National Broadcasting Company of foisting a JFK conspiracy case on the public composed of lies, threats, fear, suspicion, and exploitation. NBC made the claims in a television documentary.

Garrison immediately branded the program "the big lie." Main points made by NBC were (1) that Garrison's case against Clay Shaw is based on testimony that did not pass a lie detector test Garrison ordered — and Garrison knew it. (2) Garrison's staff has threatened and offered inducements to potential witnecces. (3) The results of his 4-months of litigation have been to damage reputations, to spread fear and suspicion, and worst of all, to exploit the nation's sorrow and doubts about President Kennedy's death.

GARRISON claims Clay Shaw and a mysterious "Clay Bertrand" is one and the same. NBC said a "Clem" Bertrand does exist. It is a pseudonym used by a homosexual in New Orleans.

PERRY RUSSO, a key witness for Garrison, supplied NBC with data, all the time keeping in close contact with Garrison's office. Russo later charged that the NBC news team sought his help to "wreck the Garrison investigation." He said NBC alternated promises and threats in repeated efforts to enlist his cooperation. The network denied it.

Russo was the witness whom the network claimed failed the lie detector test.

Garrison blamed the Washington Establishment, namely the CIA, for getting NBC to blast him.

AS THE controversy took on tiresome proportions, the New Orleans Metropolitan Crime Commission asked for a full state inquiry — in short, an investigation of the investigators. The appeal was made to Louisiana Attorney General Jack Gremillion. He refused.

Garrison said the Commission should turn its complaints over to a grand jury.

Meanwhile, Judge Edward Haggerty said that the "conduct of some persons" involved in the assassination conspiracy case had acted deplorably and contemptuously of the court's orders. Did he mean Russo alone, or was Garrison included? Haggerty said he would attend to the violators after the Shaw trial.

THE American Medical Association liberalized its stand on therapeutic abortion while the Vatican stuck to its guns on the Catholic Church's ancient rule of celibacy for its priests.

POPE Paul VI voiced "great pain" over criticism and defections in the rank of the clergy, saying the law is as good and necessary as ever in the 20th century world. An estimated 2,000 cases are under review involving priests who have renounced the priesthood for married life.

By an overwhelming vote, the AMA's ruling House of Delegates adopted a policy statement that it was medically proper for a physician to induce abortion on three conditions, but only if the abortion was documented in a prescribed hospital and if the decision was concurred in by two other physicians in writing.

A LOT OF THINGS happened at the United Nations on the way to the summit meeting in Glasboro New Jersey. Premier Kosygin demanded that Israel be branded the aggressor in the Israeli-Arab war, to give up captured territory immediately, and to pay reparations. Israili Foreign Minister Abba Eban rejected the notion, and said Russia, supplier of Arabian arms, should be censured for making such a suggestion.

American Ambassador Arthur Goldberg rejected the demands, too, as he did Soviet charges that the United States instigated the conflict.

President Charles de Gaulle of France blamed Israel for starting the war and urged that she give up her new territorial gains. De Gaulle conceded, however, that Israel should be allowed to lead its own life, an dcondemned the Arabs for threatening to destroy Israel.

ISRAEL, The United States, and Russia all gave their plans for solving the Middle East friction. They involved rights of passage in the Gulf of Aqaba, refugee problems, disposition of Jerusalem, limits on the arms race, and so on. Egypt, meanwhile, was convinced the Soviets had not abandoned them following Kosygin's address. And Soviet President Nikolia Podgorny flew to Cairo to reassure them more.

Highlight of the week's session was a heated reply by Secretary-General U Thant to Israel's charge that he withdrew the Sinai peace - keeping force too soon. Thant appeared furious as he noted Israeli provocations for 10 years across the border, and furthermore, that he had asked Israel to place the force inside their frontiers when Nasser demanded they be withdrawn. Israel refused. Foreign Minister Eban made his usual eloquent repiy, but ignored Thant's main point.

To complicate things a bit more, Red China exploded a hydrogen bomb. This probably accounted as much for the summit meeting as the Middle East nut cracker.

Man in white shirt is Michael Natale Rocco, 42, who walked through police barriers and tried to enter the Soviet Mission in New York. Police seized him at the door. He was carrying a loaded .32 caliber pistol and hunting knife in a small bag. Police said they let him through the lines to see if he was operating alone. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

The Week's Twin Cities-Area News In Review

NEWS IN the Twin Cities and Northeast Louisiana the past week ranged from the selection of beauty queens and plant dedications to a bank robbery with all the elements of a tragi-comedy.

In the robbery, the Bank of Choudrant was robbed of $4,200 by a gunman who entered shortly before noon Thursday. Later arrested after his automobile had wrecked near Sibley and charged with the robbery by Lincoln Parish authorities was Cedric Clay Walker, 45, who gave many places as his address. Authorities found approximately $4,000 in the wrecked automobile. Held in connection with the case was the man's wife, Mrs. Vera Walker,24. At the wreck scene, a 16-year-old youth, Mike Rogers, who had gone to the aid of Walker when he was injured in the wreck, was wounded with a .22 caliber pistol bullet in the face. Mrs. Walker, who had taken the youth to the hospital, was arrested on her way back to the scene of her husband's wreck. The boy was working in a nearby field when he went to Walker's aid. Walker, who suffered severe injuries, was arrested at the wreck scene and taken to the Lincoln General Hospital.

In Monroe, two persons were killed in a two-car headon collision on the U.S. 165 bypass. The victims were Walter F. Mann, 74, of Finley, Ohio, driver and only occupant of one of the cars, and Frances Shirley Frazier, 14, a Negro, a passenger in the other car. Officers said the accident happened when Mann apparently turned the wrong way into the south-bound lanes of the bypass. At Delhi, Ferris Newpon Moore, 45, a farmer from Dunn, was killed when the tractor he was driving overturned.

AT MINDEN, 21 residents began taking rabies shots on Thursday after Authorities reported a dead kitten was found to be rabid. Each person taking the shots was believed to have come into contact with the animal.

The Ouachita Valley Council of the Boy Scouts of America walked off with a top honor during the week. It was named the number one council in membership growth in Region Five during 1966-67. The growth represents a 22 per cent gain in membership from May 31, 1 66, to May 31, 1967.

DECIDES DISPUTE

At Bastrop, the Morehouse Parish Police Jury finally decided a long dispute when it authorized Sheriff Hughie Perry to notify owners of 112 confiscated doe deer that they could have the animals. The doe deer were killed during a controversial half-day hunt at the Georgia-Pacific Game Management area on Nov. 25, 1966, set by the Louisiana State Wild Life and Fisheries Commission. The Morehouse jury had opposed it and ordered Perry to seize all animals killed. The courts finally ruled that the state commission was within its rights in setting the half-day season.

UNION Parish's school board was placed under federal court order to desegregate its school system for the 1967-68 school year. The order was issued by Federal District Judge Ben C. Dawkins Jr., at Shreveport and includes all grades in the system. On the subject of schools, State Superintendent of Education William J. Dodd told the Monroe Rotary Club that Louisiana's greatest resource is our youth and our biggest job is educating them. He also commented that Louisiana is fortunate in having only 66 school systems as compared with the hundreds of systems in some states.

As a result of the defeat of the one-cent Fifth District Sales Tax proposal, sharp economy measures were being taken in some areas. In Monroe, Mayor W. L. Howard said that 30 employes were eliminated from the city payroll on Thursday. He said the employes were taken from "all the departments in which they could possibly be done without. The mayor said the possibility of a five-day week for police officers is, as yet, not in sight.

MEANWHILE, the Legislature got its first chance to decide whether it wants a 10-day special session to override vetoes by Gov. John McKeithen. A constitutional amendment approved last November made the veto session possible after each regular or fiscal session if they are voted by the lawmakers. Secretary of State Wade O. Martin sent the ballots out the past Monday, giving legislators 14 days to return them. However, there was a general feeling that no session would be held. Said House Speaker Vail M. Delony, "There is nothing to have a veto session."

Tickets for the 1967 Miss Louisiana Pageant, scheduled for June 28-July 1 in Neville Auditorium went on sale. Miss Mary Ann Mobley, a native of Mississippi and a Miss America in 1959 will emcee the pageant.

A fire early in the week damaged three businesses on DeSiard Street. Damaged were the Capitol Steak House, the Star Hardware and Furniture Company annex and the Mark Brown Credit Cothiers. No estimate of damage was available.

AT A Ouachita Parish School Board meeting Tuesday night, the possibility of another sales tax for education was raised, following defeat of the Fifth District Tax proposal just 10 days before. Parish Supt. Milton C. Hall said he had contacted Van D Odom, superintendent of the city system, about the possibility. However city board members at that time were not willing to take a stand for or against the possibility of a one-half cent sales tax until it could study the matter. Hall said many people had told him after defeat of the other tax that "we could come back with a one-half cent sales tax for education only and pass it. The plan is under study by the board's finance committee.

PROGRESS NOTED

The progress Northeast Louisiana is making in industrial expansion was also noted. A groundbreaking ceremony was held for the Lauren Glass Company at a site between Ruston and Simsboro. The new plant will be a multi-million dollar facility. Gov. John McKeithen, participating in the event, praised the company for its decision to locate in this area. The plant will be named the "Easterby Plant" in honor of the firm's president, E. D. Easterby, who also attended the event and predicted the facility would employ 500 persons by early 1970's.

MCKEITHEN also participated in the dedication of the Wells Lamont Corporation glove factory at Oak Grove at which he re-emphasized the "New Louisiana." The plant was constructed through Louisiana's industry inducement program, with a $450,000 bond issue voted by the taxpayers of West Carroll Parish. Donald J. Wells, president of the corporation of Chicago, Ill., performed the ribbon cutting ceremonies.

Meanwhile, Northeast Louisiana State College reported a record number of students enrolled for the institution's 12-week summer session. Officials said a total of 3,091 students are enrolled, an increase of 23.9 per cent over last year's total of 2,494.

ON FRIDAY, the Monroe City Council adopted what was termed "a tight budget" of $5 million for the 1967-68 fiscal year. Mayor W. L. Howard emphasized at the council meeting that the budget provides no surplus and that the budget must be followed since there is no surplus. "I am going to refuse to sign checks for anything not in the budget," he said. The budget does provide for a number of expenditures, including retention of the $60 per month bonus for city policemen and firemen. Also included was permission to Police Chief James C. Kelly Jr. to hire about 25 new officers, $180,000 to extend runways at the Municipal Airport, $184,000 for the Monroe Civic Center, and money for the purchase of two new police vehicles. In other action, the council issued a directive to all department heads and superintendents, stating that effective immediately Ed Waldron, secretary to the council, was authorized to act in behalf of the council toward "each and every department in order to better coordinate manpower and equipment under certain conditions." Also at the meeting, Commissioner H. W. McSherry announced changes in the city bus schedules to become effective July 1. According to McSherry, certain of the buses are taking in "very little revenue" and the discontinuation of some service will result in a savings to the city of $12,000 per year.

WANTS COMMITTEE NAMED

MEANWHILE, the Ouachita Parish Industrial Coordinating Committee recommended that Twin Cities councils and the Ouachita Parish Jury "as soon as possible" appoint members to the Ouachita Port Commission. The move in effect meant that a majority of the commissioners would be appointed by this coming week as the coordinating committee is chaired by West Monroe Mayor W. B. Hatten and includes Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard.

The motion for the recommendation came only after nearly an hour's discussion with T. W. Humphries desenting. Humphries, president of the Ouachita Parish Police Jury, maintained throughout that the seven - man commission, once appointed, had the authority to issue bonds, backed, according to the constitutional amendment, by the "full faith and credit" of the police jury.

Leslie L. Glasgow, director of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, reported that William J. Gillespie Jr., had been cleared of accusations by a former agent. At the same time, Glasgow announced Gillespie's promotion to assistant chief of the enforcement division. Parnell Barfield had charged earlier that Gillespie had ordered agents to seine the Tensas River for a fish fry. Glasgow said he was personally convinced that Gillespie was guiltless in the issue.

BEAUTY PAGEANT

Forty - three beauty queens, and former beauty queens, including Miss America, 1959, Mary Ann Mobley, will begin arriving in Monroe today for the 1967 Miss Louisiana Pageant which opens Wednesday. The pageant, sponsored by the Monroe Jayeees, will get underway with the "Parade of Beauties" through downtown Monroe. Formal competition will begin Wednesday night at Neville High School auditorium and will run through the crowning of the new state beauty queen Saturday night.

Mal Cooley was installed as the new president of the Advertising Club of Monroe - West Monroe the past week. Other officers installed at the group's annual banquet Friday night at the Paragon Club were Norman Perry, vice president, and Eric Wade, secretary - treasurer.

Serving as acting president of the Student Government Association at Northeast Louisiana State College during the summer session is Nelda Culpepper of Jonesboro. She was elected SGA secretary last spring. The president, Steve Huffman of Monroe, is not attending summer school.

NEW PEACH QUEEN

At Ruston, Pam McCarty was selected Queen Dixie Gem XVIII at the Louisiana Peach Festival Friday night. Valerie Lynn Ellis, age 5, won the title of Princess Peach.

The School of Pharmacy at Northeast Louisiana State College has received a $5,000 grant from the National Science Foundation for the purchase of instructional scientific equipment. Announcement of the grant was made by Dr. Ben F. Cooper, dean of the School of Pharmacy, who said the grant would be matched by Northeast funds.

Meanwhile in Washington, Fifth District Congressman Otto E. Passman urged caution rather than enthusiasm over the prospects of coastal states receiving 37½ per cent royalties from offshore mineral production adjacent to their respective coasts. A prepared statement by Passman said that Louisiana people should not take too much encouragement from tidelands legislation pending in Congress. "The prospects of getting such a bill passed is a touch - and - go matter," Passman said.

DID YOU know that Israel General Moshe Dayan spent several weeks with U.S. troops in Vietnam last August? In battle after battle, he reported he was astonished at the mobility and firepower of the American forces. In one fight, he noted U.S. units laid down 21,000 shells — more than the total artillery fire expended by Israeli troops in the 1948 and 1956 victories over the Arabs.

She Tolled 'Em

Out in California, where they grow a lot of nuts, a curious new custom was recently started in churches which might be described as Orthodox Liberal. To express their outrage when a convicted murderer was executed — the first in 10 years — certain clergymen tolled their church bells.

Said Mrs. Ronald Reagan, wife of the governor: "I think it would be nice, too, if they rang church bells everytime a man is murdered."

Peace-Loving Soviets

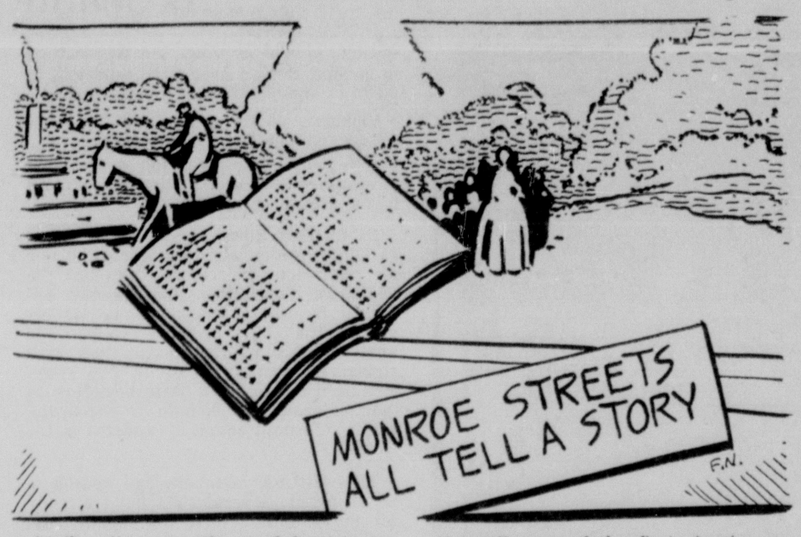
The peace - loving Soviet Union — this is written in jest — is reported to have offered to sell the government of India 200 of the latest type fighter-bombers, and India is said to be seriously considering the offer.

How do they expect to pay for them? With borrowed money from the United States.

Street Names Reflect City's History

The names of pioneer settlers, saints, and great men of history, were used to designate streets when early mapping operations were undertaken here. The following account gives an insight into the origins of many of the street names.

By CHUCK STANEART
Staff Writer



Ever wonder about Calypso Street, or Telemaque or Grand? Monroe's street names present a myraid of stories abounding with local color and history.

A marquis, an unused carriage, a muddy riverbank and a deflated ego all contributed to Monroe's early road construction. When the Marquis de Maison Rouge arrived at Fort Miro to take possession of his vast holdings, he brought with him a huge, ornate carriage with which he hoped to impress the provincials. When he disembarked, however, he was surprised to find not a single road, only a muddy river landing. So the carriage went back to France on the very same vessel without ever having soiled its wheels in the New World, and the Marquis remained to instigate a road building program.

Monroe's first street paralleled the the river and was named Grand Street. Literally, it meant the "great" street as it was part of the "Great King's Highway."

FAVORITE SAINTS

As Don Juan Filhiol began mapping out the city plan, he chose the names of his favorite saints for several streets in town. St. John was an important street. There was also a St. Anne, now Harrison. St. Anne still remains as the alley between the Francis Hotel and St. Matthew's Catholic Church. And a St. George previously existed along the river.

As the city grew, the need for streets increased and naturally, these additions had to be named. Many of the downtown streets claim the names of early settlers. Filhiol, a modest man, named the streets of Fort Miro after his associates, but none for himself.

There was Bry, christened after the noted figure, Judge Henry Bry, the first judge of the parish court. Louis Breard, an officer in the French navy who served with Lafayette in the Americin Revolution, contributed his name to one of the early streets. Layton was named for Robert Layton, one of the prominent early planters and his plantation. Grammont was named for Filhiol's son, christened after the Duc d'Grammont, a French nobleman instrumental in the colonization of the New World. Bres Street, named for the Bres family, which claims one of the first Ouachita Parish natives to enter the priesthood—Father Jerome Bres, came next. DeSiard Street was formerly the "road to the DeSiard Plantation." The DeSiard family was one of the earliest in the area and moved later to holdings in south Louisiana. Unfortunately no namesakes still live in Monroe. Hudson Lane and Stubbs Ave. both commemorate early planter families.

Naturally one of the first streets was Miro, named for Don Esteban Miro, the Spanish governor at the time of the Filhiol grant.

AMERICANIZED NAMES

After ethe Louisiana Purchase, as the settlement changed from French to American, a rush of Americanized names was adopted for the streets. Jackson could only have been named for Andrew Jackson, president and general, whose defense of New Orleans revered him to Louisianas. Jefferson, Washington and Harrison, formerly St. Anne, were also named for the presidents.

Judge Henry Bry, feeling that a small wilderness town could do with some classical heritage, christened Calypso and Telemaque streets after the Greek mythological figures.

Louisville Avenue, we speculated, was of an early origin, probably meaning the town, "ville," of Louis, any one of several French kings.

The origin of Olive, Oak, Wood, Pine and Catalpa is evident.

Monroe has managed to keep its heritage even in other parts of the city than downtown. College Town and the Forsythe Subdivision are just two of these areas.

In the College Town area, we find Monroe family names: McGuire, Breville, Cole, Filhiol and Betin. There is a Hippolite, named for Hippolite Pargoud; and Armand christened after Armand Breard. There are also American presidents Madison and Lincoln, a governor, Claiborne; a confederate hero, Cameron; explorers, De Soto and LaSalle; and even one named after that little old kite-flyer, Franklin.

Louisiana parish names were also given many College Town streets. There are Madison, Webster, Grant and Lafayette, named for great men in American history. We have a Concordia, meaning "New Paradise," named by LaSalle. There is a LaFourche, named for the Bayou, which means the "fork," and a Rapides, named for the rapids in the Red River. Sabine Street, named after the parish, commemorates an incident which took place on the shore of Lake Lobos. French adventurers and pirates, after plying the men of an Indian tribe with liquor, sailed away with all their squaws, an event similar to the Roman "rape of the Sabines," hence the name.

FAMOUS NAMES

The Forsythe subdivision streets are all christened for famous names in Monroe and Louisiana history. Here we find Duval, deBastrop, Racine, Sauvelle and Bienville. Cadillac named for the Louisiana governor, was changed to Whitney, after residents petitioned the city government.

Monroe's streets all tell a story. Pargoud Drive, Avenue and Boulevard are named for the Pargoud family. And we have quite an assortment with Civil War battles and generals, Manassas, Vicksburg and Dick Taylor. There is even one named for an early doctor in Monroe, McEnery Street.

An interesting fact is that Lamy Lane, named for the Lamy family plantation, is mispronounced. It should be the French, Lame'. And a mystery we never cleared up is the existence of "K" Street. This seems to be the only street in the city that bears a letter of the alphabet.

Every city has its heritage from the past, and Monroe is no exception. So take a history lesson the next time you drive around the city. It's fascinating.

EARLY MIRO had no roads to provide for travel in an ornate carriage which he brought from France, a marquis discovered unhappily.

Europe's Working Princes Find Routine Is Exacting, With No Days Off From Duty

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP) — Members of the lofty profession of princemanship work a seven-day week, long hours and have no union.

Chances of strikes, however, are about as remote as a blind mouse scoring one in a bowling alley.

Who are the working princes of Europe?

Taking the married ones first, they are:

Prince Bernhard, who will be 56 on June 29, husband of Queen Juliana of The Netherlands; Prince Philip, who was 46 on June 10, husband of Queen Elizabeth II of England; Prince Albert, 33, brother of King Baudouin of the Belgians, and Prince Charles, brother of Luxembourg's reigning Grand Duke Jean.

The bachelor princes are:

Crown Prince Carl Gustaf, 21, of Sweden; Crown Prince Harald, 30, of Norway, and Prince Bertil, 55, of Sweden, second son of King Gustaf Adolf. The king's eldest son was killed in an airplane crash in 1947.

Then there's Prince Charles, the Prince of Wales, heir to the British throne, a schoolboy of 18, and as such, hardly to be included among the working princes.

Not royal, but escorts to a pair of royal princesses, are two hard - working Britons, Lord Snowdon, 37, and Angus Ogilvy, 38.

The Earl of Snowdon is the husband of Princess Margaret, the queen's only sister. A professional photographer and a good one, he is art adviser to Lord Thomson's Sunday Times.

Ogilvy, who has rejected a title, preferring to remain plain "mister," is the husband of Princess Alexandra, first cousin of the Earl of Airlie. He is the director of many companies and a tireless helper at royal chores.

What is the hardest part of a working prince's job?

Friends say that for the younger, less experienced ones, the toughest thing is meeting and talking to so many people.

As husbands of royal ladies, the princes dwell in the glare of publicity's sometimes cruel spotlight. Thousands of people watch and question their moves. They come in for a lot of criticism an advice. And, lastly, they deal with extraordinary individuals, in some cases possessors of huge egos. In private they often complain about their hours.

In Britain's interest, Prince Philip travels the world, being away from London for long spells at a time. Every time this happens, the gossips begin whispering.

"Is there a rift in the royal romance?" they ask.

Neither the prince nor the queen ever comment on such gossip. They don't have to. There is no rift.

Europe's working princes spend hundreds of hours at official and private dinners, luncheons, cocktail parties, charity balls, and other functions, escorting their ladies.

The bachelors usually go it alone. But sometimes a suitable partner for a particular party is found. This, too, starts the wagging of tongues.

"Royal romance?" they ask.

SOFT-SPOKEN SHY

He is soft-spoken and a bit shy. While Prince Philip and Prince Bernhard actively boost their nation's business and perform super jobs of salesmanship, Prince Harald ducks the commercial side of princemanship.

Harald is the active chairman of the Royal Norwegian Sailing Club. Along with his father, the widowed King Olav V, he is a member of the International Yachting Union, the sport's governing body.

In Sweden, Crown Prince Gustaf is still at school, and representing his country officially up to now only part-time.

He has just finished a trip aboard the Swedish ship, Aelvsnabben, a sort of good-will craft that yearly sails the world with its young cadets.

During his trip the crown prince matured a lot. He met a great many people in a great many places and admits he was awfully nervous at first.

"But," he said on his return, "I soon got over it."

Prince Bertil is a resounding success as a kind of Swedish ambassador-at-large. He is constantly on the move between his villa on the French Riviera, the Stockholm palace, South America and other lands.

When the king is ill or out of Sweden, Bertil is regent. He is an excellent and witty speaker and much sought after as a speaker.

He keeps in contact with many Swedish youth organizations and is one of the hardest working of the working princes.

In Belgium, Prince Albert has one of the world's prettiest princess wives, the shapely blonde Princess Paola, born Donna Paola Margherita Maria Antonia Ruffo di Calabria-in Italy.

Prince Albert is a senator, chairman of the Belgian Red Cross, and chairman of the Belgian Foreign Trade Office. He and Paola have three young children.

Prince Albert makes at least one trade trip abroad each year, heading delegations of Belgian trade experts, businessmen and bankers.

Close by Belgium and married to an American, the daughter of former U. S. Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon, is Prince Charles of Luxembourg.

He and his wife play, too, but they also work.

Prince Charles did such an energetic job of attracting American companies to his tiny nation that Luxembourg decided six years ago it had enough foreign companies.

From 1959 to 1961, Prince Charles was chairman of Luxembourg's Board of Industrial Development.

He wed Joan Dillon last year.

As articulate in any company as is Prince Philip in England, Prince Bernard of The Netherlands is, perhaps, a less imperious talker, ready to talk in interviews with the press and television about himself, his family, and the profession of princemanship.

SWEDEN HAS two working princes — although one works only part-time: Crown Prince Carl Gustaf, 21, left, and Prince Bertil, 55, center, seen at the opening of Parliament in 1966. (Man at right not identified.) Carl Gustaff is still in school, but sometimes represents his country officially. He is the son of King Gustaf Adolf's eldest son, who was killed in a plane crash in 1947. Prince Bertil, the king's second son, serves as regent when the king is ill or out of the country. Bertil also travels widely as a sort of Swedish ambassador-at-large, with notable success. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

THE PAY IS GOOD and the fringe benefits are luxurious, but the hours are long and the work can be arduous or tedious, for the husbands of queens. Here Prince Philip, left, husband of Queen Elizabeth II of England, and Prince Bernhard, husband of Queen Juliana of The Netherlands, meet during a visit by Philip to Amsterdam last April. Both are articulate, and both are rated as super salesmen of their countries and their products, which they spend many hours promoting. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

West Clan Once Terrorized Winn Parish Area

By RAY P. EAGLES
Correspondent

WINNFIELD — Many stories have been written about a notorious outlaw gang, identified as the West Clan, that terrorized citizens of Winn Parish following the Civil War.

The personal papers of the late B. W. Bailey, who died at 93 years of age on Feb. 3, 1961, have yielded the most authentic account of the John West outlaws' activities, according to local historians.

Bailey was born in 1868, six miles south of Winnfield and six miles northeast of the John West home on Iatt Creek, used as headquarters for West's band of outlaws.

During his career, Bailey was a leader in the Populist movement in Winn, and published for a time, a Populist newspaper, The Comrade, and was elected as sheriff for a four year term in 1900 as a populist candidate.

POPULIST CANDIDATE

He was also elected a member of the Louisiana Constitutional Convention of 1898, running as a Populist, and at his death in 1961, he was the last surviving member of the 1898 Convention. For a number of years, Bailey was president of the Bank of Winnfield, and had numerous investment interests here.

His account of the West Clan follows:

"John West, who lived three miles southeast of Atlanta, La., a prosperous farmer, as prosperity was known in those days, served the whole four years as a loyal soldier in the Confederate army, stationed at Vicksburg, paroled and exchanged at Alexandria together with his comrades-in arms.

"He returned to his home explosive with bitterness against society, and set about organizing a band of men he was willing to trust to rob and murder the migrants from the states east on their way to black lands of Texas to grow cotton and cattle, employing the old Indian trail in their immigration, running from St. Augustine by way of San Antonio to Mexico City.

"One branch of the trail from San Antonio reached the Pacific coast and thence up the coast to Puget Sound.

"The "clan" as it was known, did not confine its operation exclusively to the imigrants. It began stealing horses and cattle and terrorizing the citizens of the parish, robbing and killing. They burned the court house and assassinated the district attorney on a lonely road from Columbia to Winnsboro in Lafourche swamp.

INDICTMENTS, ALIBIS

"Some members of the clan were indicted, but they were always able to furnish a complete alibi, and from fear of reprisals, no jury could be found that would convict any of them. They grew bolder in their depredations. They intercepted the messenger, sent from the military post at Natchitoches to Monroe for the payroll for the post and murdered him at a place in Ward 10 now known as Yankee Springs.

"While the messenger kneeled at the spring to drink, he was shot in the back of the head. They took the payroll and the messenger's horse. At that time there were only two railroads in the state west of Mississippi river, one from Vicksburg to Monroe, the other from New Orleans to Morgan City. There were no banks in the state outside of New Orleans.

"The citizenship became so aroused and terrified that a small number agreed to send a representative to New Orleans to consult the governor, advising him of the conditions. Jim Maybin, a leading citizen was elected. He made the trip to New Orleans, the capital having been removed from Baton Rouge, and laid the case before Henry Clay Warmouth, who was governor at that time, appealing to him for help.

"The governor told Maybin to go back, gather all the men he needed, hunt down the outlaws and kill them. Maybin replied he could do that but he also stated that in so doing he and his friends did not want to face a charge in courts of mass murder and conspiracy.

"Warmouth then asked Maybin how many men he needed to do the job. Maybin told the governor that 25 was all he needed. The governor turned to his desk and wrote out 25 pardons and handed them to Maybin, with his statement that should any of his men be hauled into court and convicted, all that would be necessary would be to fill in the name and date it.

THIS BUILDING, constructed in 1866 by Dr. T. S. Collier, who was the first clerk of court in Winn Parish, stands as a mute survivor from the era of the West gang. It is located on a spot across the road from where the West gang was captured in 1869 in an old two-story building, now gone. (Photo by Ray Eagles)

"Shortly after Maybin returned home a messenger was dispatched advising him that the clan was gathering up citizens, in one case a whole family, and herding them into the Masonic Hall at Atlanta, La. Maybin gathered a posse and hurried to the Masonic Hall where West and his gang held a number of people under guard.

"In looking out through the window in the hall, West discovered there was something on the outside that was not in his schedule. He decided to investigate, and was halted on the stairway, disarmed and placed in custody. West, Loss Kimbrel and other members of the clan were placed in custody.

"They were marched out a short distance, and on the way out West realized what was about to take place and gave to Maybin the distress Masonic sign. Maybin told him he had forfeited all his rights by his lawlessness, murdering men, women and children, and that he must pay the supreme penalty before a firing squad.

"They were lined up and shot. One member, Loss Kimbrel, had a chain vest on under his shirt and when the guns fired he fell like the others and feigned death until the executioners dispersed then got up unhurt and made his way to Texas where he was later hanged to a tree limb for horse stealing.

"Kimbrel is reported to have told his executioners when the rope was around his neck that there was a big banquet in h— that day and unless they hurried, he would miss it. They accomodated him.

"If there was any member of the clan that did not face the firing squad on that fateful day, they hurriedly left the country. At any rate that ended for all time the depredations of the John West Clan.

"There was a legendary story in circulation that West in the late sixties took some ponies on a trip to Texas to dispose of them. There was a strip of land east of the Sabine and west of the Red River that the Republic of Texas claimed and quarreled both with Spain and France about, Texas claiming the lands east of the Sabine to a point just west of the town of Natchitoches. While the controversy was running, this disputed territory became known as 'No man Land' Criminals from several states made it their 'Rendevous.'

"Texas in 1721 established her capital at a point about three miles east of where Robeline now stands in the hope of strengthening her claim to disputed lands, maintaining it there for 50 years to the west of the Sabine River. Conditions in that section grew so turbulent until the federal government sent a small detachment of soldiers there to apprehend the outlaws and punish them as the law directed.

"There is no evidence that any apprehensions were made. A small fort was built about 25 miles east of the Sabine and named Fort Jesup. After sometime the fort was abandoned. There stands a small marble monument to mark the site, all there is left of the fort.

"The boundary line between Texas and Louisiana was established in 1819 as the Sabine River, settling the age old dispute for all time.

"These historical events are referred to for the purpose of exploding the myth that John West secured his inspiration for a criminal career from outlaws that infested in the Sabine area almost a century before he was born."

Norway's crown prince works hardest at promoting sport and youth activities at home and, when abroad, representing his country in international yachting.

SOFT-SPOKEN SHY

He is soft-spoken and a bit shy. While Prince Philip and Prince Bernhard actively boost their nation's business and perform super jobs of salesmanship, Prince Harald ducks the commercial side of princemanship.

Harald is the active chairman of the Royal Norwegian Sailing Club. Along with his father, the widowed King Olav V, he is a member of the International Yachting Union, the sport's governing body.

In Sweden, Crown Prince Gustaf is still at school, and representing his country officially up to now only part-time.

He has just finished a trip aboard the Swedish ship, Aelvsnabben, a sort of good-will craft that yearly sails the world with its young cadets.

During his trip the crown prince matured a lot. He met a great many people in a great many places and admits he was awfully nervous at first.

"But," he said on his return, "I soon got over it."

Prince Bertil is a resounding success as a kind of Swedish ambassador-at-large. He is constantly on the move between his villa on the French Riviera, the Stockholm palace, South America and other lands.

When the king is ill or out of Sweden, Bertil is regent. He is an excellent and witty speaker and much sought after as a speaker.

He keeps in contact with many Swedish youth organizations and is one of the hardest working of the working princes.

In Belgium, Prince Albert has one of the world's prettiest princess wives, the shapely blonde Princess Paola, born Donna Paola Margherita Maria Antonia Ruffo di Calabria-in Italy.

Prince Albert is a senator, chairman of the Belgian Red Cross, and chairman of the Belgian Foreign Trade Office. He and Paola have three young children.

Prince Albert makes at least one trade trip abroad each year, heading delegations of Belgian trade experts, businessmen and bankers.

Close by Belgium and married to an American, the daughter of former U. S. Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon, is Prince Charles of Luxembourg.

He and his wife play, too, but they also work.

Prince Charles did such an energetic job of attracting American companies to his tiny nation that Luxembourg decided six years ago it had enough foreign companies.

From 1959 to 1961, Prince Charles was chairman of Luxembourg's Board of Industrial Development.

He wed Joan Dillon last year.

As articulate in any company as is Prince Philip in England, Prince Bernard of The Netherlands is, perhaps, a less imperious talker, ready to talk in interviews with the press and television about himself, his family, and the profession of princemanship.

SWEDEN HAS two working princes — although one works only part-time: Crown Prince Carl Gustaf, 21, left, and Prince Bertil, 55, center, seen at the opening of Parliament in 1966. (Man at right not identified.) Carl Gustaff is still in school, but sometimes represents his country officially. He is the son of King Gustaf Adolf's eldest son, who was killed in a plane crash in 1947. Prince Bertil, the king's second son, serves as regent when the king is ill or out of the country. Bertil also travels widely as a sort of Swedish ambassador-at-large, with notable success. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

THE PAY IS GOOD and the fringe benefits are luxurious, but the hours are long and the work can be arduous or tedious, for the husbands of queens. Here Prince Philip, left, husband of Queen Elizabeth II of England, and Prince Bernhard, husband of Queen Juliana of The Netherlands, meet during a visit by Philip to Amsterdam last April. Both are articulate, and both are rated as super salesmen of their countries and their products, which they spend many hours promoting. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

West Clan Once Terrorized Winn Parish Area

Correspondent

WINNFIELD — Many stories have been written about a notorious outlaw gang, identified as the West Clan, that terrorized citizens of Winn Parish following the Civil War.

The personal papers of the late B. W. Bailey, who died at 93 years of age on Feb. 3, 1961, have yielded the most authentic account of the John West outlaws' activities, according to local historians.

Bailey was born in 1868, six miles south of Winnfield and six miles northeast of the John West home on Catt Creek, used as headquarters for West's band of outlaws.

During his career, Bailey was a leader in the Populist movement in Winn, and published for a time, a Populist newspaper, The Comrade, and was elected as sheriff for a four year term in 1900 as a populist candidate.

POPULIST CANDIDATE

He was also elected a member of the Louisiana Constitutional Convention of 1898, running as a Populist, and at his death in 1961, he was the last surviving member of the 1898 Convention. For a number of years, Bailey was president of the Bank of Winnfield, and had numerous investment interests here.

His account of the West Clan follows:

"John West, who lived three miles southeast of Atlanta, La., a prosperous farmer, as prosperity was known in those days, served the whole four years as a loyal soldier in the Confederate army, stationed at Vicksburg, paroled and exchanged at Alexandria together with his comrades-in arms.

"He returned to his home explosive with bitterness against society, and set about organizing a band of men he was willing to trust to rob and murder the migrants from the states east on their way to black lands of Texas to grow cotton and cattle, employing the old Indian trail in their immigration, running from St. Augustine by way of San Antonio to Mexico City.

"One branch of the trail from San Antonio reached the Pacific coast and thence up the coast to Puget Sound.

"The "clan" as it was known, did not confine its operation exclusively to the imigrants. It began stealing horses and cattle and terrorizing the citizens of the parish, robbing and killing. They burned the court house and assassinated the district attorney on a lonely road from Columbia to Winnsboro in Lafourche swamp.

INDICTMENTS, ALIBIS

"Some members of the clan were indicted, but they were always able to furnish a complete alibi, and from fear of reprisals, no jury could be found that would convict any of them. They grew bolder in their depredations. They intercepted the messenger, sent from the military post at Natchitoches to Monroe for the payroll for the post and murdered him at a place in Ward 10 now known as Yankee Springs.

"While the messenger kneeled at the spring to drink, he was shot in the back of the head. They took the payroll and the messenger's horse. At that time there were only two railroads in the state west of Mississippi river, one from Vicksburg to Monroe, the other from New Orleans to Morgan City. There were no banks in the state outside of New Orleans.

"The citizenship became so aroused and terrified that a small number agreed to send a representative to New Orleans to consult the governor, advising him of the conditions. Jim Maybin, a leading citizen was elected. He made the trip to New Orleans, the capital having been removed from Baton Rouge, and laid the case before Henry Clay Warmouth, who was governor at that time, appealing to him for help.

"The governor told Maybin to go back, gather all the men he needed, hunt down the outlaws and kill them. Maybin replied he could do that but he also stated that in so doing he and his friends did not want to face a charge in courts of mass murder and conspiracy.

"Warmouth then asked Maybin how many men he needed to do the job. Maybin told the governor that 25 was all he needed. The governor turned to his desk and wrote out 25 pardons and handed them to Maybin, with his statement that should any of his men be hauled into court and convicted, all that would be necessary would be to fill in the name and date it.

THIS BUILDING, constructed in 1866 by Dr. T. S. Collier, who was the first clerk of court in Winn Parish, stands as a mute survivor from the era of the West gang. It is located on a spot across the road from where the West gang was captured in 1869 in an old two-story building, now gone. (Photo by Ray Eagles)

"Shortly after Maybin returned home a messenger was dispatched advising him that the clan was gathering up citizens, in one case a whole family, and herding them into the Masonic Hall at Atlanta, La. Maybin gathered a posse and hurried to the Masonic Hall where West and his gang held a number of people under guard.

"In looking out through the window in the hall, West discovered there was something on the outside that was not in his schedule. He decided to investigate, and was halted on the stairway, disarmed and placed in custody. West, Loss Kimbrel and other members of the clan were placed in custody.

"They were marched out a short distance, and on the way out West realized what was about to take place and gave to Maybin the distress Masonic sign. Maybin told him he had forfeited all his rights by his lawlessness, murdering men, women and children, and that he must pay the supreme penalty before a firing squad.

"They were lined up and shot. One member, Loss Kimbrel, had a chain vest on under his shirt and when the guns fired he fell like the others and feigned death until the executioners dispersed then got up unhurt and made his way to Texas where he was later hanged to a tree limb for horse stealing.

"Kimbrel is reported to have told his executioners when the rope was around his neck that there was a big banquet in h— that day and unless they hurried, he would miss it. They accomodated him.

"If there was any member of the clan that did not face the firing squad on that fateful day, they hurriedly left the country. At any rate that ended for all time the depredations of the John West Clan.

"There was a legendary story in circulation that West in the late sixties took some ponies on a trip to Texas to dispose of them. There was a strip of land east of the Sabine and west of the Red River that the Republic of Texas claimed and quarreled both with Spain and France about, Texas claiming the lands east of the Sabine to a point just west of the town of Natchitoches. While the controversy was running, this disputed territory became known as 'No man Land' Criminals from several states made it their 'Rendevous.'

"Texas in 1721 established her capital at a point about three miles east of where Robeline now stands in the hope of strengthening her claim to disputed lands, maintaining it there for 50 years to the west of the Sabine River. Conditions in that section grew so turbulent until the federal government sent a small detachment of soldiers there to apprehend the outlaws and punish them as the law directed.

"There is no evidence that any apprehensions were made. A small fort was built about 25 miles east of the Sabine and named Fort Jesup. After sometime the fort was abandoned. There stands a small marble monument to mark the site, all there is left of the fort.

"The boundary line between Texas and Louisiana was established in 1819 as the Sabine River, settling the age old dispute for all time.

"These historical events are referred to for the purpose of exploding the myth that John West secured his inspiration for a criminal career from outlaws that infested in the Sabine area almost a century before he was born."

Away From Home

Richard Enwright

Aunt Fanny's Cabin

The Northwest Expressway leaves downtown Atlanta in a rush and whirs out toward the Chattahoochee River. It passes a road which long ago wound its way to Mr. Howell's mill. Past Northside Drive, and West Paces Ferry Road the expressway runs down a steep slope, across the river, and into Cobb County. The area is one of beauty, both natural and industrial. Sleek new buildings, monoliths of steel, glass and concrete, blend with and seem not to disturb tree-covered hills and granite outcroppings.

Out of the river valley the road rises. Trucks wheeze up the steep grade. Around a long bend the expressway turns, and suddenly a sign points to "Aunt Fanny's Cabin."

A macadam road, lined with white board fence, wanders off through the hills toward Smyrna. Soon it comes to a small whitewashed cabin which lives beneath trees near a vine-covered wall. From within comes the smell of frying chicken and hot bread. Once the cabin knew the sounds of happy voices, and then, suddenly, it felt the fire of war. From its front porch, you can see Kennesaw Mountain. One hundred three years ago the mountain would have looked about the same, before the battle.

"We knowed they wuz a'comin. Ain't never heerd sech guns. Man, it seemed like they wuz tryin' to blow old Kennesaw off the Georgie map. "Bout nine the big guns quieted some and alls wuz left wuz skitterin bullets and balls a'whippin the trees. Hyar they come arunin crost the bottomland, blue coats and brass buttins a'gleamin in the sun. Our boys near the bottim dropped most of the firs line. All mornin long the Yanks triede to git up the mountin and all mornin long we beat em back. You can't hardly beat Confederut shooters. But you shoah got to give them Yanks credit; they wuz fightin fools, a'comin up ole Kennesaw like thet."

Aunt Fanny's stands almost in the shadow of the mountain. Now, the only battle sounds come from Yankees and Confederates who have joined in a determined assault on mounds of world renowned fried chicken, smoked Georgia ham, steak, greens, peas, fried corn, rice and cornbread. Attacks falter in the face of more food mounds as a joyful darkfaced, white - toothed boy cries the menu to newcomers. Some who have successfully retreated from Aunt Fanny's swear they can hear the boy in their sleep. Aunt Fanny's really was a slave cabin and parts of it have changed only little through the years. You think of the kindly old negro who helped war - weary soldiers of both armies. What might she think of the discreet but determined signs which now offer a maharaja's variety of credit plans and the equally determined automobile parade which streams up to the front porch? A stone walk ambles to the front door inside of which is a low, clapboard ceiling. Momentoes of the old South and the late Harvey Hester fill the little hall and spread other rooms and the dining area.

"The Yanks got tard of climmin up the mountin and gittin kilt. They moved off to Smyrna and the Chattahoochee. We couldn't do nothin but beat em there. We tried to hol em and fought crost creeks and down in the valleys. Onct we cum by a ole slave cabin and they wuz a ole colored womin a'settin on the poach a'rockin. Can you beat thet? Pretty soon we crost the river. Ole Joe Johnston said he could hole Atlanta forever ifn he ever gits us there."

Harvey Hester was a gentleman, great in heart and girth. He lived to see his friends and who knows how many meals he felt "forced" to share? He had a smile which quickly rumbled into a laugh, and until he died, he loved to tell of people he knew in and out of life. He loved his best friends Jack Dempsey and Susan Hayward, and took personal responsibility for Miss Hayward's marriage to Eaton Chalkey, "The only man she ever loved."

Harvey is gone now, but the almost immortal cabin-restaurant he helped build to greatness goes on, a testimony that southern cooking, faithfully prepared in the old ways, is almost immortal. Yankees still come, more often now, looking for a table amidst Atlanta people. Sounds of the century old battle are long gone, and there is quietness near the cabin. In the night, the expressway moves up to Marietta.

Away From Home

Aunt Fanny's Cabin

The Northwest Expressway leaves downtown Atlanta in a rush and whirs out toward the Chattahoochee River. It passes a road which long ago wound its way to Mr. Howell's mill. Past Northside Drive, and West Paces Ferry Road the expressway runs down a steep slope, across the river, and into Cobb County. The area is one of beauty, both natural and industrial. Sleek new buildings, monoliths of steel, glass and concrete, blend with and seem not to disturb tree-covered hills and granite outcroppings.

Out of the river valley the road rises. Trucks wheeze up the steep grade. Around a long bend the expressway turns, and suddenly a sign points to "Aunt Fanny's Cabin."

A macadam road, lined with white board fence, wanders off through the hills toward Smyrna. Soon it comes to a small whitewashed cabin which lives beneath trees near a vine-covered wall. From within comes the smell of frying chicken and hot bread. Once the cabin knew the sounds of happy voices, and then, suddenly, it felt the fire of war. From its front porch, you can see Kennesaw Mountain. One hundred three years ago the mountain would have looked about the same, before the battle.

"We knowed they wuz a'comin. Ain't never heerd sech guns. Man, it seemed like they wuz tryin' to blow old Kennesaw off the Georgie map. "Bout nine the big guns quieted some and alls wuz left wuz skitterin bullets and balls a'whippin the trees. Hyar they come arunin crost the bottomland, blue coats and brass buttins a'gleamin in the sun. Our boys near the bottim dropped most of the firs line. All mornin long the Yanks triede to git up the mountin and all mornin long we beat em back. You can't hardly beat Confederut shooters. But you shoah got to give them Yanks credit; they wuz fightin fools, a'comin up ole Kennesaw like thet."

Aunt Fanny's stands almost in the shadow of the mountain. Now, the only battle sounds come from Yankees and Confederates who have joined in a determined assault on mounds of world renowned fried chicken, smoked Georgia ham, steak, greens, peas, fried corn, rice and cornbread. Attacks falter in the face of more food mounds as a joyful darkfaced, white - toothed boy cries the menu to newcomers. Some who have successfully retreated from Aunt Fanny's swear they can hear the boy in their sleep. Aunt Fanny's really was a slave cabin and parts of it have changed only little through the years. You think of the kindly old negro who helped war - weary soldiers of both armies. What might she think of the discreet but determined signs which now offer a maharaja's variety of credit plans and the equally determined automobile parade which streams up to the front porch? A stone walk ambles to the front door inside of which is a low, clapboard ceiling. Momentoes of the old South and the late Harvey Hester fill the little hall and spread other rooms and the dining area.

Harvey Hester was a gentleman, great in heart and girth. He lived to see his friends and who knows how many meals he felt "forced" to share? He had a smile which quickly rumbled into a laugh, and until he died, he loved to tell of people he knew in and out of life. He loved his best friends Jack Dempsey and Susan Hayward, and took personal responsibility for Miss Hayward's marriage to Eaton Chalkey, "The only man she ever loved."

Harvey is gone now, but the almost immortal cabin-restaurant he helped build to greatness goes on, a testimony that southern cooking, faithfully prepared in the old ways, is almost immortal. Yankees still come, more often now, looking for a table amidst Atlanta people. Sounds of the century old battle are long gone, and there is quietness near the cabin. In the night, the expressway moves up to Marietta.

"The Yanks got tard of climmin up the mountin and gittin kilt. They moved off to Smyrna and the Chattahoochee. We couldn't do nothin but beat em there. We tried to hol em and fought crost creeks and down in the valleys. Onct we cum by a ole slave cabin and they wuz a ole colored womin a'settin on the poach a'rockin. Can you beat thet? Pretty soon we crost the river. Ole Joe Johnston said he could hole Atlanta forever ifn he ever gits us there."

Optimism Key Word In Dominican Republic

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Signs of peaceful transformation are everywhere in this long-troubled Caribbean republic after only a year of representative democracy.

Optimism, hedged in sensitive financial circles, is replacing old apprehensions. The face of Santo Domingo, first European settlement in the Western Hemisphere, is changing dramatically.

It seems almost certain President Joaquin Balaguer will become the first freely elected Dominican chief of state to finish out a presidential term since Horacio Vasquez did it in 1928. Strong support commitments from the United States and the Organization of American States have been reinforced by spreading confidence in the president's performance in the 12 months since he took office July 1, 1966.

The political front, bubbling ominously only two months ago, has quieted down. The economic problems look grim, but the president and responsible neutral quarters are confident they can be lessened if not overcome.

These are the most impressive aspects of the scene today in this little island nation that was engulfed by a violent civil war only two years ago.

The wounds of that war have not fully healed and they account for occasional outbursts of vendetta-type violence. Still, these tremors are far less sharp than they were a year ago.

Aside from the Communists and their nationalist allies, moderation seems the predominant political mood. A sample: Francisco Pena Gomez, boss of the Dominican Revolutionary party—PRD—Balaguer's bitterest rival in the June 1966, elections, said recently: "There appears to be good faith on the part of the president to avert political repression."

This might also be taken as a measure of the growing confidence in the president. He has balanced the budget, something no chief of state before him had done since Rafael Leonidas Trujillo, the dictator who ran the country like a private household.

The state sugar industry, whose reorganization Balaguer personally directed, will show a profit this year for the first time since 1960. Deficits the last six years had averaged $15 million annually.

Santo Domingo's face lifting

Still, the task of adequately housing Santo Domingo's thousands of poor seems beyond the reach of any Dominican budget. A fringe of squalid wood and cardboard slums, rivaling the worst in neighboring Haiti, is spreading all along the banks of the Ozama River in the city's east side.

Hoover Tells How Citizens Can Help To Battle Crime Increase

(EDITOR'S NOTE: FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover received many letters from ordinary American citizens asking: "What Can I DO TO HELP COMBAT THE RISING TIDE OF CRIME?" In the following article written for United Press International, the FBI chief offers some concrete suggestions.)

By J. EDGAR HOOVER
Director FBI

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Every law-abiding American citizen has an obligation to help combat the alarming upsurge in crime.

You may think there's nothing much you can do as a private citizen. But there is.

Here are some of the concrete ways in which you can throw your weight into the fight against crime:

1. Report your concern to public officials:

It has been noted that we generally get the kind of government we deserve. The same can be said for crime conditions. Crime flourishes in the shadow of official neglect and ineptitude. Directly express your concern to those public officials entrusted with the establishment of law and order.

CRIMINAL LAWS

Vigorously support legislation aimed at strengthening and perfecting both our criminal laws and the agencies charged with their enforcement. The past has seen needed legislation in the area of crime perish through neglect because the individual citizen, the sole beneficiary, did not make himself heard.

Insist upon faultless conduct by those privileged to hold public office. Nothing less will insure the impartial and aggressive leadership we must have in this struggle against crime. The scrutiny of a concerned and vocal public will go a long way toward guaranteeing this leadership.

2. Guide out youth:

Statistics of the past several years have shown a sharp increase in the number of young people arrested for serious crimes—murder, robbery, forcible rape, burglary, aggravated assault, larceny of fifty dollars or more and automobile theft. Those under 18 years of age account for almost half the total arrests reported for these crimes.

In a concentrated effort to control this rash of youthful criminality, innumerable youth-serving groups have joined law enforcement, and our courts. These groups, often desperately in need of support, offer the individual a good opportunity to combat crime, since youthful criminality is uniquely suited to preventing and correction.

However, these efforts in behalf of youth can only supplement —never replace— parental concern. Broken homes, dissolute parents and a tragic absence of guidance typify the backgrounds of many youthful offenders. The role of the parent is paramount. It is indeed difficult to imagine a more fundamental service to society than imbuing one's children with respect for law and order.

3. Obey the law yourself:

While it may be comforting for some to attribute lawlessness to a remote and vaguely defined "criminal elemant," the facts indicate otherwise. Contempt for the law is becoming a national mania, transcending all elements of our society. Scoffaws—those who sneeringly hold themselves above civic responsibility and authority—infest every community.

Inevitably the duties imposed by law will sometimes run counter to our own desires and wishes. When this occurs, one may be tempted to circumvent the law. To yield to such a temptation, even in seemingly small matters, is to seriously undercut constituted authority.

4. Support law enforcement agencies:

The law enforcement officer is our first defense against the fact of crime. Law enforcement, like any profession, varies considerably in quality throughout the country. Admittedly, some officers and agencies are far from perfect—corruption, malfeasance and misconduct do occur. It is, however, distressing to see law enforcement attacked as a general principle. Undeserved vilification, harassment and defiance are encountered with increasing frequency by police officers everywhere.

A reappraisal of the policeman's lot is long overdue. He deserves a great deal more than an indifferent public's bare sufferance. His vigilance, dedication, good judgment and unflinching courage provide us immediate and concrete protection against the ravages of crime. Let each of us become his outspoken advocate and insure his continued effectiveness through adequate compensation, proper training and modern equipment.

5. Aid law enforcement:

The average citizen has frequent opportunities to make a worthwhile contribution to law enforcement. The files of the FBI offer significant proof of the importance of this cooperation. Any number of cases directly involving our national security have been developed and solved largely through information supplied by individual citizens. Similarly, it is a rare police officer who cannot recall instances of alert, concerned citizens exposing criminal activity. Badly wanted fugitives, many of them notorious additions to the FBI's "ten most wanted fugitives" list, have been apprehended through the assistance of individual citizens.

There is every chance that you may actually witness the commission of a crime. Summon aid if this can safely be done. If possible, render treatment to any injured victims. Finally, be a good witness—alert and keenly observant. Accurate and detailed descriptions, carefully noted, logically organized and calmly reported, have brought innumerable criminals to justice.

6. Do not compromise with crime:

There is no such thing as an "insignificant" criminal act. Organized crime, for all its enormous profits and farreaching implications, thrives on the pettiest of human frailties. Illegal gambling, to name but one highly lucrative underworld enterprise, depends overwhelmingly on the small bettors. From them come the immense returns used to finance all manner of nefarious activities. Yet large numbers of otherwise responsible, honest citizens continue to knowingly support this sinister operation, unable to see the harm of a "small" illegal bet.

Organized crime is not alone in this dependency upon widespread, popular support. Isolated acts of larceny and robbery look to a large market among those who ask no questions. Most large cities, in fact, host any number of "thieves' markets" — some of which operate on a continuous basis and are regularly patronized by reputedly honest citizens.

Highlights About Books

Crime In Suburbs Disquieting Book

Crime In the Suburbs, by David Loth (Morrow $4.95): A report on a survey which took freelance writer David Loth to 150 communities from coast to coast in an on-the-scene examination of the problem.

Loth lives in Greenwich, Conn., a New York subrub, so he has good reason to be interested in the question of suburban crime.

When he came to examine the problem, however, he found the available statistics unsatisfactory, so he undertook to find out for himself whether they reflected the facts.

Interviews with law enforcement officials, civic leaders — and criminals — in suburbs from New York to California sustained his belief that the existing figures don't tell the whole story. He learned a great deal.

The idea of crime in the suburbs automatically suggests juvenile crime, and a good part of Loth's book is devoted to this phase of the problem. He points out, however, that there also are a good many adult criminals in suburbia, and suggests reasons why.

He finds that parents whose behavior is extreme in any way — too indulgent, too neglectful or too severe— tend to make delinquents of their children.

"Crime in the Suburbs" is a disquieting report on a serious problem, with one bright aspect which Loth calls "Suburbia's Triumph" — the fact that juvenile offenders in the suburbs are less likely than delinquents in the city to grow into adult criminals.

Congress: Power and Purpose on Capitol Hill, By Raymond M. Lahr and J. William Theis (Allyn and Bacon $3.95): This book is intended as a supplementary text in high school and colleges, to enable young Americans approaching voting age to gain a better idea of how the government works.

From some of the evidence available on Capitol Hill, this is a goal to be ardently sought, almost five million Americans (a goodly number of them teenagers) troop through the Capitol Building each year. Their questions and comments lead Capitol guides to conclude that not all of them have paid close attention in civics class.

"We've seen the House and the Senate; now show us the Congress,' one guide was challenged after finishing his half-hour tour and lecture. "Why didn't we see the Blue Room?" another disoriented tourist asked recently. And in a more common manifestation of an incredible confusion about the separate rolees of the legislative and executive branches, Capitol guides are frequently asked: "Where is the President?" And all the while, congressional titans — with the exception of Everett Dirksen and the Kennedy brothers — pass mong the visitors unrecognized.

Lahr and Theis, if read, will leave no dobut in anybody's mind what Congress is and how it functions. The relationship between the Capitol and the White House is explained. The Supreme Court is explained. The Supreme Court also is fitted properly into the picture.

Everybody and his brother and sometimes his congressman has written a book or at least a magazine piece about what's the matter with Congress. The verdit usually is plenty.

Lahr and Theis are congressional news reporters, not editorial writers. They air the pros as well as the cons of Congress.

The conclusion you are likely to reach after reading their book is the same conclusion most newspapermen have reached on the basis of first-hand observation: If we didn't have a Congress, and if there was nobody around smart enough to invent it, the people would be in a terrible fix.

Son of Rhubard, by H. Allen Smith (Trident, $4.95): It's a long, long trail from "Low Man On A Totem Pole" to "Son of Rhubard", but fun-loving H. Allen Smith has weathered it well.

His latest is another of those improbably plots. This one concerns a cat. Constant readers will remember "Rhubard" with a feline hero of the same name and a kink in his tail, which appeared several years back. This one concerns The Tiger, illegitimate son of Rhubard, littrered in a Puerto Rican back alley. H. Allen seems ready to go into series writing for Hollywood or a bevy of books rivaling the Bobbsey Twins.

The Bobbsey Twins? Heaven forfend! H. Allen does not produce in the Fanny Hill school, but his farfetched tales are couched in terms better fitted for the smoking car than for the ears of babes.

Not content with an outlandish paternity trail — which only a delightfully affected mind could contrive— to determine The Tiger's legitimacy, Smith goes to Texas for a subplot.

It concerns a struggle for control of the secret recipe of the Kockamaney chili firm. The secret of its popularity, it turns out, is its "tumescence factor".

H. Allen from time to time has the ideal man wander through his works. The character's name? H. Allen Smith. He has him talk of writing two books: "Priscilla of Old Levittown" and "I Was Public Relations Director for a House of Ill Fame."

H. Allen Smith — the real one, that is — might write either or both one day. In his way — which sometimes is out — he gets better as he ages; but never mellows.

The Feasts of Memory: A Journey to a Greek Island, by Elias Kulukundis (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $5.95): A young Greek-American sets out to discover the Aegean island of his grandparents and ends up discovering himself. The island is Kasos, a bare rock east of Crete.

Today's visitor comes upon Kasos slumbering away a summer afternoon, bounded by sea foam and wrapped in haze. Elias Kulukundis finds much more.

He finds 3,000 years of history and passion as each succeeding race conquers the island and etches its name in Kasoit rock. Phoenicians, Dorians, Romans, Byzantines, Arabs, Venetians, Turks, Russians, Italians, modern Greeks.

He finds the 19th century world of his grandparents, where ancient formulas of courtship and marriage disguise, but imperfectly, the human feelings lurking beneath. He finds a woman, er, who has an innocentma his great-great grandmother, who has an innocent man beheaded to avenge her husband's murder.

He finds the merchant sea captains of Kasos not above turning their hand to piracy now and again, on their way to becoming the fabulous shipping tycoons of modern-day Greece.

Hoover Tells How Citizens Can Help To Battle Crime Increase

(EDITOR'S NOTE: FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover received many letters from ordinary American citizens asking: "What Can I DO TO HELP COMBAT THE RISING TIDE OF CRIME?" In the following article written for United Press International, the FBI chief offers some concrete suggestions.)

By J. EDGAR HOOVER
Director FBI

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Every law-abiding American citizen has an obligation to help combat the alarming upsurge in crime.

You may think there's nothing much you can do as a private citizen. But there is.

Here are some of the concrete ways in which you can throw your weight into the fight against crime.

1. Report your concern to public officials.

It has been noted that we generally get the kind of government we deserve. The same can be said for crime conditions. Crime flourishes in the shadow of official neglect and ineptitude. Directly express your concern to those public officials entrusted with the establishment of law and order.

CRIMINAL LAWS

Vigorously support legislation aimed at strengthening and perfecting both our criminal laws and the agencies charged with their enforcement. The past has seen needed legislation in the area of crime perish through neglect because the individual citizen, the sole beneficiary, did not make himself heard.

Insist upon faultless conduct by those privileged to hold public office. Nothing less will insure the impartial and aggressive leadership we must have in this struggle against crime. The scrutiny of a concerned and vocal public will go a long way toward guaranteeing this leadership.

2. Guide out youth.

Statistics of the past several years have shown a sharp increase in the number of young people arrested for serious crimes—murder, robbery, forcible rape, burglary, aggravated assault, larceny of fifty dollars or more and automobile theft. Those under 18 years of age account for almost half the total arrests reported for these crimes.

In a concentrated effort to control this rash of youthful criminality, innumerable youth serving groups have joined law enforcement, and our courts. These groups, often desperately in need of support, offer the individual a good opportunity to combat crime, since youthful criminality is uniquely suited to preventing and correction.

However, these efforts in behalf of youth can only supplement—never replace—parental concern. Broken homes, dissolute parents and a tragic absence of guidance typify the backgrounds of many youthful offenders. The role of the parent is paramount. It is indeed difficult to imagine a more fundamental service to society than imbuing one's children with respect for law and order.

3. Obey the law yourself.

While it may be comforting for some to attribute lawlessness to a remote and vaguely defined "criminal element," the facts indicate otherwise. Contempt for the law is becoming a national menace transcending all elements of our society. Scoff flaws—those who sneeringly hold themselves above civic responsibility and authority—infest every community.

Inevitably the duties imposed by law will sometimes run counter to our own desires and wishes. When this occurs, one may be tempted to circumvent the law. To yield to such a temptation, even in seemingly small matters, is to seriously undercut constituted authority.

4. Support law enforcement agencies.

The law enforcement officer is our first defense against the fact of crime. Law enforcement, like any profession, varies considerably in quality throughout the country. Admittedly, some officers and agencies are far from perfect—corruption, malfeasance and misconduct do occur. It is, however, distressing to see law enforcement attacked as a general principle. Undeserved vilification, harassment and defiance are encountered with increasing frequency by police officers everywhere.

A reappraisal of the policeman's lot is long overdue. He deserves a great deal more than an indifferent public's bare sufferance. His vigilance, dedication, good judgment and unflinching courage provide us immediate and concrete protection against the ravages of crime. Let each of us become his outspoken advocate and insure his continued effectiveness through adequate compensation, proper training and modern equipment.

5. Aid law enforcement:

The average citizen has frequent opportunities to make a worthwhile contribution to law enforcement. The files of the FBI offer significant proof of the importance of this cooperation. Any number of cases directly involving our national security have been developed and solved largely through information supplied by individual citizens. Similarly, it is a rare police officer who cannot recall instances of alert, concerned citizens exposing criminal activity. Badly wanted fugitives, many of them notorious additions to the FBI's "ten most wanted fugitives" list, have been apprehended through the assistance of individual citizens.

There is every chance that you may actually witness the commission of a crime. Summon aid if this can safely be done. If possible, render treatment to any injured victims. Finally, be a good witness—alert and keenly observant. Accurate and detailed descriptions, carefully noted, logically organized and calmly reported, have brought innumerable criminals to justice.

6. Do not compromise with crime.

There is no such thing as an "insignificant" criminal act. Organized crime, for all its enormous profits and farreaching implications, thrives on the pettiest of human frailties. Illegal gambling, to name but one highly lucrative underworld enterprise, depends overwhelmingly on the small bettors. From them come the immense returns used to finance all manner of nefarious activities. Yet large numbers of otherwise responsible, honest citizens continue to knowingly support this sinister operation, unable to see the harm of a "small" illegal bet.

Organized crime is not alone in this dependency upon widespread, popular support. Isolated acts of larceny and robbery look to a large market among those who ask no questions. Most large cities, in fact, host any number of "thieves' markets" — some of which operate on a continuous basis and are regularly patronized by reputedly honest citizens.

Highlights About Books

Crime In Suburbs Disquieting Book

Crime In the Suburbs, by David Loth (Morrow $4.95). A report on a survey which took freelance writer David Loth to 150 communities from coast to coast in an on-the-scene examination of the problem.

Loth lives in Greenwich, Conn., a New York subrub, so he has good reason to be interested in the question of suburban crime.

When he came to examine the problem, however, he found the available statistics unsatisfactory, so he undertook to find out for himself whether they reflected the facts.

Interviews with law enforcement officials, civic leaders — and criminals — in suburbs from New York to California sustained his belief that the existing figures don't tell the whole story. He learned a great deal.

The idea of crime in the suburbs automatically suggests juvenile crime and a good part of Loth's book is devoted to this phase of the problem. He points out, however, that there also are a good many adult criminals in suburbia, and suggests reasons why.

He finds that parents whose behavior is extreme in any way — too indulgent, too neglectful or too severe — tend to make delinquents of their children.

"Crime in the Suburbs" is a disquieting report on a serious problem with one bright aspect which Loth calls "Suburbia's Triumph" — the fact that juvenile offenders in the suburbs are less likely than delinquents in the city to grow into adult criminals.

Congress: Power and Purpose on Capitol Hill. By Raymond M. Lahr and J. William Theis (Allyn and Bacon $3.95). This book is intended as a supplementary text in high school and colleges to enable young Americans approaching voting age to gain a better idea of how the government works.

From some of the evidence available on Capitol Hill, this is a goal to be ardently sought almost five million Americans (a goodly number of them teenagers) troop through the Capitol Building each year. Their questions and comments lead Capitol guides to conclude that not all of them have paid close attention in civics class.

"We've seen the House and the Senate; now show us the Congress," one guide was challenged after finishing his half-hour tour and lecture. "Why didn't we see the Blue Room?" another disoriented tourist asked recently. And in a more common manifestation of an incredible confusion about the separate roles of the legislative and executive branches, Capitol guides are frequently asked: "Where is the President?" And all the while, congressional titans — with the exception of Everett Dirksen and the Kennedy brothers — pass mong the visitors unrecognized.

Lahr and Theis, if read, will leave no dobut in anybody's mind what Congress is and how it functions. The relationship between the Capitol and the White House is explained. The Supreme Court is explained. The Supreme Court also is fitted properly into the picture.

Everybody and his brother and sometimes his congressman has written a book or at least a magazine piece about what's the matter with Congress. The verdit usually is plenty.

Lahr and Theis are congressional news reporters, not editorial writers. They air the pros as well as the cons of Congress.

The conclusion you are likely to reach after reading their book is the same conclusion most newspapermen have reached on the basis of first-hand observation: If we didn't have a Congress, and if there was nobody around smart enough to invent it, the people would be in a terrible fix.

Son of Rhubard, by H. Allen Smith (Trident, $4.95). It's a long, long trail from "Low Man On A Totem Pole" to "Son of Rhubard", but fun-loving H. Allen Smith has weathered it well.

His latest is another of those improbably plots. This one concerns a cat. Constant readers will remember "Rhubard" with a feline hero of the same name and a kink in his tail, which appeared several years back. This one concerns The Tiger, illegitimate son of Rhubard, littrered in a Puerto Rican back alley. H. Allen seems ready to go into series writing for Hollywood or a bevy of books rivaling the Bobbsey Twins.

The Bobbsey Twins? Heaven forfend! H. Allen does not produce in the Fanny Hill school, but his far-fetched tales are couched in terms better fitted for the smoking car than for the ears of babes.

Not content with an outlandish paternity trail — which only a delightfully affected mind could contrive — to determine The Tiger's legitimacy, Smith goes to Texas for a subplot.

It concerns a struggle for control of the secret recipe of the Kockamaney chili firm. The secret of its popularity, it turns out, is its "tumescence factor."

H. Allen from time to time has the ideal man wander through his works. The character's name? H. Allen Smith. He has him talk of writing two books: "Priscilla of Old Levittown" and "I Was Public Relations Director for a House of Ill Fame."

H. Allen Smith — the real one, that is — might write either or both one day. In his way — which sometimes is out — he gets better as he ages, but never mellows.

The Feasts of Memory: A Journey to a Greek Island by Elias Kulukundis (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $5.95). A young Greek-American sets out to discover the Aegean island of his grandparents and ends up discovering himself. The island is Kasos, a bare rock east of Crete.

Today's visitor comes upon Kasos slumbering away a summer afternoon, bounded by sea foam and wrapped in haze. Elias Kulukundis finds much more.

He finds 3,000 years of history and passion as each succeeding race conquers the island and etches its name in Kasoit rock. Phoenicians, Dorians, Romans, Byzantines, Arabs, Venetians, Turks, Russians, Italians, modern Greeks.

He finds the 19th century world of his grandparents, where ancient formulas of courtship and marriage disguise, but imperfectly, the human feelings lurking beneath. He finds a woman, er, who has an innocentma his great-great grandmother who has an innocent man beheaded to avenge her husband's murder.

He finds the merchant sea captains of Kasos not above turning their hand to piracy now and again, on their way to becoming the fabulous shipping tycoons of modern-day Greece.

Special Announcement

A refined young lady who has completed the stenographic course of training in the Monroe Commercial School is now ready for work.

I think it will be of interest to the prospective employer to know that she has a good breakfast before leaving home every morning; doesn't take coffee breaks during the day; doesn't smoke; doesn't drink intoxicating beverages; was never tardy or absent during her school year and takes great pride in her work.

If anyone is interested in such an office worker, please dial 325-6641 for further information in regard to her grades and subjects taken.

Senior Tourney In Final Go Today

Holtgreve Meets Cooper For Title

By BUTCH MUIR
World Sports Writer

George Cooper and John Holtgreve took wins on the last two holes at Bayou DeSiard Country Club Saturday afternoon to defeat their opponents and set the stage for the finals today in the sixth annual Seniors Invitational Golf Tournament.

Both Cooper and Holtgreve, who upset the tourney's defending champion Clyde Nash and medalist Don Stone, respectively, Saturday, were all even with their opponents after 16 holes, but took the last two for the wins.

Cooper, who fired the best round of the day, a five-over-par 75 over the 6,315-yard par 70 course, took pars on hole Nos. 17 and 18 to defeat Dr. B. J. Lacour, 2-up, Lacour turned in a bogey 4 on the 17th and a bogey 5 on the 18th and finished his round with a 77.

Amos Shelton, the lone Monroe entrant in the All-Age Championship Flight, fell to Holtgreve when he bogeyed 17 and took a double-bogey on 18. Shelton had taken a lead of 3-up after the first three holes but Holtgreve had cut the margin to one hole at the turn.

Both golfers halved the next six holes before Holtgreve claimed victories on the 16th, 17th and 18th holes in succession for the win and the final round berth against Cooper.

Cooper had also taken an early lead, going two-up after the first three holes and holding a one-hole margin after nine holes. But Lacour trimmed the lead to all even after 16 before faltering on the last two holes.

Cooper and Holtgreve begin their playoff for the title in the Senior tournament at 9 o'clock this morning, the same time all flights in each class get underway. Bayou DeSiard club pro Winnie Cole said Friday that the final round would be started with a shotgun start.

In the consolation bracket of the All-Age Championship Flight, the tournament's medalist in Stone and the second lowest qualifier, Jerome Tujaque, claimed victories and face each other for the consolation title. The will play in the four-some with Cooper and Holtgreve.

COL. FRANK Smith, left, a Monroe golfer, prepares to tee off during the second round of the sixth annual Bayou DeSiard Country Club Seniors Golf Tournament Saturday. Smith went on to defeat W. O. Shafto, 4-3, to move into the Class C, second flight, consolation final round. Javier, Gibson Pace Cardinals By Phils For 7th Straight Win

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Julian Javier's two-run single and Bob Gibson's tight pitching carried National League-leading St. Louis to a 2-1 victory over Philadelphia Saturday, running the Cardinals' winning streak to seven games.

The Phils scored in the seventh on Rich Allen's triple and a single by Bill White.

Gibson, running his pitching record to 9-5, allowed six hits and struck out eight. He has beaten the Phillies 13 times in 17 lifetime decisions.

Jackson, who yielded only four hits before going out for a pinch hitter in the eighth, suffered his eighth setback in 13 decisions.

Dickinson Fires 67 For Cleveland Lead

CLEVELAND (AP) — Steady Gardner Dickinson, playing almost flawless golf, birdied two of the last three holes Saturday and charged into the third round lead of the $130,500 Cleveland Open.

The 39-year-old veteran from Los Tree Village, Fla., carded a three-under-par 67, his third straight sub-par round, and had a 54-hole total of 201. He was nine under for the distance.

Dickinson, who has more than $28,000 in winnings this season, held a two-stroke advantage over Texan Homero Blancas and a three-stroke edge over young Wayne Yates.

The 135-pound Dickinson, whose best finish this year was a tie for third in the Phoenix Open, started the round two shots back of Yates. He parred 15 holes on Aurora Country Club's 6,611-yard layout, birdied No. 6 and 16 and widened his margin by sinking an eight-foot putt on No. 1 for a final bird.

A pro for 15 years, Dickinson has taken only one bogey here in three rounds. He complained of poor driving afterwards, but said, "I'm trying not to take any foolish chances."

Blancas shot into contention with a strong 67 that put him at 203.

Yates, the Georgian who held the 36-hole lead with a brilliant 132, showed signs of the pressure by taking bogeys on three of his first four holes and another bogey on No. 8.

The lanky Atlantan rallied with birdies on Nos. 9, 10, 11 and 13 before fumbling again with bogeys on 16 and 18. His 72 gave him a 204 total.

Tied at 205 were Arnold Palmer, who had a 70 Saturday, and Lou Graham, who shot a 65 to become the third player to tie the course record.

Five strokes behind the pacesetter at 206 were Phil Rodgers, who shot 66, and Miller Barber, who posted a 68.

At 207 was Bert Weaver, while Tom Weiskopf, Allan Henning and Paul Bondeson were deadlocked at 208.

Among a seven-man deadlock at 209 were Masters champion Gay Brewer and Billy Casper. U.S. Open titlist Jack Nicklaus had a 69 and was among eight players in a jam at 210, even par.

Yates, in his second year on the tour, said he played miserably on the front nine but was spurred on by his first birdie on the ninth hole. Playing in a threesome with Palmer and Bob Charles, Yates said he never had performed before as large a crowd, and he was quite nervous.

Santo's Homer Puts Cubs By Astros, 3-2

CHICAGO (AP) — Ron Santo's two-run homer in the fourth inning and the six-hit pitching of Ferguson Jenkins carried the Chicago Cubs to a 3-2 victory over the Houston Astros Saturday.

The second game of the scheduled doubleheader was postponed because of darkness and will be played as part of a twin bill Sunday.

Jenkins, gaining his ninth victory against five defeats, struck out 11 and didn't allow an earned run. Both of Houstons runs came in the sixth after Jenkins dropped a throw covering first base.

An infield single by Rusty Staub and a walk to Eddie Mathews loaded the bases before Ron Davis doubled home two runs with two out.

Steve Hargan Hurls Indians Past Red Sox

BOSTON (AP) — Steve Hargan fashioned his ninth victory with a six hitter Saturday night, in hurling Cleveland to a 3-2 decision over Boston.

Hargan, who has lost six, was in full command after being nicked for an unearned run in the first inning. He struck out seven and his only walk was intentional.

The Indians picked up a run in the first when Boston pitcher Darrell Brandon hit a batter with the bases loaded. Leon Wagner accounted for the second run, leading off the third with his 12th homer.

Cleveland shelled Brandon on Max Alvis' run-scoring single in the fourth.

A single by Carl Yastrzemski, hitting in his 10th straight game, a passed ball and Tony Conigliaro's single score one Red Sox run.

The other came in the ninth when Conigliaro's infield hit drove in Mike Andrews, who doubled.

Jackson's Hit Puts A's Past California, 2-1

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Reggie Jackson tripled a run across in the second inning and scored on John Donaldson's single, carrying Kansas City to a 2-1 victory over California Saturday night that snapped the Athletics' losing string at five games.

Jim Nash checked the Angels on four hits until the ninth, when rookie Tony Pierce came out of the bullpen to preserve the victory by retiring the three men he faced.

Dave Duncan singled against Angels starter Clyde Wright with one out in the second and Jackson followed with a triple to right center. Donaldson then stroked a single to center, scoring Jackson with the deciding run.

Nash, bringing his record to 8-6, and Pierce blanked the Angels after the third inning, when they scored on a walk, a sacrifice bunt and Jose Cardenal's single.

The loss was only the fifth for the Angels in their last 19 starts.

Robinson's Homer Lifts Reds By Bucs

CINCINNATI (AP) — Floyd Robinson cracked a two - run double in the fourth inning, capping a three-run rally and powering the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-4 victory over Pittsburgh Saturday night.

Trailing 4-3 in the fourth, the Reds tied the score on a walk and singles by Jim Coker and Chico Ruiz before Robinson sent them ahead with a double down the left field line.

Rookie Gary Nolan boosted his record to 6-2, with four innings of relief help from Bob Lee. Tommie Sisk, the Pittsburgh starter, took his fifth loss in 10 decisions as the injury-plagued Reds won for only the second time in their last seven starts.

Donn Clendenon's two-run homer gave the Pirates a 2-0 lead in the first inning and they added another in the second.

The Reds got one run back in their half of the first and tied it in the second on Art Shamsky's homer and a run-scoring squeeze bunt by Nolan.

Epstein's Homer Tops Birds, 8-3

BALTIMORE (AP) — Mike Epstein's grand slam homer — in his first time at bat in Baltimore since being traded by the Orioles — led the Washington Senators to an 8-3 victory Saturday night.

The rookie first baseman, who refused to report to the minor leagues before the Orioles dealt him to Washington last month, socked his second 1967 homer after rookie right-hander Bill Dillman walked three consecutive batters in the first inning.

Dillman, now 4-2, allowed two more hits — one of them Frank Howard's 17th homer — before being lifted in the fifth.

Reliever Eddie Fisher failed to retire a batter as Washington scored three more runs in the eight. Singles by Cap Peterson and Epstein, and a run-scoring single by Paul Casanova finished Fisher. Ken McMullen singled off Eddie Watt for two more runs.

Winner Camilo Pascual, with 2 2-3 innings of relief help from Bob Humphreys, brought his record to 7-4.

Boog Powell opened the seventh with a homer, only the fourth hit off Pascual. When Brooks Robinson followed with a double and pinch hitter Russ Snyder lined out, Humphreys came in, Robinson scored on an infield out.

Senior Tourney In Final Go Today

Holtgreve Meets Cooper For Title

By BUTCH MUIR
World Sports Writer

George Cooper and John Holtgreve took wins on the last two holes at Bayou DeSiard Country Club Saturday afternoon to defeat their opponents and set the stage for the finals today in the sixth annual Seniors Invitational Golf Tournament.

Both Cooper and Holtgreve, who upset the tourney's defending champion Clyde Nash and medalist Don Stone, respectively, Saturday, were all even with their opponents after 16 holes, but took the last two for the wins.

Cooper, who fired the best round of the day, a five-over-par 75 over the 6,315-yard par 70 course, took pars on hole Nos. 17 and 18 to defeat Dr. B. J. Lacour, 2-up. Lacour turned in a bogey 4 on the 17th and a bogey 5 on the 18th and finished his round with a 77.

Amos Shelton, the lone Monroe entrant in the All-Age Championship Flight, fell to Holtgreve when he bogeyed 17 and took a double-bogey on 18. Shelton had taken a lead of 3-up after the first three holes but Holtgreve had cut the margin to one hole at the turn.

Both golfers halved the next six holes before Holtgreve claimed victories on the 16th, 17th and 18th holes in succession for the win and the final round berth against Cooper.

Cooper had also taken an early lead, going two-up after the first three holes and holding a one-hole margin after nine holes. But Lacour trimmed the lead to all even after 16 before faltering on the last two holes.

Cooper and Holtgreve begin their playoff for the title in the Senior tournament at 9 o'clock this morning, the same time all flights in each class get underway. Bayou DeSiard club pro Winnie Cole said Friday that the final round would be started with a shotgun start.

In the consolation bracket of the All-Age Championship Flight, the tournament's medalist in Stone and the second lowest qualifier, Jerome Tujaque, claimed victories and face each other for the consolation title. The will play in the four-some with Cooper and Holtgreve.

Dickinson Fires 67 For Cleveland Lead

CLEVELAND (AP) — Steady Gardner Dickinson, playing almost flawless golf, birdied two of the last three holes Saturday and charged into the third round lead of the $130,500 Cleveland Open.

The 39-year-old veteran from Los Tree Village, Fla., carded a three-under-par 67, his third straight sub-par round, and had a 54-hole total of 201. He was nine under for the distance.

Dickinson, who has more than $28,000 in winnings this season, held a two-stroke advantage over Texan Homero Blancas and a three-stroke edge over young Wayne Yates.

The 135-pound Dickinson, whose best finish this year was a tie for third in the Phoenix Open, started the round two shots back of Yates. He parred 15 holes on Aurora Country Club's 6,611-yard layout, birdied No. 6 and 16 and widened his margin by sinking an eight-foot putt on No. 1 for a final bird.

A pro for 15 years, Dickinson has taken only one bogey here in three rounds. He complained of poor driving afterwards, but said, "I'm trying not to take any foolish chances."

Blancas shot into contention with a strong 67 that put him at 203.

Yates, the Georgian who held the 36-hole lead with a brilliant 132, showed signs of the pressure by taking bogeys on three of his first four holes and another bogey on No. 8.

The lanky Atlantan rallied with birdies on Nos. 9, 10, 11 and 13 before fumbling again with bogeys on 16 and 18. His 72 gave him a 204 total.

Tied at 205 were Arnold Palmer, who had a 70 Saturday, and Lou Graham, who shot a 65 to become the third player to tie the course record.

Five strokes behind the pacesetter at 206 were Phil Rodgers, who shot 66, and Miller Barber, who posted a 68.

At 207 was Bert Weaver, while Tom Weiskopf, Allan Henning and Paul Bondeson were deadlocked at 208.

Among a seven-man deadlock at 209 were Masters champion Gay Brewer and Billy Casper. U.S. Open titlist Jack Nicklaus had a 69 and was among eight players in a jam at 210, even par.

Yates, in his second year on the tour, said he played miserably on the front nine but was spurred on by his first birdie on the ninth hole. Playing in a threesome with Palmer and Bob Charles, Yates said he never had performed before as large a crowd, and he was quite nervous.

Javier, Gibson Pace Cardinals By Phils For 7th Straight Win

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Julian Javier's two-run single and Bob Gibson's tight pitching carried National League-leading St. Louis to a 2-1 victory over Philadelphia Saturday, running the Cardinals' winning streak to seven games.

The Phils scored in the seventh on Rich Allen's triple and a single by Bill White.

Gibson, running his pitching record to 9-5, allowed six hits and struck out eight. He has beaten the Phillies 13 times in 17 lifetime decisions.

Jackson, who yielded only four hits before going out for a pinch hitter in the eighth, suffered his eighth setback in 13 decisions.

Robinson's Homer Lifts Reds By Bucs

CINCINNATI (AP) — Floyd Robinson cracked a two-run double in the fourth inning, capping a three-run rally and powering the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-4 victory over Pittsburgh Saturday night.

Trailing 4-3 in the fourth, the Reds tied the score on a walk and singles by Jim Coker and Chico Ruiz before Robinson sent them ahead with a double down the left field line.

Rookie Gary Nolan boosted his record to 6-2, with four innings of relief help from Bob Lee. Tommie Sisk, the Pittsburgh starter, took his fifth loss in 10 decisions as the injury-plagued Reds won for only the second time in their last seven starts.

Donn Clendenon's two-run homer gave the Pirates a 2-0 lead in the first inning and they added another in the second.

The Reds got one run back in their half of the first and tied it in the second on Art Shamsky's homer and a run-scoring squeeze bunt by Nolan.

Jackson's Hit Puts A's Past California, 2-1

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Reggie Jackson tripled a run across in the second inning and scored on John Donaldson's single, carrying Kansas City to a 2-1 victory over California Saturday night that snapped the Athletics' losing string at five games.

Jim Nash checked the Angels on four hits until the ninth, when rookie Tony Pierce came out of the bullpen to preserve the victory by retiring the three men he faced.

Dave Duncan singled against Angels starter Clyde Wright with one out in the second and Jackson followed with a triple to right center. Donaldson then stroked a single to center, scoring Jackson with the deciding run.

Nash, bringing his record to 8-6, and Pierce blanked the Angels after the third inning, when they scored on a walk, a sacrifice bunt and Jose Cardenal's single.

The loss was only the fifth for the Angels in their last 19 starts.

Santo's Homer Puts Cubs By Astros, 3-2

CHICAGO (AP) — Ron Santo's two-run homer in the fourth inning and the six-hit pitching of Ferguson Jenkins carried the Chicago Cubs to a 3-2 victory over the Houston Astros Saturday.

The second game of the scheduled doubleheader was postponed because of darkness and will be played as part of a two bill Sunday.

Jenkins, gaining his ninth victory against five defeats, struck out 11 and didn't allow an earned run. Both of Houstons runs came in the sixth after Jenkins dropped a throw covering first base.

An infield single by Rusty Staub and a walk to Eddie Mathews loaded the bases before Ron Davis doubled home two runs with two out.

Steve Hargan Hurls Indians Past Red Sox

BOSTON (AP) — Steve Hargan fashioned his ninth victory with a six hitter Saturday night, in hurling Cleveland to a 3-2 decision over Boston.

Hargan, who has lost six, was in full command after being nicked for an unearned run in the first inning. He struck out seven and his only walk was intentional.

The Indians picked up a run in the first when Boston pitcher Darrell Brandon hit a batter with the bases loaded. Leon Wagner accounted for the second run, leading off the third with his 12th homer.

Cleveland shelled Brandon on Max Alvis' run-scoring single in the fourth.

A single by Carl Yastrzemski, hitting in his 10th straight game, a passed ball and Tony Conigliaro's single score one Red Sox run.

The other came in the ninth when Conigliaro's infield hit drove in Mike Andrews, who doubled.

Peters Caps Rally, Wins 10th For Sox

ST. PAUL - MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Gary Peters held Minnesota to five hits and capped a five-run Chicago rally with a two-run single Saturday, leading the White Sox to a 5-2 triumph over the Twins.

The Sox got all their runs in the seventh inning with Pete Ward doubling in one, Ken Barry driving in another with a sacrifice fly and Ron Hansen singling in a third.

Then Peters singled off Jim Kaat, who relieved starter Dave Boswell, driving in the final two runs of the inning. Boswell had held Chicago to just two singles through the first six innings.

Peters, 10-3, yielded Bob Allison's 10th home run with the bases empty in the second inning, and a run in the eighth when Harmon Killebrew singled home Rod Carew, who had singled and gone to second on a wild pitch.

Ostrowski Inks With Chicago

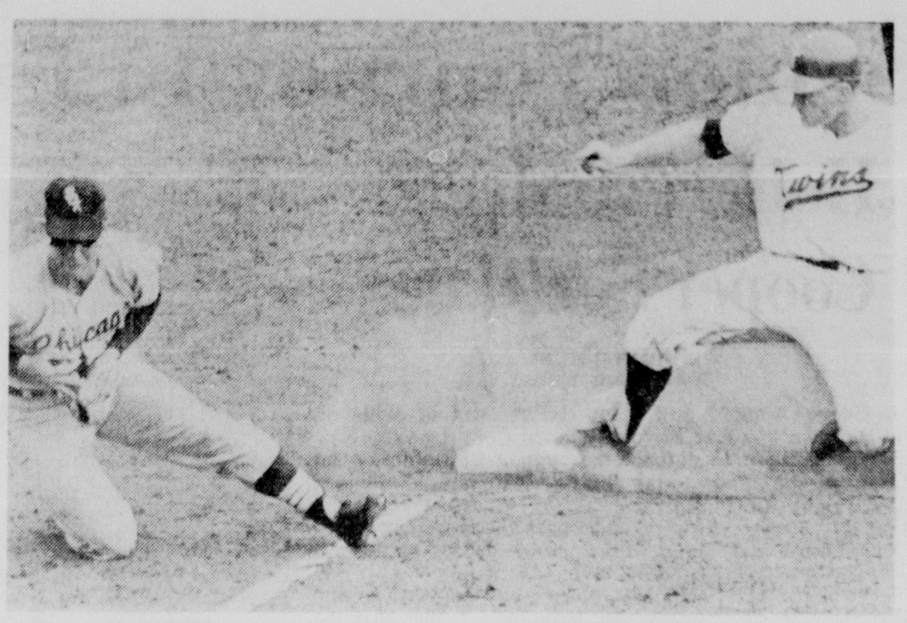
The 6-foot-2, 195-pounder was signed for a substantial bonus and a college scholarship. He was assigned to Sarasota, Fla., in the rookie Gulf Coast League.



CHICAGO WHITE Sox third baseman Pete Ward, left, stops throw by Sox catcher as Minnesota Twins' Harmon Killebrew slides safely into third base behind him in 6th inning of American League game Saturday. Killebrew went to third from first after Chicago catcher J. C. Martin let pitch get away from him and roll to the stands. Killebrew singled to get on base. Chicago won the game, 5-2. (AP Wirephoto)

Colorado's Hale Irwin Baloons To 79 But Wins NCAA Golf Title By 2 Strokes

SHAWNEE ON DELAWARE, Pa. (AP) — The University of Colorado's Hale Irwin won the 70th annual NCAA Golf Championship Saturday by two strokes despite experiencing what he described as "fatigue, generally poor play and an element of choke."

The 22-year-old Irwin, a marketing major, said he forgot his father's advice over the telephone Friday night to "hit 'em straight and keep cool" as he soared to a final round seven-over par 79 and a winning 72-hole total of 286.

Georgia Tech's placekicker, Buky Henry; San Jose State's Ross Randall and Robert Drue Johnson of Arizona State took a late run at the five-stroke lead the Boulder, Colo., native, carried into the final round, but fell short at 288 each.

Henry carded a two-under-par 70 and Randall and Johnson, 71s, in the final round over the 7,025-yard par 36-36—72 Shawnee Inn golf course.

Henry had rounds of 77-71-70-70; Randall 71-76-70-71; and Johnson 73-69-75-71.

Irwin, an All-Big Eight defensive football star, said he apparently "let all the wind out of my sails in the third round and had nothing left but the oars."

He shot a seven-under par 65 Friday to assume the five-stroke lead, which enabled him to stand off Henry, Johnson and Randall.

"I don't like to end up a tournament playing badly," he said.

Trying to explain his day of roughs, traps, water and the loss of a brilliant putting touch that gave him a 54-hole total of 207 at the start of the final 18 holes, Irwin said he got very warm and drank cold soda, which tightened his stomach.

"I felt all cold inside," he said.

The four-time Colorado state amateur champion who plans to play in the Colorado Open next week, had seven bogeys and nary a birdie in the final round.

When he got to the 18th green, the blue-shirted golfer in the white hat and gray slacks walked over to the scorers' table and asked who was low. He was told there were three 288s in the clubhouse.

At that point Irwin had a 283 and was 30 feet from the cup in two. "I took three putts instead of losing my head."

Irwin never was less than two strokes ahead during the final round, although he said that he was under the impression after the 15th hole that his lead had been sliced to a stroke.

"Someone told me that Johnson had finished with a 286," he said. "I played the next two holes (he made par on both) thinking I had a one-stroke lead.

"I think this was good for me even though it wasn't true. It made me play better."

Steve Melnyk, a 215-pound University of Florida sophomore, who led the first two rounds, bolted with a seven-over par 77 for a 289. He wound up tied for fifth with Arizona State's Joe Porter and Tim Collins Jr. of Virginia Tech.

Brigham Young's John Miller, who played in last week's U.S. Open, finished at 290, while a pre-tournament favorite, Jack Lewis Jr., a Walker Cup star from Wake Forest, shot a final-round 78 for a 2 7.

Future Jayhawker Sets New National High School Record

By TOMMY POINDEXTER
World Sports Writer

There have been many outstanding prep track and field performances in the past few years, including this season, but very few can match big Karl Salb's of Crossett, Ark.

Saturday, June 17, at the Golden West Invitational Cinder Meet in Sacramento, Calif., Salb, a handsome 18-year-old Crossett senior used his powerful 6-3 and 235-pound frame to push the prep 12 pound iron ball 69-6 and wipe out the old mark of 69-3 set by Dallas Long in 1958.

Long's mark was the second oldest standard on the prep chart and since many great weight men have came along in the last few years with the list headed by 1964 Olympic siver medialist and world record holder Randy Matson, the record seemed to have set very well with the Crossett giant. Matson, as a senior in 1963 at Pampa High School, Pampa, Tex., was highly favored by many to break Long's standard back then but he left the prep ranks with a best of 67-10 and the old standard still stood until Salb's heave.

Before making his victourious journey to the west coast, Karl meet with a disappointing end to his high school career at Crossett. He had thrown the shot 66-9¾ in the Region 4-AA meet to lead the nation but he had hoped to do better in the state meet and the Arkansas Meet of Champions. He threw 65-8¼ in the Arkansas AA state meet to break his own state record but his disappointment was clear when he threw 68-0½ in a practice throw after the meet was over. That would have moved him up to second on the all time list in the nation.

In the meet of champions, his favorite shot weighed out one ounce light, and he said "I weighed it on the post office scales at Crossett and it weighed exactly 12 pounds." It also weighed out at 12 pounds for the state meet."

He had been in one meet since then, throwing 64-10 in the Preptacular at Alexandria on June 3. In the meantime, he had lost his national lead to Doug Lane of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who threw 67-1. Lane is a junior and could not compete in the Golden West meet.

Finishing second at the Sacramento meet was Doug Wilhelm of Sunnydale, Calif., who threw 65-10.

Salb, like all outstanding weight men is a dedicated athlete filled with desire. He has been an avid weight lifter since the eight grade and trains on a two-day-a-week program which he calls a "power schedule." He uses three basic power exercises, the bench press, with which he has a career best of 315 pounds, the deadlift and the power clean.

As a junior, the young mammoth had a best of 61-4 but after long hours of hard throwing and weight work this year under his high school track coach Bill Cook and weight coach Jim Golden, which he said "have been two main assets to my career", Karl continued to improve rapidly. He said "the biggest improvement I have made this season has been my strength and ability to get more leg drive into my throws. I don't use my legs like I should have during the early season so I concentrated on slowing down," Salb said.

The discus with Karl is a different story, he works with it very little and has a career best of 184 feet but he said "I will work with it more when I go to college."

Karl's parent's support has played a great part in his success. His father a Crossett physician, at first discouraged the serious athletic program. However, as his son's interest and acheivements began to become so pronounced, Dr. Salb began to be almost as interested as his son, and appeared as close to the shot and discus ring as officials would allow him and sometime closer.

Mrs. Salb has encouraged her son's interest in every possible way. She had a concrete shot throwing disk laid to standard specifications in the back yard, as Karl could practice at every opportunity. She "adopted" the tracks boys to the extent of carrying them to meets, and as the head track coach Bill Cook, says, "She has done everything for Karl and the entire team."

Karl has been sought after by colleges and universities all over the country including home state University of Arkansas, which has put up the biggest fight to get him. But after careful consideration, he chose University of Kansas primarily for two main reasons. Kansas offers the best tack guidance in the nation, Karl feels, and he has his sights set on the Olympics. He has decided to devote his time and energies to the shot-put and discus and not go out for football after being a double -A All-State selection as a tackle last fall. Also, he plans to major in pharmacy at Kansas and a deciding factor was pharmacy students at Arkansas have to do the last two years of their pharmacy work in Little Rock, which would move him from the Fayetteville athletic plant.

Runnerup in the Golden West meet Doug Wilhelm will join Salb at the University of Kansas which should give Kansas two of the finest weight prospects ever produced.

BIG KARL Salb of Crossett, Ark., lets go with a practice toss during home track meet. Salb, Saturday, June 17, heaved the 12 pound shot 69-6 for a new national school boy record erasing the old mark of 69-3 set by Dallas Long in 1958.

World Vault, Mile Marks Established

—Jim Ryun, the exciting and wonderful young man from Kansas, doesn't need a "rabbit" to help him break a world record in the mile run.

The handsome sophomore has his own built-in "rabbit," Jim Ryun.

So it was Saturday that the 20-year-old KU athlete owns a new record of 3:51.1, erasing the 3:51.3 which has been owned for a year by the same James Ryun.

Ryun posted the new mark Friday night in the finals of the National AAU Track and Field Championships before 1,300 fans, including his proud parents from Wichita, Kan., in Memorial Stadium.

The rangy Jayhawker did it all by himself. He set the pace from the first stride to the last.

Six of Ryun's 10 immediate pursuers beat the well battered 4-minute mile. They ranged from veteran Jim Grelle of Portland, Ore., second in 3:56.1, to Martin Liquori, the 17-year-old hgih school kid from Grover, N.J., seventh in 3:59.8.

The world pole vault record was also revised.

Paul Wilson, University of Southern California sophomore, cleared 17-8, which bettered by one inch the 17-7 set two weeks ago in San Diego, Calif., by Bob Seagren, also 20 and a soph at USC.

Seagren missed at 17-8. And Wilson, who two years ago as a prep star in Downey, Calif., set a high school mark of 16-6¾, tried, failed but almost hit the so-called mythical 18-foot barrier.

Officially, the miss was at 18-¼ a height never before even attempted.

Earlier, Tommie Smith of San Jose State won the 220 in 20.4, defeating among others Jimmy Hines of Texas Southern, also 20.4.

New Muny Fees To Start July 1

The new green fees at Municipal Golf Course in Forsythe Park go into effect July 1, according to Johnny Myers, golf pro at the club.

The new fees are $1 during week days and $1.50 on weekends and holidays. The old fees, which will be in effect until Saturday, are 75 cents for week days and $1.25 on weekend and holidays.

Myers reemphasized Saturday that junior golfers will still be allowed to play free Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning until noon, then at other times can still play but must pay the full green price. Golfers must be at least 15 to play on weekends and pay the full green fee, Myers said.

The free golf lession clinic currently being held at the municipal course each Tuesday from 9 until 10 each morning has openings for other junior golfers who may enter at any time, according to Myers.

Dates for the junior golf tournament will be announced at the last clinic, which may be a week later than originally scheduled, Myers added.

Peters Caps Rally, Wins 10th For Sox

ST. PAUL - MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Gary Peters held Minnesota to five hits and capped a five-run Chicago rally with a two-run single Saturday, leading the White Sox to a 5-2 triumph over the Twins.

The Sox got all their runs in the seventh inning with Pete Ward doubling in one, Ken Barry driving in another with a sacrifice fly and Ron Hansen singling in a third.

Then Peters singled off Jim Kaat, who relieved starter Dave Boswell, driving in the final two runs of the inning. Boswell had held Chicago to just two singles through the first six innings.

Peters, 10-3, yielded Bob Allison's 10th home run with the bases empty in the second inning, and a run in the eighth when Harmon Killebrew singled home Rod Carew, who had singled and gone to second on a wild pitch.

Ostrowski Inks With Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Left-handed pitcher Steve Ostrowski, 17, was signed by the Chicago White Sox Saturday.

The 6-foot-2, 195-pounder was signed for a substantial bonus and a college scholarship. He was assigned to Sarasota, Fla., in the rookie Gulf Coast League.

Colorado's Hale Irwin Baloons To 79 But Wins NCAA Golf Title By 2 Strokes

SHAWNEE ON DELAWARE, Pa. (AP) — The University of Colorado's Hale Irwin won the 70th annual NCAA Golf Championship Saturday by two strokes despite experiencing what he described as "fatigue, generally poor play and an element of choke."

The 22-year-old Irwin, a marketing major, said he forgot his father's advice over the telephone Friday night to "hit 'em straight and keep cool" as he soared to a final round seven-over par 79 and a winning 72-hole total of 286.

Georgia Tech's placekicker, Ruky Henry; San Jose State's Ross Randall and Robert Drue Johnson of Arizona State took a late run at the five-stroke lead the Boulder, Colo., native, carried into the final round, but fell short at 288 each.

Henry carded a two-under-par 70 and Randall and Johnson, 71s, in the final round over the 7,025-yard par 36-36—72 Shawnee Inn golf course.

Henry had rounds of 77-71-70-70; Randall 71-76-70-71; and Johnson 73-69-75-71.

Irwin, an All-Big Eight defensive football star, said he apparently "let all the wind out of my sails in the third round and had nothing left but the oars."

He shot a seven-under par 65 Friday to assume the five-stroke lead, which enabled him to stand off Henry, Johnson and Randall.

"I don't like to end up a tournament playing badly," he said.

Trying to explain his day of roughs, traps, water and the loss of a brilliant putting touch that gave him a 54-hole total of 207 at the start of the final 18 holes, Irwin said he got very warm and drank cold soda, which tightened his stomach.

"I felt all cold inside," he said.

The four-time Colorado state amateur champion who plans to play in the Colorado Open next week, had seven bogeys and nary a birdie in the final round.

When he got to the 18th green, the blue-shirted golfer in the white hat and gray slacks walked over to the scorers' table and asked who was low. He was told there were three 288s in the clubhouse.

At that point Irwin had a 283 and was 30 feet from the cup in two. "I took three putts instead of losing my head."

Irwin never was less than two strokes ahead during the final round, although he said that he was under the impression after the 15th hole that his lead had been sliced to a stroke.

"Someone told me that Johnson had finished with a 286," he said. "I played the next two holes (he made par on both) thinking I had a one-stroke lead.

"I think this was good for me even though it wasn't true. It made me play better."

Steve Melnyk, a 215-pound University of Florida sophomore, who led the first two rounds, bolted with a seven-over par 77 for a 289. He wound up tied for fifth with Arizona State's Joe Porter and Tim Collins Jr. of Virginia Tech.

Brigham Young's John Miller, who played in last week's U.S. Open, finished at 290, while a pre-tournament favorite, Jack Lewis Jr., a Walker Cup star from Wake Forest, shot a final-round 78 for a 2-7.

World Vault, Mile Marks Established

—Jim Ryun, the exciting and wonderful young man from Kansas, doesn't need a "rabbit" to help him break a world record in the mile run.

The handsome sophomore has his own built-in "rabbit," Jim Ryun.

So it was Saturday that the 20-year-old KU athlete owns a new record of 3:51.1, erasing the 3:51.3 which has been owned for a year by the same James Ryun.

Ryun posted the new mark Friday night in the finals of the National AAU Track and Field Championships before 1,300 fans, including his proud parents from Wichita, Kan., in Memorial Stadium.

The rangy Jayhawker did it all by himself. He set the pace from the first stride to the last.

Six of Ryun's 10 immediate pursuers beat the well battered 4-minute mile. They ranged from veteran Jim Grelle of Portland, Ore., second in 3:56.1, to Martin Liquori, the 17-year-old hgih school kid from Grover, N.J., seventh in 3:59.8.

The world pole vault record was also revised.

Paul Wilson, University of Southern California sophomore, cleared 17-8, which bettered by one inch the 17-7 set two weeks ago in San Diego, Calif., by Bob Seagren, also 20 and a soph at USC.

Seagren missed at 17-8. And Wilson, who two years ago as a prep star in Downey, Calif., set a high school mark of 16-6¾, tried, failed but almost hit the so-called mythical 18-foot barrier.

Officially, the miss was at 18-¼ a height never before even attempted.

Earlier, Tommie Smith of San Jose State won the 220 in 20.4, defeating among others Jimmy Hines of Texas Southern, also 20.4.

Future Jayhawker Sets New National High School Record

By TOMMY POINDEXTER
World Sports Writer

There have been many outstanding prep track and field performances in the past few years, including this season, but very few can match big Karl Salb's of Crossett, Ark.

Saturday, June 17, at the Golden West Invitational Cinder Meet in Sacramento, Calif., Salb, a handsome 18-year-old Crossett senior used his powerful 6-3 and 235-pound frame to push the prep 12 pound iron ball 69-6 and wipe out the old mark of 69-3 set by Dallas Long in 1958.

Long's mark was the second oldest standard on the prep chart and since many great weight men have came along in the last few years with the list headed by 1964 Olympic silver medialist and world record holder Randy Matson, the record seemed to have set very well with the Crossett giant. Matson, as a senior in 1963 at Pampa High School, Pampa, Tex., was highly favored by many to break Long's standard back then but he left the prep ranks with a best of 67-10 and the old standard still stood until Salb's heave.

Before making his victorious journey to the west coast, Karl meet with a disappointing end to his high school career at Crossett. He had thrown the shot 66-9¼ in the Region 4-AA meet to lead the nation but he had hoped to do better in the state meet and the Arkansas Meet of Champions. He threw 65-8¾ in the Arkansas AA state meet to break his own state record but his disappointment was clear when he threw 68-0½ in a practice throw after the meet was over. That would have moved him up to second on the all time list in the nation.

In the meet of champions, his favorite shot weighed out one ounce light, and he said "I weighed it on the post office scales at Crossett and it weighed exactly 12 pounds." It also weighed out at 12 pounds for the state meet."

He had been in one meet since then, throwing 64-10 in the Prep-tacular at Alexandria on June 3. In the meantime, he had lost his national lead to Doug Lane of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who threw 67-1. Lane is a junior and could not compete in the Golden West meet.

Finishing second at the Sacramento meet was Doug Wilhelm of Sunnydale, Calif., who threw 65-10.

Salb, like all outstanding weight men is a dedicated athlete filled with desire. He has been an avid weight lifter since the eight grade and trains on a two-day-a-week program which he calls a "power schedule." He uses three basic power exercises, the bench press, with which he has a career best of 315 pounds, the deadlift and the power clean.

As a junior, the young mammoth had a best of 61-4 but after long hours of hard throwing and weight work this year under his high school track coach Bill Cook and weight coach Jim Golden, which he said "have been two main assets to my career", Karl continued to improve rapidly. He said "the biggest improvement I have made this season has been my strength and ability to get more leg drive into my throws. I don't use my legs like I should have during the early season so I concentrated on slowing down," Salb said.

The discus with Karl is a different story, he works with it very little and has a career best of 184 feet but he said "I will work with it more when I go to college."

Karl's parent's support has played a great part in his success. His father a Crossett physician, at first discouraged the serious athletic program. However, as his son's interest and acheivements began to become so pronounced, Dr. Salb began to be almost as interested as his son, and appeared as close to the shot and discus ring as officials would allow him and sometime closer.

Mrs. Salb has encouraged her son's interest in every possible way. She had a concrete shot throwing disk laid to standard specifications in the back yard, as Karl could practice at every opportunity. She "adopted" the tracks boys to the extent of carrying them to meets, and as the head track coach Bill Cook, says, "She has done everything for Karl and the entire team."

Karl has been sought after by colleges and universities all over the country including home state University of Arkansas, which has put up the biggest fight to get him. But after careful consideration, he chose University of Kansas primarily for two main reasons. Kansas offers the best tack guidance in the nation. Karl [illegible] and he has his sights set [illegible] the Olympics. He has decided to devote his time and energies to the shot put and discus and not go out for football after being a double A All-State selection as a tackle last fall. Also, he plans to major in pharmacy at Kansas and a deciding factor was pharmacy students at Arkansas have to do the last two years of their pharmacy work in Little Rock, which would move him from the Fayetteville athletic plant.

BIG KARL Salb of Crossett, Ark., lets go with a practice toss during home track meet. Salb, Saturday, June 17, heaved the 12 pound shot 69-6 for a new national school boy record erasing the old mark of 69-3 set by Dallas Long in 1958.

Dodgers Top Giants With Singer, 2-0

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rookie Bill Singer blanked San Francisco on eight hits Saturday, outpitching Juan Marichal as the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Giants 2-0 and snapped a three-game losing streak.

Willie Davis broke a scoreless tie with a sixth inning single and Wes Parker squeezed home an insurance run in the seventh, helping Singer end Marichal's string of eight straight victories over the Dodgers.

Singer, 2-3, struck out 10 while also breaking San Francisco's streak of six straight victories at Dodger Stadium.

New Muny Fees To Start July 1

The new green fees at Municipal Golf Course in Forsythe Park go into effect July 1, according to Johnny Myers, golf pro at the club.

The new fees are $1 during week days and $1.50 on weekends and holidays. The old fees, which will be in effect until Saturday, are 75 cents for week days and $1.25 on weekend and holidays.

Myers reemphasized Saturday that junior golfers will still be allowed to play free Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning until noon, then at other times can still play but must pay the full green price. Golfers must be at least 15 to play on weekends and pay the full green fee, Myers said.

The free golf lession clinic currently being held at the municipal course each Tuesday from 9 until 10 each morning has openings for other junior golfers who may enter at any time, according to Myers.

Dates for the junior golf tournament will be announced at the last clinic, which may be a week later than originally scheduled, Myers added.

Wild Life, Fisheries Director Tells Of Deer Damage To Crops

NEW ORLEANS (Special) — Leslie L. Glasgow, director of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, today, released the following statement regarding damage to Louisiana crops by deer. His full statement on crop depredation follows:

Deer populations in Louisiana have changed drastically with the activities of man. Between 1890 and 1920 the upland pine-hardwood forests were cut, burned and the land cleared and the cypress - hardwood swamps were heavily logged. This range destruction forced deer into submarginal timber areas where they were at the mercy of man and dog during an era of too liberal, or unenforced hunting regulations. The low point in deer numbers was probably reached about 1927. Fortunately, a few deer survived where they were given local protection and in the most inaccessible swamps. Conservation measures were enacted and rigid protection saved them from extinction. Regrowth of cut over areas afforded excellent range and when given rigid protection, deer became numerous again, especially in the northeast Louisiana delta country.

Beginning about 1950 residents of the area permitted the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission to trap deer which were released in areas from which they had been exterminated. These transplanted deer thrived under favorable range conditions and good protection. Consequently, deer are now found over about 80 per cent of the State.

With good protection and no harvest of does, deer in some sections soon exceeded the carrying capacity of the natural range. This condition was further aggravated in northeast Louisiana by clearing of vast acreages for agricultural purposes. In order to survive, deer were forced to feed on agricultural crop of soybeans, corn, wheat, oats and cotton. However, even on underpopulated ranges, deer sometimes prefer agricultural crops such as soybeans and watermelons over native food plants. These crops are more succulent and more nutritious. Weeds and grass growing on fertilized or cultivated fields are preferred over the same plants growing in the woods. Therefore, deer are either forced to feed on agicultural crops because of the lack of native food or they may be drawn to them because of the superior quality. As a result, deer become a serious problem to farmers. This is a problem common to all states having a high deer population in agricultural areas.

Crops damage by deer has been carefully studied by agriculturalists and wildlife biologists throughout the nation. Scaring devices such as carbide guns, fire crackers, and elaborate booby traps have met with little success. It takes about a week for deer to become accustomed to them. Deer proof fences, although effective, are very expensive. Electrical fences are seldom deer proof. Patrolling every night with bird shot and a dog, when not required for too lengthy a time, is effective and practical for some crops. Although trapping and removal of deer has been attempted many times as a means of control, it has never been successful in alleviating crop damage.

Chemical repellents have been mildly successful. Rain may wash them from plants then retreatment is necessary. Deer selectively feed on fast growing plants. Two or three treatments may be required during periods of rapid growth. Deer resume feeding on the new growth that occurs between sprayings. While new repelling compounds are becoming available, there is at this time no commercial deer repellent that provides a full season's protection from deer depredation. It is hoped that a practical repellent will soon be found.

Wildlife workers throughout the United States who have dealt with problem deer herds are in agreement that the only practical way to control crop damage is to reduce deer through liberalized hunting regulations. The most effective measure is to have an any - sex deer season.

In Louisiana either - sex deer seasons have been accepted in several parishes. They have given considerable relief to the farmer. However, buck hunting only during an any - sex season on wooded lands adjacent to bean fields results in high deer populations and consequently severe damage to the beans. Greatest damage usually occurs during June and July when beans are small and deer are pregnant or with fawns. The farmer occasionally takes matters into his own hands and shoots depredating deer at night. These deer are frequently left in the field to rot where they fall. This is a needless waste of a highly prized animal. When apprehended, the farmer is charged with a violation by commission agents, but he is seldom prosecuted by local officials. This undesirable stalemate could be avoided.

The solution to the problem is not an easy one. When the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission encourages the acceptance of an any - sex deer season in areas having crop damage, it is implementing the most realistic and practical management procedure known. The commission wants to maintain the best deer hunting possible, but the farmer is entitled to relief from crop damage.

The Commission believes that:

1. The solution to the problem is a reduction in deer adjacent to agricultural crops. Since the removal of bucks only will not solve the problem, both sexes should be harvested.

2. The removal of deer should be made only during the regular fall and winter hunting season. They should not be killed during the spring and summer and left to rot in the fields.

3. Each deer should be tagged with a standard big game tag. The land owner or club can determine not only the number of deer that will be harvested but also who harvests them.

Solving the problem will require patience and understanding by the sportsman and the farmer. The hunter should cooperate by harvesting enough any-sex deer on forested lands to keep crop damage in adjacent fields to a level that is not serious. The farmer must realize that the complete elimination of deer crop damage is impossible unless deer are exterminated. Most farmers are deer hunters and are willing to accept a reasonable loss. But they cannot be expected to feed on overpopulation of hungry deer.

The commission urges that communities having high deer crop damage work for an any-sex deer season. It is the only practical solution to deer crop damage.

Braves Fall Twice To Mets, 5-3, 9-1

ATLANTA (AP) — Tommy Davis ignited a three-run rally in the eighth inning with a lead-off homer Saturday night, propelling the New York Mets to a 5-3 conquest of Atlanta and a sweep of their day-night doubleheader.

The Mets won the afternoon game 9-1 behind the five-hit pitching of rookie Tom Seaver and a 17-hit attack, biggest New York outburst of the season.

In the eighth inning of the nightcap, Davis tied the score 3-3 with his second homer of the day and 10th of the year. The bases-empty shot gave him 500 runs batted in for his career.

Pinch hitter Bob Johnson then singled in the go-ahead run after Ron Swoboda's double and Jerry Grote scored on Bud Harrelson's single to cap the rally.

The loss was pinned on Atlanta's Denny Lemaster, 7-2, who blew a 2-0 lead given him in the first inning by Tito Francona's two-run homer.

Ron Taylor, who relieved starter Bob Hendley in the seventh, was the winner.

Seaver boosted his record to 6-4 in the opener, shutting out the Braves in the last eight innings after yielding a solo homer to Francona in the first.

The Mets scored four unearned runs in a five-run outburst in the third inning after a throwing error by third baseman Clete Boyer opened the gates.

The first-game loss snapped a four-game winning string for Atlanta.

Bob Bruce—first of five Brave pitchers—was given the defeat.

Catcher Jerry Grote, batting only .161, led the Mets' attack in the afternoon with four singles.

In the nightcap, catcher Bob Uecker gave the Braves a 3-2 lead in the seventh inning when he singled, took second on a bunt and scored on Swoboda's bobble of Francona's infield drive.

Braves Fall Twice To Mets, 5-3, 9-1

ATLANTA (AP) — Tommy Davis ignited a three-run rally in the eighth inning with a lead-off homer Saturday night, propelling the New York Mets to a 5-3 conquest of Atlanta and a sweep of their day-night doubleheader.

The Mets won the afternoon game 9-1 behind the five-hit pitching of rookie Tom Seaver and a 17-hit attack, biggest New York outburst of the season.

In the eighth inning of the nightcap, Davis tied the score 3-3 with his second homer of the day and 10th of the year. The bases-empty shot gave him 500 runs batted in for his career.

Pinch hitter Bob Johnson then singled in the go-ahead run after Ron Swoboda's double and Jerry Grote scored on Bud Harrelson's single to cap the rally.

The loss was pinned on Atlanta's Denny Lemaster, 7-2, who blew a 2-0 lead given him in the first inning by Tito Francona's two-run homer.

Ron Taylor, who relieved starter Bob Hendley in the seventh, was the winner.

Seaver boosted his record to 6-4 in the opener, shutting out the Braves in the last eight innings after yielding a solo homer to Francona in the first.

The Mets scored four unearned runs in a five-run outburst in the third inning after a throwing error by third baseman Clete Boyer opened the gates.

The first-game loss snapped a four-game winning string for Atlanta.

Bob Bruce—first of five Brave pitchers—was given the defeat.

Catcher Jerry Grote, batting only .161, led the Mets' attack in the afternoon with four singles.

In the nightcap, catcher Bob Uecker gave the Braves a 3-2 lead in the seventh inning when he singled, took second on a bunt and scored on Swoboda's bobble of Francona's infield drive.

Wild Life, Fisheries Director Tells Of Deer Damage To Crops

NEW ORLEANS (Special) — Leslie L. Glasgow, director of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, today, released the following statement regarding damage to Louisiana crops by deer. His full statement on crop depredation follows:

Deer populations in Louisiana have changed drastically with the activities of man. Between 1890 and 1920 the upland pine-hardwood forests were cut, burned and the land cleared and the cypress - hardwood swamps were heavily logged. This range destruction forced deer into submarginal timber areas where they were at the mercy of man and dog during an era of too liberal, or unenforced hunting regulations. The low point in deer numbers was probably reached about 1927. Fortunately, a few deer survived where they were given local protection and in the most inaccessible swamps. Conservation measures were enacted and rigid protection saved them from extinction. Regrowth of cut over areas afforded excellent range and when given rigid protection, deer became numerous again, especially in the northeast Louisiana delta country.

Beginning about 1950 residents of the area permitted the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission to trap deer which were released in areas from which they had been exterminated. These transplanted deer thrived under favorable range conditions and good protection. Consequently, deer are now found over about 80 per cent of the State.

With good protection and no harvest of does, deer in some sections soon exceeded the carrying capacity of the natural range. This condition was further aggravated in northeast Louisiana by clearing of vast acreages for agricultural purposes. In order to survive, deer were forced to feed on agricultural crop of soybeans, corn, wheat, oats and cotton. However, even on underpopulated ranges, deer sometimes prefer agricultural crops such as soybeans and watermelons over native food plants. These crops are more succulent and more nutritious. Weeds and grass growing on fertilized or cultivated fields are preferred over the same plants growing in the woods. Therefore, deer are either forced to feed on agicultural crops because of the lack of native food or they may be drawn to them because of the superior quality. As a result, deer become a serious problem to farmers. This is a problem common to all states having a high deer population in agricultural areas.

Crops damage by deer has been carefully studied by agriculturalists and wildlife biologists throughout the nation. Scaring devices such as carbide guns, fire crackers, and elaborate booby traps have met with little success. It takes about a week for deer to become accustomed to them. Deer proof fences, although effective, are very expensive. Electrical fences are seldom deer proof. Patrolling every night with bird shot and a dog, when not required for too lengthy a time, is effective and practical for some crops. Although trapping and removal of deer has been attempted many times as a means of control, it has never been successful in alleviating crop damage.

Chemical repellents have been mildly successful. Rain may wash them from plants then retreatment is necessary. Deer selectively feed on fast growing plants. Two or three treatments may be required during periods of rapid growth. Deer resume feeding on the new growth that occurs between sprayings. While new repelling compounds are becoming available, there is at this time no commercial deer repellent that provides a full season's protection from deer depredation. It is hoped that a practical repellent will soon be found.

Wildlife workers throughout the United States who have dealt with problem deer herds are in agreement that the only practical way to control crop damage is to reduce deer through liberalized hunting regulations. The most effective measure is to have an any - sex deer season.

In Louisiana either - sex deer seasons have been accepted in several parishes. They have given considerable relief to the farmer. However, buck hunting only during an any - sex season on wooded lands adjacent to bean fields results in high deer populations and consequently severe damage to the beans. Greatest damage usually occurs during June and July when beans are small and deer are pregnant or with fawns. The farmer occasionally takes matters into his own hands and shoots depredating deer at night. These deer are frequently left in the field to rot where they fall. This is a needless waste of a highly prized animal. When apprehended, the farmer is charged with a violation by commission agents, but he is seldom prosecuted by local officials. This undesirable stalemate could be avoided.

The solution to the problem is not an easy one. When the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission encourages the acceptance of an any - sex deer season in areas having crop damage, it is implementing the most realistic and practical management procedure known. The commission wants to maintain the best deer hunting possible, but the farmer is entitled to relief from crop damage.

The Commission believes that:

1. The solution to the problem is a reduction in deer adjacent to agricultural crops. Since the removal of bucks only will not solve the problem, both sexes should be harvested.

2. The removal of deer should be made only during the regular fall and winter hunting season. They should not be killed during the spring and summer and left to rot in the fields.

3. Each deer should be tagged with a standard big game tag. The land owner or club can determine not only the number of deer that will be harvested but also who harvests them.

Solving the problem will require patience and understanding by the sportsman and the farmer. The hunter should cooperate by harvesting enough any-sex deer on forested lands to keep crop damage in adjacent fields to a level that is not serious. The farmer must realize that the complete elimination of deer crop damage is impossible unless deer are exterminated. Most farmers are deer hunters and are willing to accept a reasonable loss. But they cannot be expected to feed on overpopulation of hungry deer.

The commission urges that communities having high deer crop damage work for an any-sex deer season. It is the only practical solution to deer crop damage.

Fish License, Teal Permits

With Paul Martin

Sportsmen keeping legal order on their outdoor activities are advised its time to get that new Louisiana fishing license and, if interested in early teal hunting, to make application for the special federal teal permits.

The current 1966 - 67 Louisiana fishing license expires next Friday evenning, June 30, Before making those fishing trips next weekend or thereafter, Louisiana anglers will need the new 1967 - 68 license that sells for $2 and will be good for two years.

After two years in which anglers could have purchased the license currently in use, Louisiana game agents recently made a one - week total of 52 cases of fishing without a license. The new license must be in possession for any fishing in the two years beginning July 1.

A lot of Fourth of July fishing trips can be spoiled for sports fishermen who forget it is time for renewal of that license.

C. D. Meredith, chief civil deputy for Ouachita parish, said the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission has already made licenses available. They may be obtained in the office of the tax collector at the courthouse or from most of the sporting goods dealers in the area.

Dr. Leslie Glasgow, LWLFC director, has announced the teal permits are now available for Louisiana hunters desiring to participate in the third annual phase of the special federal teal hunting season that runs nine days, Sept. 22 - 30.

The U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service has established an August 23 cut - off of the issuance of these permits. Hunters who have not made application for permits before the cut - off date will be permitted to hunt although this special waterfowl season still will be 30 days away.

If you want a teal permit, make that application now by addressing a post card to: "Teal Section, Fish and Game Division, Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, Capitol Station, Baton Rouge, La., 70804." Your name and return address, with zip code, should be plainly written on the card.

"This nine - day special season will be for teal and teal only." Dr. Glasgow pointed out. "Hunters are cautioned that violations may result in the loss of this special season and the hunting opportunity which we now enjoy."

Thank 21 Senators

"Local Pressure" groups, unless for the good of the whole, are often like an affliction of the body, troublesome, hard to cure, sometimes tolerated, more frequently bitterly fought.

The "pressure group" that wanted free grazing of livestock on the 60,000 - acre Sabine Wildlife Management Area was duly represented by its state senator whose senate concurrent resolution No. 60 was recently defeated by a 21 - 15 - 3 roll call vote of the Louisiana senate.

Louisiana sportsmen can thank 21 state senators for their support in demanding that the state's game management areas be maintained for the purpose for which they were purchased and not thrown open to anyone who wanted to range their stock there. If allowed in Saline it could have followed in nearby Russell Sage or any other state owned GMA's.

The 21 senators backing the LWLFC and the state's sportsmen were Babin, Broussard, Clemons, Davis, DeBlieux, Duplantier, Egan, Eustice, Fink, Folkes, Fontenot, Fruge, Kimball, Knowles, Mollere, Montgomery, Moore, O'Keefe, Peltier, Tessier. Supporting the resolution to prohibit fencing out the livestock were Barham, Blair, Brown, Deichmann, Duncan, Friedman, Gilbert, Gravolet, Hickey, LeBlanc, Mitchell, Mouton, Poston, Rambo (his bill), Rayburn. Not voting wre Adcock, Jones, Myrick, Rogers, and the senate president.

Some Short Shots

Those deer hunters who took doe during the controversial half day any - deer season in Georgia - Pacific Game Management area are being invited by Morehouse parish Sheriff Hughie Perry to pick up their venison which had been held in storage pending litigation over the any - deer season. The LWLFC permitted the hunt last Nov. 25, but sheriff's officers were ordered to arrest any persons taking doe. State courts have upheld the LWLFC control of GMAs, and the Morehouse police jury has ordered return of venison to 112 hunters. Sportsmen now may be extending thanks to Morehouse for bringing the action that brought legal opinions that might possibly keep anything from happening like this again.

Jack E. Bell, Monroe after a year's break, is back as president of the Louisiana Field Archery Association, a post he filled two straight years until Allen Meredith, Shreveport, was elected a year ago. Drew Nelms, West Monroe, was elected vice president; Mrs. Helen Nelms, West Monroe, secretary - treasurer; and Mrs. Marilyn McMahan, Monroe, classification and 20 - pin secretary. Bell, national director from the area, has recommended Drew Nelms for the post with the NFAA which conducts its national championships at Jackson, Miss., July 24 - 28.

A St. Louis visitor, George Leonard (8312 Eads Ave., St. Louis, Mo., 63114) writes: "While fishing in Black Bayou I came to a section that has a railroad track with two culverts and saw several men using large treble hooks to snag bass. I stayed some distance away and saw them take (snag) 14 bass two of them I judged would go close to 3½ pounds. I was told this is a daily happening at that spot and some people I talked to said it was legal . . . others said no." The Black Bayou he is talking about is the lake right here in Ouachita parish and the railroad track is at the A&LM crossing at Oliver. Snagging fish in Louisiana is illegal and we think we can assure Mr. Leonard that the "snatchers" won't be working this area for a whole.

The Southwest Louisiana Fishing Club's Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo at Cameron, La., is dated July 1-2-3. Headquarters will be Pete Henry's pier in Cameron. Entry fee is $5.

The Ville Platte Jaycees hold their second annual Fishing Rodeo and outboard motor boat races at Chicot State Park, July 1-2-4. Registration fee is $2 for the two-day fishing contest. The boat races are on The Fourth.

The first month of the Ouachita Wildlife Unit's three - month fishing contest closed a week ago and the second is now in progress. Winners for the May - June period will be announced and awards made at next Tuesday's regular meeting.

There is a plan in the mill from some Sterlington residents to have Lake Bartholomew put into a management program. William Taylor, Sterlington, tells us "It is a good lake but the moss has taken it." He said the LWLFC recommendations of lowering water levels at certain times of the year will be sought. "We don't want a fight on this, just cooperation," Taylor said. He's a Southern Bell Telephone Company employe who lives on the lake, also known as Dead Bayou.

The Outdoor Scoreboard

Checking up on the fishermen at Black Bayou Lake, it turned out that speckled perch limits were shown in recent days by JOE MYLES, JIM BODIFORD, T. R. TAYLOR, JOE WILKINS and J. L. DORSAY, the latter of Ruston. JOHN WOODS took 48 specks, two shy the limit. PAUL DANNA and C. McPHERSON took bass limits, and W. L. WILSON showed the bream limit. ALBERT JACKSON took 68 bream.

AL EASON, Kilgore, Tex., sports editor and outdoor writer was up at Lake D'Arbonne to prepare a story on the new Louisiana lake. He fished with the REV. MAX SPINKS and JACK CAMPBELL, the party taking 187 bream. R. C. MOORE also checked out D'Arbonne crappie limits for L. F. CLINE, Haynesville (three times), and F. M. BRANCH, Haynesville. RICK RYAN, Monroe, had eight bass; W. C. ABBOTT and R. L. SAULTER, Jonesboro, 13; ADELL THOMAS and son, Ruston, 150 bream; J. C. CROW and J. D. KELLY, Homer, 75 bream; S. T. EVANS and MAX EVANS, Athens, 125 bream and one of the stocked striped bass that was 17 inches long and weighed two and a half pounds; B. R. and MRS. COCKRELL, Haynesville, 55 bream; and MRS. RUBY SHYNE and MRS. RUTH SHYNE, Athens, 114 chinquapin bream.

REEF FREEMAN reports from Big Horseshoe that PETE HATHAWAY, GENE DEBRIE, "PEANUT" BROWN and JAMES HATHAWAY and their wives had a bananza on bass, taking all they were allowed."

Bussey Brake bass limits were scored by BOYD HOLLEY, J. B. HOLLEY, CHARLIE HAMACKER, JERRY WOLFE, RICHARD BOOK, "SPEEDY" GOODNIGHT, ROY DEAN SISSON, and the REV. D. L. PRUITT, Bastrop, LARRY NOLA, GERALD WALD and ROBERT SMITH, Monroe, and TRAVIS W. ORRELL, El Dorado. KENNETH HALL also took the bass limit, and RUSSELL WHITE and "HOOT" GIBSON, West Monroe, took 22. ROSISE and MR. FATHEREE, Sterlington, took 200 bream, and RICKY CURTIS, Bastrop, showed 35 crappie.

WALTER DURHAM, Winnfield, and his sister, MRS. JOHN TUCKER, caught 23 bass a few days ago at Saline Lake, and WALTER was out again with JACK WILLIAMS for 17.

Quillo Queen Takes Crown At Aqueduct

NEW YORK (AP) — Quillo Queen, who set Martin Andersen back $92,000 as a yearling, broke Furl Sail's spell on the 3-year-old filly division Saturday with an emphatic victory in the $131,750 Coaching Club American Oaks at Aqueduct.

Furl Sail, who had won the Acorn and Mother Goose en route to eight victories, six of them in stakes, in 10 starts this year, wound up a mighty tired fourth as Quillo Queen hit the end of the 1¼ miles seven lengths in front.

Second place went to the King' Ranch's Muse, with her 86-year-old trainer, Max Hirsch, watching the race on television from a hospital bed where he recently was confined with a mild heart attack.

Another 1½ lengths back came Pepperwood from the Meadow Stables. It was another 7½ lengths back to Furl Sail.

The victory, with jockey Ernie Cardone of New York registering his first triumph in a $100,000-plus race, was worth $85,637.50 to the owner of Quillo Queen.

Although she was runner-up to Furl Sail in the Acorn and Mother Goose, Quillo Queen was neglected in the betting by the crowd of 43,193. She paid $15.60, $5.40 and $4.60.

BEFORE AND AFTER shots show Boscobel as it was sixty years ago and as it stands today. The old home was built by Major Henry Bry in the 1840's. It was continuously occupied for about 100 years, but is now empty.

OLD CAMP PLACE as it stands today. Originally built as a stop on the old stagecoach line between Monroe and Shreveport, the house was a columned, two-story structure. Remodelling in the 1920's removed the second floor and used these materials for additions at ground level.

S. NEWT CAMP purchased the house after his arrival in Ouachita parish in 1872, when the railroad across north Louisiana had been completed and the stage line discontinued. Many of his descendants, who numbered two sons and seven grandsons, still live in the area.

Ghostly Houses Bring Back Memories Of The Past Years

By MARILLYN TAYLOR

In our visits to old homes in this area, we are constantly searching for one which is truly haunted. A number of houses hereabouts have had the reputation of being so in former years.

However, in this modern day, ghosts seem to be getting rarer. Or perhaps more shy. Wh have visited several "haunted houses", only to learn that the present owners have seen no manifestation of supernatural activity for decades.

The houses themselves are the ghosts. The very atmosphere around an old, empty house seems permeated with memories of stories told of an by those who lived here.

In the mid-nineteenth century, a stage coach line ran from Monroe to Shreveport on the Old Wire Road. (The road was so named because it followed the route of the telegraph wires, as fliers in World War II followed the railroad lines, their "iron compass".)

First stop out of Monroe was a house built about 1855 some 10 miles out, where horses were changed. This was a two-story structure with wide front gallery and square columns. It featured the traditional floor plan of two rooms on each side of a wide central hall. Upstairs were a number of smaller rooms because the house doubled as an inn.

The old place must have seen many exciting days. The Louisiana Guide, sponsored by the Louisiana Library commission states "It is said that refugees of the War Between the States buried gold near by and that a murder was committed in the house." The Guide, which is dated 1941, also says, in the present tense, "one of the oldest houses in the region, popularly supposed to be haunted."

Following the War Between the States, when the railroad was completed across North Louisiana, the statecoach lines ceased operation. In 1872, the old house, with 360 acres of land, was purchased by S. Newton Camp, newly arrived in Ouachita parish from Georgia.

Born in Warren County, Georgia, in 1832, Mr. Camp had served during the War Between the States. Family tradition has it that Mr. Camp walked home from North Carolina to Georgia after the surrender of his group to Sherman. When he arrived home, he luxuriated in a hot bath and shave. And he never shaved again as long as he lived.

Mr. Camp and his wife, the former Miss Nancy Jordan, "moved West" in 1872, and purchased the house which from that time on was called the Old Camp Place. The couple had two sons; and later, seven grandsons and one granddaughter. A number of descendants live today in this area, including some who live on the homestead itself.

Always active in the life of the community, Mr. Camp served with the committee which worked to select a site for the experimental station now located at Calhoun. Professor W. C. Stubbs of New Orleans came to inspect and approve the spot chosen. As a result of findings at the agricultural station, farmers in the region were influenced to change their staple crop of cotton, varying it with potatoes, Spanish goobers, and various varieties of corn.

Mr. Camp served for many years as president of the North Louisiana Agricultural Society, devoted to working with and helping farmers. At one time he was interviewed by the press. The family has a copy of the clipping, undated, but obviously very old.

In the story, Mr. Camp tells of his life and work. He states that he gave the first paper ever presented to the society. His topic was "Will It Pay the Average Farmer to Use Commercial Fertilizer?" He says. "I took the affirmative, and I still think I was right. That was in the spring of '88, I think."

All these years, the house continued to enjoy a reputation for being haunted. It did not seem to bother Mr. Newt, but other family members of later generations remember their reluctance to stay upstairs. This seemed to be the center for a feeling of indeterminate unease. It was here that the murder was believed to have been committed—perhaps the murder of the man who buried the gold, who can tell?

Finally, in the 1920's, Mr. Newt's grandson, Reese Camp undertook to remodel the old place. He narrowed the gallery, replacing the columns with pillars in the then-current style, half brick and half wood. Fireplaces at each end of the house were torn down, and a great center chimney built with fireplaces opening into the hall and the parlor. According to the Louisiana Guide, materials used in additions were taken from the sections torn down, including plates, joists, and sills handhewn from solid pine logs.

The second story was completely removed, and the ghost laid to rest. In the renovation, boards with odd blood-colored stains were found — and probably not used in the additions. Whatever the explanation, the ghost has not manifested itself since that time.

Mrs. Reese Camp continued to live in the old house until very recently. Her son, Jack Camp, with Mrs. Camp and their two sons, live in a new house which shares the same yard and drive. But the Old Camp Place is now empty, itself a phantom of the past.

BOSCOBEL

Another "ghost" is Boscobel, an old plantation house facing the river some miles south of town. Built by Major Henry Bry in the 1840's, the two-story structure of heart cypress was thereafter sold to a Mr. Fennell, who sold in turn to John Randolph Lacy.

Mr. Lacy gave the house its name "Boscobel" after his home in Virginia. The word is a contraction of a French phrase meaning "beautiful woods". Mr. Lacy brought with him one hundred slaves, who spoke with the broad A's of the Virginian.

Shortly after coming to Louisiana, Mr. Lacy married the former Miss Emma Prothro, whose home had been the Prothro plantation near Natchitoches. A letter in possession of the couple's granddaughter, Miss Sallie Humble, tells of the improvement in the life of everyone at the plantation with the arrival of a mistress.

Several interesting stories of life at Boscobel during the War Between the States have been handed down by word of mouth. Union soldiers were stationed in this area prior to moving on to the siege of Vicksburg. John Lacy was away serving with Confederate armies at the time.

Soldiers stationed nearby heard Emma playing the piano, and asked permission to come in and listen. She refused to allow Yankees inside her home, but permitted them to sit on the steps to hear the music. Later some of the soldiers came asking to buy cream. Emma, too proud to sell, sent cream as a gift to the Northern camp. When the container was returned, it was filled with coffee beans, rarer than gold to a Southern housewife.

Once Emma, out on horseback saw a party of Yankees marching on Boscobel. Not wishing to watch her home being ransack stayed away until the group departed. The Negro cook who had been in the house reported that the troops searched the house for Confederate soldiers. One soldier picked up a watch, but his commander ordered him to put it back. Nothing was missing.

When Yankee troops moved out, they left behind one of their number who was ill. Emma had him taken in and nursed back to health. At his departure, he promised her aid if ever she should be in need, but Emma never called upon him.

Randolph died in a fall from a horse, and Emma died penniless soon after. Boscobel has changed hands several times in the intervening decades. Located on land now being farmed by T. A. Calloway, the house itself is empty, another ghost along the Ouachita.

Mississippi Jury Awards Negro $250

MERIDIAN, Miss. (AP) — A predominantly white federal court jury Saturday awarded a Negro man $250 damages for a beating he received from a white man who mistook him for a civil rights worker.

The jury of 10 whites and two Negroes deliberated two hours before returning a verdict in favor of R. G. Grady of Memphis, a former resident of Kemper County in East - Central Mississippi.

Grady, a Negro, sued a white father and son, contending the son had deliberately beat him as the father held him at gunpoint.

The jury assessed $250 damages against the son, James Breckenridge of Dekalb, but decided in favor of his father, Lavon Breckenridge. Grady had asked $25,000.

Denison Ray of the Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights Under Law,who represented Grady, said it was the first case he knew of in which a jury had found for a Negro in a damage suit against a white.

Ray quoted Grady as saying James Breckenridge beat him and four other Negroes with a club on July 2, 1966, as his father held them at bay with a gun. During the beating, Ray said, the son turned to his father and said the five Negroes were civil rights workers.

Ray said none of the five was involved in civil rights work.

The Breckenridges contended the beating was self-defense.

BEFORE AND AFTER shots show Boscobel as it was sixty years ago and as it stands today. The old home was built by Major Henry Bry in the 1840's. It was continuously occupied for about 100 years, but is now empty.

Ghostly Houses Bring Back Memories Of The Past Years

By MARILLYN TAYLOR

In our visits to old homes in this area, we are constantly searching for one which is truly haunted. A number of houses hereabouts have had the reputation of being so in former years.

However, in this modern day, ghosts seem to be getting rarer. Or perhaps more shy. Wh have visited several "haunted houses", only to learn that the present owners have seen no manifestation of supernatural activity for decades.

The houses themselves are the ghosts. The very atmosphere around an old, empty house seems permeated with memories of stories told of an by those who lived here.

In the mid-nineteenth century, a stage coach line ran from Monroe to Shreveport on the Old Wire Road. (The road was so named because it followed the route of the telegraph wires, as fliers in World War II followed the railroad lines, their "iron compass".)

First stop out of Monroe was a house built about 1855 some 10 miles out, where horses were changed. This was a two-story structure with wide front gallery and square columns. It featured the traditional floor plan of two rooms on each side of a wide central hall. Upstairs were a number of smaller rooms because the house doubled as an inn.

The old place must have seen many exciting days. The Louisiana Guide, sponsored by the Louisiana Library commission states "It is said that refugees of the War Between the States buried gold near by and that a murder was committed in the house." The Guide, which is dated 1941, also says, in the present tense, "one of the oldest houses in the region, popularly supposed to be haunted."

Following the War Between the States, when the railroad was completed across North Louisiana, the statecoach lines ceased operation. In 1872, the old house, with 360 acres of land, was purchased by S. Newton Camp, newly arrived in Ouachita parish from Georgia.

Born in Warren County, Georgia, in 1832, Mr. Camp had served during the War Between the States. Family tradition has it that Mr. Camp walked home from North Carolina to Georgia after the surrender of his group to Sherman. When he arrived home, he luxuriated in a hot bath and shave. And he never shaved again as long as he lived.

Mr. Camp and his wife, the former Miss Nancy Jordan, "moved West" in 1872, and purchased the house which from that time on was called the Old Camp Place. The couple had two sons; and later, seven grandsons and one granddaughter. A number of descendants live today in this area, including some who live on the homestead itself.

Always active in the life of the community, Mr. Camp served with the committee which worked to select a site for the experimental station now located at Calhoun. Professor W. C. Stubbs of New Orleans came to inspect and approve the spot chosen. As a result of findings at the agricultural station, farmers in the region were influenced to change their staple crop of cotton, varying it with potatoes, Spanish goobers, and various varieties of corn.

Mr. Camp served for many years as president of the North Louisiana Agricultural Society, devoted to working with and helping farmers. At one time he was interviewed by the press. The family has a copy of the clipping, undated, but obviously very old.

In the story, Mr. Camp tells of his life and work. He states that he gave the first paper ever presented to the society. His topic was "Will It Pay the Average Farmer to Use Commercial Fertilizer?" He says, "I took the affirmative, and I still think I was right. That was in the spring of '88, I think."

All these years, the house continued to enjoy a reputation for being haunted. It did not seem to bother Mr. Newt, but other family members of later generations remember their reluctance to stay upstairs. This seemed to be the center for a feeling of indeterminate unease. It was here that the murder was believed to have been committed—perhaps the murder of the man who buried the gold, who can tell?

Finally, in the 1920's, Mr. Newt's grandson, Reese Camp undertook to remodel the old place. He narrowed the gallery, replacing the columns with pillars in the then-current style, half brick and half wood. Fireplaces at each end of the house were torn down, and a great center chimney built with fireplaces opening into the hall and the parlor. According to the Louisiana Guide, materials used in additions were taken from the sections torn down, including plates, joists, and sills handhewn from solid pine logs.

The second story was completely removed, and the ghost laid to rest. In the renovation, boards with odd blood-colored stains were found — and probably not used in the additions. Whatever the explanation, the ghost has not manifested itself since that time.

Mrs. Reese Camp continued to live in the old house until very recently. Her son, Jack Camp, with Mrs. Camp and their two sons, live in a new house which shares the same yard and drive. But the Old Camp Place is now empty, itself a phantom of the past.

OLD CAMP PLACE as it stands today. Originally built as a stop on the old stagecoach line between Monroe and Shreveport, the house was a columned, two-story structure. Remodelling in the 1920's removed the second floor and used these materials for additions at ground level.

S. NEWT CAMP purchased the house after his arrival in Ouachita parish in 1872, when the railroad across north Louisiana had been completed and the stage line discontinued. Many of his descendants, who numbered two sons and seven grandsons, still live in the area.

THE ASSOCIATED Press average of 60 stocks declined for the first time in three weeks when it closed Friday 326.2 from 327.8 a week ago. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed at 877.37, down from 885.00 a week ago. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Air Of Caution Noted During Week On Market

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market virtually marked time last week as the United Nations debated the Middle East crisis.

An air of caution prevailed in Wall Street as investors waited to see if a summit meeting could be arranged between President Johnson and Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin.

The heads of the two great powers got together Friday but the market closed before any word came out about their discussion.

There was little in the economic news to inspire the market. Talk of a tax increase, perhaps late in the year, again was heard. A report that major railroads are generally pessimistic about prospects for their 1967 earnings hurt rail issues. New factory orders for durable goods in May posted their sharpest gain since last September.

For the week the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials declined 7.63 to 877.37. The Associated Press 60-stock average last week dipped 1.6 to 326.2.

Of 1,594 issues traded, 766 declined and 676 advanced. There were 252 new 1967 highs and 119 new lows.

Reflecting the cautious mood of the investors, volume for the week fell to 47,368,680 shares from 54,757,250 a week ago.

Trading was active on the American Stock Exchange, where many lower priced issues got a big play.

Bond prices sagged again last week with some dropping to their lowest level in over 40 years. Federal Reserve purchases of two-year and over Treasury securities braked the declines in intermediate governments.

U.S. Still Gives Aid To Mideast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Saturday the United States was continuing economic aid to countries in the Middle East which had maintained diplomatic relations and was continuing food aid to other parts of the area.

The brief statement made no mention of other economic or military aid to Middle Eastern countries which broke off relations with the United States during the Arab-Israeli war earlier this month.

This was the first official statement of the new look on American aid since the department said it was reviewing all aid programs in the troubled area.

The one-sentence announcement said: "We are continuing economic aid on the usual basis in all countries of the area ken diplomatic relations with us, and we are continuing existing food donation agreements through international agencies and private voluntary agencies in all countries f the area where arrangements for delivery and supervision continue to be satisfactory."

Two Syrians Plead Guilty Of Overthrow

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Two Syrian army officers pleaded guilty Saturday to planning to overthrow Syria's Socialist regime and declared the United States was "the chief architect" of the plot, Radio Damascus reported.

The broadcast said the high treason trial of Maj. Salim Hatoum and Maj. Badr Jumaa opened before a Damascus military tribunal at midnight. It said the two men confessed that American, British and German intelligence services helped them plan an invasion of Syria by antigovernment forces recruited and trained in Jordan.

Morning Ceremony Saturday Unites Kay Townsend Branch, Lawrence Doffin Culpepper

White California gladioli, stocks, agapanthus and white Majestics arranged in brass urns atop marble pedestals were used on each side of the main altar of Grace Episcopal Church for the morning wedding Saturday, June 24 of Miss Kay Townsend Branch and Lawrence Doffin Culpepper.

Burning tapers placed cathedral style pointed to the large gold cross in the center of the altar where the Rev. Bradley Trimble performed the double ring ceremony at 11 a.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Albert Branch, 218 Lakeside Drive and Mr. Culpepper is the son of Mrs. Natalie Culpepper of Alexandria.

A prenuptial concert was rendered by the organist, Gerald Mummert, who also accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Waymon Etier.

Mr. Branch gave his daughter in marriage. Her gown of white French net caged a sheath silhouette of peau de soie. The cage featured wide bell sleeves and cowl neckline of peau de soie, embroidered with seed pearls. All - over embroidered French loveknots accented the French net of the gown and Watteau train falling in folds from the shoulders to court length. A double bow of peau de soie held her four - tiered veil of French illusion. She carried a classic bouquet fashioned in a cascade of white bridal roses.

Mrs. Johnny Lauve served as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Toni Stephens, Coushatta, cousin of the bride; Mrs. Lucien A. Branch Jr., Wempland Plantation and Mrs. Joe Baier of Oxford, Miss. They wore identical floor length sheath gowns of blush pink crepe, fashioned with Empire bodices, scoop necklines and elbow sleeves. Their headpieces were double bows of blush pink crepe with short illusion veils. Each carried a cascade bouquet of pink Mayday roses and miniature English ivy with touches of pink French maline.

Flower girls, Misses Sharon Knotts and Carrie Prudhomme, cousins of the bride, were dressed in floor length frocks of tucked organdy with square necklines and puffed sleeves. The Empire waists were defined by pink velveteen ribbon which tied in back and fell in streamers. Small pink velveteen bows formed their headpieces, and they carried frilled rosette bouquets of Mayday roses with white lace ruffles and pink satin streamers.

Charles Anastsi of Alexandria, served as best man and groomsmen were Charles Ewing III, Alexandria, White Graves of Memphis, Tenn., and Lucien A. Branch Jr., brother of the bride. Ushers were Winston and Mac Atteberry of Eunice.

Mrs. Branch chose for her daughter's wedding a mauve chiffon gown with imported Alencon lace bodice and a mauve hat of chiffon roses matching a bow at the waistline. She wore mauve shoes and bag, white gloves and a pink cymbidium orchid. Mrs. Culpepper wore a two piece yellow chiffon with deeper shades of yellow and gold in floral design; yellow shoes and bag, a yellow chiffon hat and a yellow cymbidium orchid.

RECEPTION

A hand - made cover of white lace with designs in seed pearls, made by the bride's aunt, Mrs. William Lloyd Townsend Sr., was used on the bride's book table, ornamented by a crystal compote which held a burning white taper and white blossoms.

Covered with a white eyelet embroidered cloth the refreshment table was centered with a triangle arrangement of white stock, agapanthus, iris and roses in an English silver and crystal epergne holding two white tapers. The bride's cake table was covered with a matching cloth and garlanded with English ivy. Groom's cake, served from a glass top Verde green table, was garlanded with English ivy and the traditional green grapes. Coffee was served from a silver service.

The bride wore for going away a navy linen suit featuring a white monogrammed shell, with navy and white accessories. Her veil of illusion drifted from a cluster of organza rosebuds, trimmed with lace and seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white carnations and lily of the valley centered with a yellow cymbidium orchid atop a white Bible.

Attending the bride were Mrs. Jimmy Love Myrick, matron of honor; Miss Carol Sue Buffaloe, maid of honor; Mrs. Donald Whitehead and Miss Rita Laurene Garner, sister of the bride, bridesmaids. They wore short dresses of mint green crepe, featuring scoop necklines and puff sleeves. Empire lines were defined by bands of matching peau with flat bows at center front. The tiered wedding cake was served by Mrs. Morris Moore and Mrs. John Buffaloe and alternating at the crystal punch bowl were Mrs. Ralph Moore and Mrs. Wayne Edwards. Mrs. Carlton Ward presided at the guest book table which was ornamented by the bride's bouquet at the base of a white memory candle.

Tea girls were Misses Louise Standifer and Barbara Buffaloe. Yellow and mint green rice bags were distributed by Miss Tina Vaughn and Michael Harris.

For travel the bride donned a two piece ensemble of yellow silk shantung with white lizard accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. James D. Mays of Winnsboro and Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Chew of Ruston.

Rev. Doug Williams officiated at the double ring vows at 7:30 p.m. following music by the organist, Mrs. E. T. McClung and vocalist, Bruce Kolb.

Mrs. Chew, mother of the groom, wore a mint green lace gown with silk cowl collar and tie at the midriff and a corsage of saffron cymbidium orchids.

Centering the bride's table was a silver candelabra with white tapers, garlands of smilax and a silver compote arrangement of pastel Picardy stock. Smilax garlands and Picardy florets encircled the cake and punch bowls. Arrangements throughout the home repeated the Picardy color theme.

Mrs. Richard Ringheim and Miss Patricia Anne Moore presided at the guest book. Bride's cake was served by Miss Kathe Skinner and groom's cake by Miss Jean Bowman. Presiding at the punch bowls were Mrs. Richard Tullos and Mrs. Allen Carpenter. DEAD CORNER

Seemingly dead corner space in a bathroom can easily be brought back to life by putting in a waist-high corner cabinet for bathroom accessories. Put ceramic mosaic or glazed wall tiles atop the cabinet, install a triple corner-mirror above and, presto, the woman of the house has a vanity counter.

Jones-Fuller Vows Read In Fatima Church

MRS. JAMES ESTUS JONES

Our Lady of Fatima Church in Monroe, was scene of the ceremony at 10 a.m. Saturday, June 24 which united in marriage Miss Doris Virginia Fuller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Fuller of Crew Lake, and James Estus Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther L. Jones Sr., of Lafayette.

The Rev. Father George Martinez performed the double ring nuptials at 10 a.m. with appropriate music by Mrs. Peggy Ledger, Sterlington, organist and Mrs. Fred Moore, Sterlington, sister of the groom, soloist.

Wearing a floor length gown of white organza over peau de soie in A-line style, the bride was given in marriage by her father. White lace and sequins accented the neckline, the bottom of the long fitted sleeves and also bordered the hem of the gown. An organza train, slso embellished with lace and sequin motifs, fell from the shoulders. Her tiered veil of bridal illusion was held in place by a crystal tiara. She carried a bouquet of white roses with white satin streamers atop a white Bible.

Maid of honor was Miss Deborah Dowdey, niece of the bride, who wore a street length dress of mint green linen in A-line style with bell shaped sleeves of matching lace. Her headdress was of mint green net and she carried a nosegay of white carnations, entwined with mint green ribbon.

Flower girl was Miss Connie Lynn Whitten, also a niece of the bride. She wore a floor length dress of white cotton brocade with empire waist, defined by a lace insertion with mint green ribbon. The dress featured short puff sleeves and square neckline, bordered in lace. She also carried a nosegay.

Luther L. Jones Jr., attended his brother as best man and ushers were Jerry Jones, brother of the groom and Earl Walker.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents at Crew Lake. For the occasion Mrs. Fuller received her guests wearing an ensemble of beige lace over dacron with bone accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother chose a suit of yellow bonded knit with beige accessories and white carnation corsage.

The bride's table was covered with a mint green cloth, overlaid with off-white lace and centered with an arrangement of multi-colored flowers encircling a miniature bride and groom. The tiered wedding cake, topped with a wedding cross, engraved with the bride and groom's initials, was served by Misses Dianne Clement and Ginger Eppinette. Presiding at the punch bowl were Miss Vicki White and Mrs. Robert Williams. Miss Mary Killen registered guests at the bride's book.

After a wedding trip to Biloxi, Miss., and New Orleans, the couple will be at home in West Monroe. For travel the bride wore a dress of olive green bonded crepe with bell sleeves of couturier lace in matching shade. Her accessories were of bone and she wore a corsage from her bouquet.

Nature Themes Adopted For New Abstract Prints

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

Abstract prints having nearly played out all possible themes, some are now appearing with nature themes.

These are abstracts, too, but the effect is an illusion. Actually, designer Tom Isbell takes a detailed study of a shell, a dragonfly's wing, an insect's antennae, magnifies them a thousand times their original size, stamps them on Ban - Lon Jersey.

Jones-Fuller Vows Read In Fatima Church

MRS. JAMES ESTUS JONES

Our Lady of Fatima Church in Monroe, was scene of the ceremony at 10 a.m. Saturday, June 24 which united in marriage Miss Doris Virginia Fuller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Fuller of Crew Lake, and James Estus Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther L. Jones Sr., of Lafayette.

The Rev. Father George Martinez performed the double ring nuptials at 10 a.m. with appropriate music by Mrs. Peggy Ledger, Sterlington, organist and Mrs. Fred Moore, Sterlington, sister of the groom, soloist.

Wearing a floor length gown of white organza over peau de soie in A-line style, the bride was given in marriage by her father. White lace and sequins accented the neckline, the bottom of the long fitted sleeves and also bordered the hem of the gown. An organza train, also embellished with lace and sequin motifs, fell from the shoulders. Her tiered veil of bridal illusion was held in place by a crystal tiara. She carried a bouquet of white roses with white satin streamers atop a white Bible.

Maid of honor was Miss Deborah Dowdey, niece of the bride, who wore a street length dress of mint green linen in A-line style with bell shaped sleeves of matching lace. Her headdress was of mint green net and she carried a nosegay of white carnations entwined with mint green ribbon.

Flower girl was Miss Connie Lynn Whitten, also a niece of the bride. She wore a floor length dress of white cotton brocade with empire waist, defined by a lace insertion with mint green ribbon. The dress featured short puff sleeves and square neckline, bordered in lace. She also carried a nosegay.

Luther L. Jones Jr., attended his brother as best man and ushers were Jerry Jones, brother of the groom and Earl Walker.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents at Crew Lake. For the occasion Mrs. Fuller received her guests wearing an ensemble of beige lace over dacron with bone accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother chose a suit of yellow bonded knit with beige accessories and white carnation corsage.

The bride's table was covered with a mint green cloth, overlaid with off-white lace and centered with an arrangement of multi-colored flowers encircling a miniature bride and groom. The tiered wedding cake, topped with a wedding cross, engraved with the bride and groom's initials, was served by Misses Dianne Clement and Ginger Eppinette. Presiding at the punch bowl were Miss Vicki White and Mrs. Robert Williams. Miss Mary Killen registered guests at the bride's book.

After a wedding trip to Biloxi, Miss., and New Orleans, the couple will be at home in West Monroe. For travel the bride wore a dress of olive green bonded crepe with bell sleeves of couturier lace in matching shade. Her accessories were of bone and she wore a corsage from her bouquet.

The bride graduated from Start high school and attended Northeast. Mr. Jones was graduated from Morgan City high school and Spencer Business College in Lafayette and attended Northeast.

Uniforms Designed By Queen Couturier

Miniskirts or ermine? Either could be in prospect for the 1500 British European Airways stewardesses and ground hostess for whom new uniforms will be designed. You might say they'll be dressed to suit a queen. The airline has chosen Queen Elizabeth's couturier, Hardy Amies, to say what they will wear in the years ahead. In a poll of staff, sentiment for miniskirts was seen creeping up.

Uniforms Designed By Queen Couturier

Miniskirts or ermine? Either could be in prospect for the 1500 British European Airways stewardesses and ground hostess for whom new uniforms will be designed. You might say they'll be dressed to suit a queen. The airline has chosen Queen Elizabeth's couturier, Hardy Amies, to say what they will wear in the years ahead. In a poll of staff, sentiment for miniskirts was seen creeping up.

Bridal white and cameo pink were shades chosen by Miss Nancy Gay Marcus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Marcus of Lake Providence, for her wedding Saturday, June 24 to Delbert Craig Shew, of Lima, Ohio, which was solemnized in First Methodist Church. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert L. Shew of Lima.

Pedestal baskets of white gladioli were flanked by branched candelabra holding white tapers on the altar where Rev. Ned Stout performed the double ring vows at 7 p.m. White satin bows marked family pews.

Traditional wedding music was provided by Mrs. Jack L. Holt, organist and William Abernathy, Oak Grove, soloist.

Escorted by her father the bride was wearing an original wedding gown. The moulded cage of white English net was lavishly appliqued with reembroidered Alencon lace which was also repeated on the Watteau train of English net, banded in peau de soie. A full length veil of English illusion cascaded from a lily of the valley tiara. She carried a colonial bouquet of white orchids and white butterfly roses.

Miss Andrea Marcus, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Mrs. John Carpenter, Indianapolis, Ind., sister of the groom, matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Mary Lou Grossman, Lake Providence; Miss Carol Ann Hawkins, Monroe and Mrs. Joe Scott Roberts of Shreveport.

The attendants wore identical floor length dresses of cameo pink chiffon featuring Empire waists with Mandarin necklines, banded in clunny lace. Flowing chiffon panels fell to the hemline from the shoulders. Their headpieces were pompons of silk maline with scattered pearls, holding full length panel veils.

Serving as best man was John Carpenter, of Indianapolis and groomsmen were Richard Manning, Carl Siegal, Tony McCullock of Fayetteville, Ark., and Jack Timberlake, Bloomington, Ind. Ushers were uncles of the bride, Ed H. Gulley of Minden and Roland L. Marcus, Lake Jackson, Tex.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Marcus wore a romance pink silk dress fashioned with an insert of organza heavily beaded with crystals and rhinestones, and a flowered headpiece in shades of pink. The groom's mother, Mrs. Shew, wore a mint green Empire silk dress and jacket costume with matching shoes and bag and a white flower hat.

RECEPTION

BLUE LIPSTICK?

Would you believe green or beige or blue lipstick? It's part of a color spree by one cosmetic firm. The blue turns pink on your lips; the green, peachy; the beige, bare. The manufacturer says your lips are what change the colors into peachy, bare and pink. See? No, it isn't a color-blindness test.

Black And White Is Fashion-Right For All Occasions

Fashion accentuates both the positive and the negative this summer with striking cotton designs in black and white, reports the National Cotton Council.

The contemporary color combination appears in fashions in every category . . .from bathing suits to evening gowns . . . from short pant costumes to long graceful jump - suits. Wherever the summer sun shines, black and white follows in stripes, polka dots, oplike patterns, checks, swirls and random floral designs. It's a fashionable color team immeasurably enhanced by cotton fabrics. White shows up whiter and black more intense on a whole self of cotton like ottomans, voiles and piques. No wonder designers prefer cotton for their summer collections.

A deep yoke of Chantilly lace topped the flowing skirt and soft folds of the organdy formed her chapel length train. A crown of bride's roses and jeweled lace held her shoulder length veil of imported illusion. She carried a nosegay of white roses and gypsophila.

Mrs. M. Philip Guthrie, Monroe, attended the bride as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. Stephen Minor, Houston, Texas and Miss Kay Richardson, Monroe. They wore formal length gowns of pink georgette designed with scoop necklines and elbow length puffed sleeves. A band of rose satin defined the Empress Josephine waistline ending in a flat bow at the back with streamers to the hemline. They carried nosegays of pink roses.

Candles were lighted by Miss Peggy Sorrels and Dennis Bounds.

Serving as best man was Hobart Collins of Bellaire, Texas, and groomsmen were Philip Guthrie and Terry Hessick, both of Monroe. Ushers were Ronnie E. Bounds Jr. and Dwight Roy Shelton.

The bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church parlor following the exchange of vows. The couple departed for San Diego, Calif., where Mr. Collins, who attended Louisiana Tech, is now stationed with the U.S. Navy. Mrs. Collins is a May 1967 graduate of Louisiana Tech where she was a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority.

Jo Ann Woodard, John Smith Wed In Candlelight Setting

In a candlelight ceremony at 7 p.m. Saturday, June 24, Miss Jo Ann Woodard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Preston Woodard of Delhi, became the bride of John B. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Clyde Smith Sr., of Ruston.

Vows were exchanged in First Baptist Church, Delhi, where baskets of white stock and pompons flanking an arch of greenery and white pompons formed an altar setting for a white satin prie dieu. Candles burned in two candle trees and six seven-branched candelabra, with family pews marked by votive lights. Rev. Paul Kolb, Winnsboro, performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore an Empire sheath gown of silk peau de soie with lace motifs enhancing the bodice and skirt front. A chapel train of lace extended from the waist. She carried a cascade of butterfly roses centered with a white orchid, with satin ribbon and tulle on a white Bible.

. Wearing floor length gowns of green silk peau de soie with matching headpieces of roses and net, were the bride attendants, Miss Vicki Kay Smith, Ruston, sister of the groom, maid of honor; Misses Judith Louise Jones, Patricia Ann Newton and Constance Lois Waites, all of Delhi, bridemaids. The honor attendant carried a cascade bouquet of rose carnations and the bridesmaids carried light pink.

William Clyde Smith Sr., Baton Rouge, served his brother as best man and ushers were Joseph David Blondin, Otha Wayne Taylor, Eddie Lynn Taylor, all of Ruston; Don Ouchley, West Monroe; Ralph Thomas Speirs Jr. and Joe David Jones, of Delhi.

Both attended Louisiana Tech and upon their return will be at home in Ruston where Mr. Smith is in business with his father.

Pink, White Theme Featured In Moore–Farley Wedding

Worn mantilla style held high by her headpiece, her veil of silk chiffon extended beyond her dress train. A reception followed in the church social room where the bride's table covered with a white lace cloth over pink, held a centerpiece of white stock and pink asters in a cherub epergne flanked by pink tapers in matching candelabra. Mrs. Charles Simpson, aunt of the groom, served the bride's cake and presiding at the punch bowl opposite was Mr. Fred Moore Jr.

Groom's table held a chocolate cake made in the shape of an artist's palette, which was served by Miss Barbara Stonecipher, while presiding at the silver coffee service was Miss Bobbie Hohmann of Ringgold. Miss Donna Thompson of Bernice, cousin of the bride and Miss Debbie Wiltheis of Minden, alternated at the guest book. Tea girls were Misses Nancy White, Peggy Younse and Cindy Cassel.

Completion of the project, tentatively set for spring of next year, will complete the church plant on which the first work was started six years ago.

The addition was designed by Architects Rivers and Heuer of Monroe, and contract for construction was awarded to W. L. Salley, contractors.

A ground breaking service will be held at 7 p.m. today, it was announced by the Rev. G. Preston Brown, pastor.

The building is of contemporary design, and the sanctuary will seat 520 persons. The interior will be supported on laminated wood arches, and will be primarily finished in face brick and walnut paneling. There will be approximately 14,000 square feet of space in the structure.

The project will include a landscaped memorial courtyard, business office, pastor's study, secretary's office, session room, and choir practice room, in addition to the sanctuary.

The exterior of the building will feature diamond shape clearstory windows, wood patterned roof, and spire.

Evangelism Survey Data Discussed

United Press International

Protestants are for more energetic than Catholics or Jews in trying to win converts to their faith, according to a survey conducted for the Catholic Digest by Dr. George Gallup.

The question asked in the survey was:

"Have you ever tried to get anyone to join your religious group?"

Fifty - five per cent of the Protestants said they had engaged in personal missionary activity of that kind. But only 25 per cent of the Catholics and 19 per cent of the Jews had done so.

BAPTISTS ACTIVE

Among the larger Protestant bodies, Baptists are most active in personal evangelism, with 62 per cent reporting they had made attempts to win converts. Least active are Episcopalians. Only 37 per cent said they had tried to gain new adherents for their church.

Not covered by the survey were the Mormon Church, Jehovah's Witnesses and the smaller evangelical denominations of Protestantism, all of which place very heavy emphasis on winning converts through house - to - house canvasses and other forms of direct personal evangelism.

Guest Speakers Are Announced

Speaker at the 7 p.m. service today will be the Rev. W. W. Hatcher of Ruston, director of christian education for Red River Presbytery.

Early Church Dispute Based On Terminology

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Back in the 5th century, church theologians argued long and heatedly about how to define Christ as both divine and human. Out of that word battle emerged the first division in Christianity.

"It's now very clear that the whole problem was one of semantics," says Bishop Torkom Manoogian, primate of the Armenian Church in America, an offspring of the dispute, now displaying growing influence in interchurch affairs.

"Basically, we agree."

The point, generally recognized today by the ecclesiastical descendants on both sides in the old conflict, underlines one of the curious aspects of church cleavages—their continuation after the original causes have gone.

Realization that the historic quarrel involved mostly terminology rather than substance has come only with the modern growth of associations between Western churches and the ancient Oriental of so-called "monophysite" churches of the east.

TO NEW STAGE

One of them, the Armenian Church, is advancing to a new stage of institutional development in this country, with the construction of its first American cathedral, a $3.5-million center to be completed in New York this fall.

"In the minds of some people, a cathedral is a waste of money," Bishop Manoogian observed. "For us, it's a visible means of expressing the faith in its beauty and its grandeur. Symbolism can often say more than sermons."

Bishop Manoogian, 48, a trim, dark-haired man with a relaxed manner and a fondness for sports and music, was elected in April, 1966, to the top national post in his church, as head of the eastern diocese.

It includes all of North America except California and Arizona. Altogether, the church has about 350,000 members in 56 parishes, 13 of them in the small western diocese, which Bishop Manoogian formerly headed.

The communion, first established in this country in 1891 with the founding of the Armenian Church of the Savior in Worcester, Mass., has since spread to major cities of the East, Midwest and West.

SEES NEED

Its accent on conveying the mysteries of truth through extraverbal means, by architecture, music, art and liturgical forms, is one of the traits of the Oriental churches, and Bishop Manoogian sees it as a needed emphasis in the West.

"In contrast to the pragmatism of the Western approach, there's a more mystical quality about our worship, a spirituality," he said in an interview. "That doesn't mean there is no mysticism in Western Christianity.

"But the Western churches are more legalistic and dogmatic. They put the emphasis on articles of faith, on prescribing formulas about this and that. We're not so much concerned with articles of faith as with living the faith, in worship, in daily work and in our families."

It was the western urge to fix definitions and equations about divine realities that caused the first rupture in Christianity at the Council of Chalcedon in 451 A.D., which specified "two natures" in Christ—divine and human.

"The Oriental churches rejected this kind of interpretation which seemed to imply Christ had two separate and independent natures," Bishop Manoogian said. "We were defending the unity of Christ."

Actually, the council's "dyophysite" explanation was not meant to imply a split dualism in Christ, a half man, half God, as the Orientals mistook it. But they, in turn, were questionably accused of according him a divine nature overruling his humanity.

"Our church," Bishop Manoogian said, "has always asserted both the humanity and divinity of Christ. Our position was misunderstood."

This is now widely recognized 16 centuries later. The 1966 New Catholic Encyclopedia describes the break with the monophysite churches as "verbal or semantic rather than truly doctrinal."

In any case, the Oriental churches have continued in a special category among the world's denominations. They include, besides the Armenian Church, Egypt's Coptic Church, the Ethiopian Church, an Assyrian Church, and India's Church of Malabar.

Although akin to Eastern Orthodoxy in liturgy, doctrine and government, they are not within its jurisdictions. Eastern Orthodoxy's 250 million believers, in various branches, regard Istanbul's Patriarch Athenagoras as spiritual leader.

The smaller Oriental churches have thar independent patriarchates. Also, Eastern Orthodoxy did not split with Rome until the 11th century, long after the Oriental churches were cut off in the 5th century under the disputed heresy charges.

The Armenian Church's chief spiritual leader, Catholics Vasken I, of Yerevan, Armenia, part of the Soviet Union, is expected here next spring to consecrate the new pyramid-domed cathedral at Manhattan's 34th Street and Second Avenue.

FIRST TO ADOPT

Historically, Armenia was the world's first country to adopt Christianity as the state religion, doing so in 301 A.D., more than a decade before Roman Emperor Constantine in 313 gave Christianity official recognition.

Though subsequent centuries of Moslem conquests and recurrent persecutions, Armenians stuck to their faith, often in isolation from the rest of the Christian world.

Today, however, the church is active in the major interchurch cooperative bodies, the National and World Councils of Churches.

The ancient dispute that originally set the Oriental churches apart involved a central Christian mystery—how complete Godhood could be complete manhood, how the universal deity could be a single man of Nazareth.

The "absolute paradox," Danish philosopher Soren Kierkegaard once called it. "Something only God could do."

The dominant Christian understanding, in all camps, rejects any implication of divided, disjoined natures in Christ, divine and human. Nor is Christ's humanity regarded as subordinated or absorbed by his divinity, making him a kind of "heavenly human."

VIEW SUMMARIZED

Rather the view is that God became flesh through a genuine human soul, not in place of it, and without distracting from any human quality or spontaneity, but fully joining true holiness with true manhood, both unified inseparably in the single unique person of Christ.

Nevertheless, the mystery is considered beyond any precise human definitions. And Bishop Manoogian says the Oriental inclination to avoid hard, exact formulas may serve as a lesson to others in the movement for Christian unity.

"We hope that this will be a contribution we can make to the Western world," he said. "Of course, churches must have articles of faith, but overly rigid propositions cause divisions. This we know from the witness of history.

"Expressions of theological formulas can take different shapes and forms in order to express truth. Each generation and each civilization may have different formulations of the same essentials. We should always remember this."

Confident Living Daily Formula

Fear Plague Is Removable

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

"Fear is the great modern plague," said Dr. Smiley Blanton. Note the emphasis — not a great plague, but the great plague of our time.

He was referring, of course, not to that normal fear which causes us to express proper concern and exercise sensible caution. But rather to that abnormal fear which lurks in the dark recesses of the mind and fills it with ghosts and spectres.

How can a person get free of this type of fear? You will never really live until you do. One thing that should be stressed and emphasized is that fear is removable. Indeed, any bad emotion is removable. Anger is removable. Hate is removable. Depression is removable. Inferiority feelings are removable. You can be free of all of them provided you really want to, and want to badly enough. Nothing is more important than to be free of fear and really live.

PEALE

STOOD UP TO FEAR

Quite a lot has been written about analysis and psychiatric treatment in getting rid of fear. I have no criticism of their procedures but one cannot help wondering if the problem is always as complex as it is made out to be. Some pretty great people have been freed from fear by a simple and direct method — they just stood up to their fear.

Theodore Roosevelt who was a strong and tough - minded man said, "I have often been afraid. But I would not give in to it. I simply acted as though I was not afraid and presently the fear disappeared." In other words, he stood up to his fear and told it to go and it did. Fear backs down when you keep standing up to it.

Another Roosevelt, Mrs. Eleanor, said, "Strength, courage and confidence result from the experience of looking fear straight in the face."

Think of the many fear-ridden people across the years who have been given a new lease on life by that tremendous statement of Emerson's, "Do the thing you fear and the death of fear is certain." Walk up to the thing you are afraid of and hit it hard and it will begin to fold. A straight frontal attack on your fears, buttressed by a good healthy faith in God, and you are in and fear is out.

Actually there are two great forces working in the human mind: fear and faith. One destroys; the other creates. Even though fear is strong, faith is stronger; and the more you build up your faith the more certainly you will undermine your fear.

MUST FACE PROBLEM

I talked with a chaplain whose job is to counsel with men just arrived in Vietnam. He prepares them mentally and spiritually for the rugged experiences ahead.

All men going into battle, he declared, must face the problem of fear. But what troubles them most is the fear that they will be afraid. Can they stand up to it — when the shooting begins and gunfire rips into quivering human flesh? They want to meet it like men, the chaplain told me, and if they must die they want to die like men, unafraid. The advice the chaplain gives is: "Put your trust in God. Remember what you are fighting for. Help your buddies."

One young soldier seemed particularly concerned that he would be afraid when it got rough. The chaplain reminded him of the strong stuff of which he was made. "Your faith, son, is stronger than any fear," he told the young soldier.

He was in Vietnam only a short time when his outfit came under fire. His lieutenant was out in front and was hit twice, and fell in the direct line of fire. The boy sensed that the officer could not survive another wound — another and he would die. Without a moment's hesitation the soldier, forgetting his own safety, crawled out to the lieutenant. He curled his body around his officer, protected him from further fire; and in so doing took two bullets in his own body. Later they both were saved.

Asked about it afterward he said, "I asked God to help me save my lieutenant and He did."

"But were you not afraid?"

"Never thought of that," he replied. "I just had to save my friend." With no thought of himself his fear faded. And it always will when you stop thinking exclusively about yourself.

Stand up to fear. You're bigger than it is. Fear is removable.

HAL FRAZIER

Paris Drive Group Will Return Here

Scheduled to return to West Monroe, Tuesday, July 4th, from Paris is an 11 member group from the Church of Christ in West Monroe. The group is spending three weeks there campaigning for Christ.

The Paris Campaign group is composed of Leon Telford and his daughter Sandra, Mrs. Nelda Boultinghouse and sons, Denny and Randy, Ruth Downey, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Frazier and children, Darrell, Shirley, and David. Mr. Frazier is one of the evangelists of the church and the others work with the Personal Evangelism Program at White's Ferry Road Church of Christ.

More than 200 workers from the United States and Europe are in France for the campaign Distribution of tons of literature was started at the beginning of the campaign. Groups were assigned to every section of Paris in order to extend printed literature and invitations to the homes there. The eight million people in the metropolitan area of Paris comprise approximately 15 per cent of the nation's population, church officials said.

Some 50 workers in the crusade speak French fluently. These are being utilized in arranging and conducting cottage meetings and other personal work.

Many Churches Have Their Own Weekly Papers

United Press International

Can a local church congregation afford to publish a full-size weekly newspaper for its membership?

The cost and production problems would seem to be prohibitive. But there are at least 350 local Protestant churches in the United States that do have their own weekly newspapers.

They can do so because the ingenuity of a private corporation called All - Church Press, Inc., which has its headquarters in Fort Worth, Tex. Each of the participating churches send to All - church press each week enough news of its local affairs to fill the front page of a newspaper bearing its own masthead.

The inside pages are identical for all of the newspapers, and contain religious news and features of general interest.

Editions usually run from six to 12 pages, and carry a substantial volume of national advertising which enables all-church press to make the venture pay with relatively modest charges to the churches themselves.

Rapid Growth Is Seen For Churches Of Christ

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The fastest-growing major religious body in the United States is the Churches of Christ, an Evangelical Protestant communion which has its greatest strength in the South and West.

Its membership increased by 135 per cent—from 1,000,000 to 2,350,000—between 1950 and 1965 (the latest year for which comparative figures are available).

During the same period, a UPI survey showed, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) registered a membership gain of 61 per cent, to make it the second fastest-growing major body.

Other fast-growing denominations were the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, 60 per cent; the American Lutheran Church, 58 per cent; and the Southern Baptist Convention, 58 per cent.

The average growth rate for all Protestant bodies during the 15 year span was 31 per cent.

MOST GAINING

The Roman Catholic Church showed a gain of 37 per cent.

Of the 14 Protestant denominations with memberships larger than one million, only one showed a decline during the period. That was the American Baptist Convention, which had two-tenths of one per cent fewer members in 1965 than it had in 1950.

Growth rates for other denominations were:

Episcopal Church, 35 per cent; United Presbyterian Church, 31 per cent; Lutheran Church in America, 29 per cent; National Baptist Convention, Inc., 24 per cent; Methodist Church, 15 per cent; Disciples of Christ, 9 per cent; United Church of Christ, 8 per cent; and National Baptist Convention of America, 1 per cent.

If any pattern can be discerned in the statistics, it is that the highest growth rates are found in the more conservative Protestant bodies, which place a great emphasis on personal Evangelism.

Negro ministers of 10 Protestant denominations are attending a "Saturday School for preachers" in Winter Park, Fla.

The inter - denominational school, which may be the first of its kind in the country, was founded to provide a "second chance for education" to ordained ministers without seminary or college degrees.

The three-year curriculum includes English, Bible content, church history, homiletics (preaching techniques), pastoral care, comparative religion, and theology.

The faculty, which serves without pay, is drawn from Protestant churches in the Orlando-Winter Park area, and from the staff of Rollins College at Winter Park.

UNUSUAL VENTURE

Another educational venture believed to be the first of its kind will get underway in Rochester, N.Y., next fall. It's a training program for ministers to serve the inner city. What makes it special is that it will be conducted jointly by St. Bernard's Catholic Seminary and Colgate-Richester Divinity School, an American Baptist seminary.

Lay Witness Mission To Open Here

A lay witness mission will start at Stone Avenue Methodist Church, 212 Stone Ave., Friday, and continue through the Sunday morning worship hour, July 2, it was announced by the Rev. Nicholas D. Pearce, pastor.

Dr. Andrew F. Gallman, director of evangelism for Methodists in the state of Mississippi, will lead the mission.

Members and friends of Stone Avenue Church will launch the series with a witnessing session 7 p.m. Friday at the church, at which time there will be a covered dish luncheon.

On Saturday, July 1, at 10 a.m. there will be coffee break witnessing sessions in a number of homes in Monroe.

Dr. Gallman is widely known and is in demand for revivals and camp meetings. He has made several preaching appearances in Monroe. He has been directing lay witness missions in several states of the Southeastern Conference, and has recently completed a mission in San Augustine, Tex.

The night lay witnessing sessions will be held on both Friday and Saturday at the same hour. Dr. Gallman will preach at the 11 a.m. worship hour on Sunday, July 2.

During the lay witness mission participants will come from various sections of Louisiana and Mississippi, and perhaps other states, to tell of what the Lord has done for them, said the Rev. Mr. Pearce. The pastor said, "This lay witness mission is something similar to the old John Wesley's Love Feast. We are looking forward to the blessings of our Heavenly Father."

Dr. Gallman is a graduate of Asbury College and Asbury Seminary of Wilmore, Ky. He also holds honorary degrees.

MY ANSWER

By BILLY GRAHAM

I know we are told to pray, but I have often wondered if prayer changes God's mind? R. W.

I believe that the Bible teaches that the right kind of prayer changes us, so that God's attitude toward us is likewise changed. For example, God told Jonah to go to Nineveh and tell its citizens that their city was to be destroyed. But the Bible says: "God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil, that he said he would do unto them; and he did it not." (Jonah 3:10).

There are other examples of God changing His mind, when people change their minds about Him. Hezekiah was told by Isaiah, "Set thy house in order: for thou shalt die and not live." (Isa. 38:1). But Hezekiah turned his face to the wall and prayed earnestly, and the Lord told Isaiah to go tell him, "I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: behold, I will add unto thy days fifteen years." (Isa. 38:5).

God's will is always to bless us. But our sin and waywardness can lead us out of the pathway of blessing. When we change, like a good father who changes his attitude toward an erring son, God changes too. His will, His love, and His mercy are constant, but His judgment of us can be altered when we remove the causes for being judged.

Vital Power Of Prayer Observed By Scientist

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

God may be "dead" for some modern theologians, but for a noted British scientist he is a plausible inference from the facts of human experience.

The scientist who affirms belief in God purely on the basis of observed data is Sir Alister Hardy, an authority on evolution who recently retired as head of the zoology department at Oxford University.

Sir Alister has written a book called "The Living Stream" (Harper & Row) in which he traces the theory of evolution from its beginnings with Charles Darwin to the most recent developments.

The last chapter will come as a surprise to any reader imbued with the notion that scientific discoveries—particularly in the field of evolution—have made religious faith intellectually untenable.

On the contrary, says Sir Alister, "The spirit of scientific inquiry can help in the re-establishment of a declining faith."

POWER OF PRAYER

It is a first principle of scientific inquiry to take cognizance of all the relevant data. And part of the data of human experience is "the phenomenon of prayerful communion" in which people feel that they are in contact with some reality beyond themselves which "actually exerts an influence, raises their center of personal being, and produces regenerative effects unattainable in other ways."

Sir Alister is aware that some psychologists look upon "the phenomenon of prayerful communion" as a purely subjective experience, having no reality outside the mind and emotions of the person concerned. But he points out that other psychologists, from the time of the great William James to the present, have taken the phenomenon seriously. He quotes Sir Frederick Bartlett, professor of psychology at Cambridge University:

"I cannot see how anybody who looks fairly at a reasonable sample of actions claiming a religious sanction can honestly refuse to admit that many of them could not occur, or at least that it is highly improbable that they would occur in the forms in which they do, if they were simply the terminal points of a psychological sequence, every item in which belonged to our own human, day-to-day world. . .

PROOF EVIDENT

"It seems to me that these (truly religious) people have done, effectively and consistently, many things which all ordinary sources of evidence seem to set outside the range of unassisted humanity. When they say 'It is God working through me,' I cannot see that I have either the right or the knowledge to reject their testimony."

Sir Alister says anthropology also provides evidence which points toward "the reality of some power, apparently coming from outside the consciousness of individuals."

"This feeling of contact with a greater power beyond self seems to be a fundamental feature in the natural history of man," he said. It has been found in all cultures, from the most primitive to the most sophisticated, and among all sorts and conditions of men. It "may be as old as consciousness" in the history of human evolution.

DEPLORES VIEW

He deplores the fact that "so many people seem to think that science has banished all the non-material side of life—all that we might call the psychic and the spiritual—to a limbo with superstitious fantasy: that a materialistic view must be the truly scientific, and hence only valid one."

Actually, he says, one of the creative edges of modern research is the study of extra-sensory perception, which points toward "the reality of part of the universe outside the world of the physical senses."

"It is in this apparently non-material part of the world that the power we call God must lie: some source of influence to which man can have access in an extra-sensory way by the communicative act we call prayer."

Sir Alister says he is "far from being an orthodox Christian" and cannot accept "revelation" as a basis for religious beliefs.

But as a scientist he is strongly attracted to "an experimental faith—a faith in the receiving grace in answer to prayer."

"Let us experiment and see," he concludes. "I don't mean selfish prayer for one's own safety or betterment or prayers to alter physical events, like praying for rain, but prayers to have help in our actions. Somehow, in some extraordinary way, I do believe that there is a vast store of wisdom and spiritual strength that we can tap in this way—something which is of the utmost importance to mankind."

REVIVAL AT SALEM

Revival services will be held at Salem Baptist Church at Eros, starting today and continuing through Saturday, July 1, at 7:30 p.m. daily. The Rev. Elton Wood, pastor of the church, will serve as evangelist.

Major Stage Production On Mormons

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI)—It was 120 years ago this July 24 when a band of pioneers stood atop a small hill and gazed with mixed emotions on the vast Salt Lake Valley.

The leader of the little group, Brigham Young, recently chosen as head of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, gazed long and hard at the sweeping valley, rimmed on the west by the Great Salt Lake and bounded on three sides with the towering Rocky Mountains.

The ailing leader leaned on his cane and uttered the words church members were to immortalize, "This is the place."

INTO VALLEY

Thus the Mormon pioneers descended into the valley that year of 1847 and began construction of their "State of Deseret," a building plan which, when first envisioned, stretched from the Salt Lake area, took in all of the West's Great Basin region and extended down to a harbor outlet in San Diego, Calif.

Church members are commemorating the arrival of their ancestors this year with a mammouth stage production, "Promised Valley," slated to run from July 1 through August 31 in a newly-constructed Salt Lake City open air theater with seats for 2,000.

PROMISED VALLEY

The story "Promised Valley" recaptures the early struggle of the Mormon pioneers and their trek West. It will be presented free for the entertainment of an estimated 25,000 tourists who pass through Utah each day of the summer.

Producers of the show are the Young Men's and Young Women's Mutual Improvement Associations of the church.

Cost of the theater has been estimated at more than $100,000. Church authorities say they are hopeful the production will become a major tourist attraction in the city, along with the well known Mormon Temple Square directly across the street from the theater site.

The theater is located east of and across the street from the Mormon Temple in downtown Salt Lake City, and each performance of "Promised Valley" will be climaxed with a sudden lighting of the towering, 74-year-old granite structure.

"The Oriental churches rejected this kind of interpretation which seemed to imply Christ had two separate and independent natures," Bishop Manoogian said. "We were defending the unity of Christ."

Actually, the council's "dyophysite" explanation was not meant to imply a split dualism in Christ, a half man, half God, as the Orientals mistook it. But they, in turn, were questionably accused of according him a divine nature overruling his humanity.

"Our church," Bishop Manoogian said, "has always asserted both the humanity and divinity of Christ. Our position was misunderstood."

This is now widely recognized 16 centuries later. The 1966 New Catholic Encyclopedia describes the break with the monophysite churches as "verbal or semantic rather than truly doctrinal."

In any case, the Oriental churches have continued in a special category among the world's denominations. They include, besides the Armenian Church, Egypt's Coptic Church, the Ethiopian Church, an Assyrian Church, and India's Church of Malabar.

Although akin to Eastern Orthodoxy in liturgy, doctrine and government, they are not within its jurisdictions. Eastern Orthodoxy's 250 million believers, in various branches, regard Istanbul's Patriarch Athenagoras as spiritual leader.

The smaller Oriental churches have thar independent patriarchates. Also, Eastern Orthodoxy did not split with Rome until the 11th century, long after the Oriental churches were cut off in the 5th century under the disputed heresy charges.

The Armenian Church's chief spiritual leader, Catholics Vasken I, of Yerevan, Armenia, part of the Soviet Union, is expected here next spring to consecrate the new pyramid-domed cathedral at Manhattan's 34th Street and Second Avenue.

FIRST TO ADOPT

Historically, Armenia was the world's first country to adopt Christianity as the state religion, doing so in 301 A.D., more than a decade before Roman Emperor Constantine in 313 gave Christianity official recognition.

Though subsequent centuries of Moslem conquests and recurrent persecutions, Armenians stuck to their faith, often in isolation from the rest of the Christian world.

Today, however, the church is active in the major interchurch cooperative bodies, the National and World Councils of Churches.

The ancient dispute that originally set the Oriental churches apart involved a central Christian mystery—how complete Godhood could be complete manhood, how the universal deity could be a single man of Nazareth.

The "absolute paradox," Danish philosopher Soren Kierkegaard once called it. "Something only God could do."

The dominant Christian understanding, in all camps, rejects any implication of divided, disjoined natures in Christ, divine and human. Nor is Christ's humanity regarded as subordinated or absorbed by his divinity, making him a kind of "heavenly human."

VIEW SUMMARIZED

Rather the view is that God became flesh through a genuine human soul, not in place of it, and without distracting from any human quality or spontaneity, but fully joining true holiness with true manhood, both unified inseparably in the single unique person of Christ.

Nevertheless, the mystery is considered beyond any precise human definitions. And Bishop Manoogian says the Oriental inclination to avoid hard, exact formulas may serve as a lesson to others in the movement for Christian unity.

"We hope that this will be a contribution we can make to the Western world," he said. "Of course, churches must have articles of faith, but overly rigid propositions cause divisions. This we know from the witness of history.

"Expressions of theological formulas can take different shapes and forms in order to express truth. Each generation and each civilization may have different formulations of the same essentials. We should always remember this."

Fear Plague Is Removable

By
NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

"Fear is the great modern plague," said Dr. Smiley Blanton. Note the emphasis — not a great plague, but the great plague of our time.

He was referring, of course, not to that normal fear which causes us to express proper concern and exercise sensible caution. But rather to that abnormal fear which lurks in the dark recesses of the mind and fills it with ghosts and spectres.

How can a person get free of this type of fear? You will never really live until you do. One thing that should be stressed and emphasized is that fear is removable. Indeed, any bad emotion is removable. Anger is removable. Hate is removable. Depression is removable. Inferiority feelings are removable. You can be free of all of them provided you really want to, and want to badly enough. Nothing is more important than to be free of fear and really live.

PEALE

STOOD UP TO FEAR

Quite a lot has been written about analysis and psychiatric treatment in getting rid of fear. I have no criticism of their procedures but one cannot help wondering if the problem is always as complex as it is made out to be. Some pretty great people have been freed from fear by a simple and direct method — they just stood up to their fear.

Theodore Roosevelt who was a strong and tough - minded man said, "I have often been afraid. But I would not give in to it. I simply acted as though I was not afraid and presently the fear disappeared." In other words, he stood up to his fear and told it to go and it did. Fear backs down when you keep standing up to it.

Another Roosevelt, Mrs. Eleanor, said, "Strength, courage and confidence result from the experience of looking fear straight in the face."

Think of the many fear-ridden people across the years who have been given a new lease on life by that tremendous statement of Emerson's, "Do the thing you fear and the death of fear is certain." Walk up to the thing you are afraid of and hit it hard and it will begin to fold. A straight frontal attack on your fears, buttressed by a good healthy faith in God, and you are in and fear is out.

Actually there are two great forces working in the human mind: fear and faith. One destroys; the other creates. Even though fear is strong, faith is stronger; and the more you build up your faith the more certainly you will undermine your fear.

MUST FACE PROBLEM

I talked with a chaplain whose job is to counsel with men just arrived in Vietnam. He prepares them mentally and spiritually for the rugged experiences ahead.

All men going into battle, he declared, must face the problem of fear. But what troubles them most is the fear that they will be afraid. Can they stand up to it — when the shooting begins and gunfire rips into quivering human flesh? They want to meet it like men, the chaplain told me, and if they must die they want to die like men, unafraid. The advice the chaplain gives is: "Put your trust in God. Remember what you are fighting for. Help your buddies."

One young soldier seemed particularly concerned that he would be afraid when it got rough. The chaplain reminded him of the strong stuff of which he was made. "Your faith, son, is stronger than any fear," he told the young soldier.

He was in Vietnam only a short time when his outfit came under fire. His lieutenant was out in front and was hit twice, and fell in the direct line of fire. The boy sensed that the officer could not survive another wound — another and he would die. Without a moment's hesitation the soldier, forgetting his own safety, crawled out to the lieutenant. He curled his body around his officer, protected him from further fire; and in so doing took two bullets in his own body. Later they both were saved.

Asked about it afterward he said, "I asked God to help me save my lieutenant and He did."

"But were you not afraid?"

"Never thought of that," he replied. "I just had to save my friend." With no thought of himself his fear faded. And it always will when you stop thinking exclusively about yourself.

Stand up to fear. You're bigger than it is. Fear is removable.

HAL FRAZIER

Paris Drive Group Will Return Here

Scheduled to return to West Monroe, Tuesday, July 4th, from Paris is an 11 member group from the Church of Christ in West Monroe. The group is spending three weeks there campaigning for Christ.

The Paris Campaign group is composed of Leon Telford and his daughter Sandra, Mrs. Nelda Boultinghouse and sons, Denny and Randy, Ruth Downey, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Frazier and children, Darrell, Shirley, and David. Mr. Frazier is one of the evangelists of the church and the others work with the Personal Evangelism Program at White's Ferry Road Church of Christ.

More than 200 workers from the United States and Europe are in France for the campaign Distribution of tons of literature was started at the beginning of the campaign. Groups were assigned to every section of Paris in order to extend printed literature and invitations to the homes there. The eight million people in the metropolitan area of Paris comprise approximately 15 per cent of the nation's population, church officials said.

Some 50 workers in the crusade speak French fluently. These are being utilized in arranging and conducting cottage meetings and other personal work.

Many Churches Have Their Own Weekly Papers

United Press International

Can a local church congregation afford to publish a full-size weekly newspaper for its membership?

The cost and production problems would seem to be prohibitive. But there are at least 350 local Protestant churches in the United States that do have their own weekly newspapers.

They can do so because the ingenuity of a private corporation called All - Church Press, Inc., which has its headquarters in Fort Worth, Tex. Each of the participating churches send to All - church press each week enough news of its local affairs to fill the front page of a newspaper bearing its own masthead.

The inside pages are identical for all of the newspapers, and contain religious news and features of general interest.

Editions usually run from six to 12 pages, and carry a substantial volume of national advertising which enables all-church press to make the venture pay with relatively modest charges to the churches themselves.

Rapid Growth Is Seen For Churches Of Christ

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The fastest-growing major religious body in the United States is the Churches of Christ, an Evangelical Protestant communion which has its greatest strength in the South and West.

Its membership increased by 135 per cent—from 1,000,000 to 2,350,000—between 1950 and 1965 (the latest year for which comparative figures are available).

During the same period, a UPI survey showed, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) registered a membership gain of 61 per cent, to make it the second fastest-growing major body.

Other fast-growing denominations were the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, 60 per cent; the American Lutheran Church, 58 per cent; and the Southern Baptist Convention, 58 per cent.

The average growth rate for all Protestant bodies during the 15 year span was 31 per cent.

MOST GAINING

The Roman Catholic Church showed a gain of 37 per cent.

Of the 14 Protestant denominations with memberships larger than one million, only one showed a decline during the period. That was the American Baptist Convention, which had two-tenths of one per cent fewer members in 1965 than it had in 1950.

Growth rates for other denominations were:

Episcopal Church, 35 per cent; United Presbyterian Church, 31 per cent; Lutheran Church in America, 29 per cent; National Baptist Convention, Inc., 24 per cent; Methodist Church, 15 per cent; Disciples of Christ, 9 per cent; United Church of Christ, 8 per cent; and National Baptist Convention of America, 1 per cent.

If any pattern can be discerned in the statistics, it is that the highest growth rates are found in the more conservative Protestant bodies, which place a great emphasis on personal Evangelism.

Negro ministers of 10 Protestant denominations are attending a "Saturday School for preachers" in Winter Park, Fla.

The inter-denominational school, which may be the first of its kind in the country, was founded to provide a "second chance for education" to ordained ministers without seminary or college degrees.

The three-year curriculum includes English, Bible content, church history, homiletics (preaching techniques), pastoral care, comparative religion, and theology.

The faculty, which serves without pay, is drawn from Protestant churches in the Orlando-Winter Park area, and from the staff of Rollins College at Winter Park.

UNUSUAL VENTURE

Another educational venture believed to be the first of its kind will get underway in Rochester, N.Y., next fall. It's a training program for ministers to serve the inner city. What makes it special is that it will be conducted jointly by St. Bernard's Catholic Seminary and Colgate-Richester Divinity School, an American Baptist seminary.

Lay Witness Mission To Open Here

A lay witness mission will start at Stone Avenue Methodist Church, 212 Stone Ave., Friday, and continue through the Sunday morning worship hour, July 2, it was announced by the Rev. Nicholas D. Pearce, pastor.

Dr. Andrew F. Gallman, director of evangelism for Methodists in the state of Mississippi, will lead the mission.

Members and friends of Stone Avenue Church will launch the series with a witnessing session 7 p.m. Friday at the church, at which time there will be a covered dish luncheon.

On Saturday, July 1, at 10 a.m. there will be coffee break witnessing sessions in a number of homes in Monroe.

Dr. Gallman is widely known and is in demand for revivals and camp meetings. He has made several preaching appearances in Monroe. He has been directing lay witness missions in several states of the Southeastern Conference, and has recently completed a mission in San Augustine, Tex.

The night lay witnessing sessions will be held on both Friday and Saturday at the same hour. Dr. Gallman will preach at the 11 a.m. worship hour on Sunday, July 2.

During the lay witness mission participants will come from various sections of Louisiana and Mississippi, and perhaps other states, to tell of what the Lord has done for them, said the Rev. Mr. Pearce. The pastor said, "This lay witness mission is something similar to the old John Wesley's Love Feast. We are looking forward to the blessings of our Heavenly Father."

Dr. Gallman is a graduate of Asbury College and Asbury Seminary of Wilmore, Ky. He also holds honorary degrees.

By BILLY GRAHAM

I know we are told to pray, but I have often wondered if prayer changes God's mind? R. W.

I believe that the Bible teaches that the right kind of prayer changes us, so that God's attitude toward us is likewise changed. For example, God told Jonah to go to Nineveh and tell its citizens that their city was to be destroyed. But the Bible says: "God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil, that he said he would do unto them; and he did it not." (Jonah 3:10).

There are other examples of God changing His mind, when people change their minds about Him. Hezekiah was told by Isaiah, "Set thy house in order: for thou shalt die and not live." (Isa. 38:1). But Hezekiah turned his face to the wall and prayed earnestly, and the Lord told Isaiah to go tell him, "I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: behold, I will add unto thy days fifteen years." (Isa. 38:5).

God's will is always to bless us. But our sin and waywardness can lead us out of the pathway of blessing. When we change, like a good father who changes his attitude toward an erring son, God changes too. His will, His love, and His mercy are constant, but His judgment of us can be altered when we remove the causes for being judged.

Vital Power Of Prayer Observed By Scientist

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

God may be "dead" for some modern theologians, but for a noted British scientist he is a plausible inference from the facts of human experience.

The scientist who affirms belief in God purely on the basis of observed data is Sir Alister Hardy, an authority on evolution who recently retired as head of the zoology department at Oxford University.

Sir Alister has written a book called "The Living Stream" (Harper & Row) in which he traces the theory of evolution from its beginnings with Charles Darwin to the most recent developments.

The last chapter will come as a surprise to any reader imbued with the notion that scientific discoveries—particularly in the field of evolution—have made religious faith intellectually untenable.

On the contrary, says Sir Alister, "The spirit of scientific inquiry can help in the re-establishment of a declining faith."

POWER OF PRAYER

It is a first principle of scientific inquiry to take cognizance of all the relevant data. And part of the data of human experience is "the phenomenon of prayerful communion" in which people feel that they are in contact with some reality beyond themselves which "actually exerts an influence, raises their center of personal being, and produces regenerative effects unattainable in other ways."

Sir Alister is aware that some psychologists look upon "the phenomenon of prayerful communion" as a purely subjective experience, having no reality outside the mind and emotions of the person concerned. But he points out that other psychologists, from the time of the great William James to the present, have taken the phenomenon seriously. He quotes Sir Frederick Bartlett, professor of psychology at Cambridge University:

"I cannot see how anybody who looks fairly at a reasonable sample of actions claiming a religious sanction can honestly refuse to admit that many of them could not occur, or at least that it is highly improbable that they would occur in the forms in which they do, if they were simply the terminal points of a psychological sequence, every item in which belonged to our own human, day-to-day world. . .

PROOF EVIDENT

"It seems to me that these (truly religious) people have done, effectively and consistently, many things which all ordinary sources of evidence seem to set outside the range of unassisted humanity. When they say 'It is God working through me,' I cannot see that I have either the right or the knowledge to reject their testimony."

Sir Alister says anthropology also provides evidence which points toward "the reality of some power, apparently coming from outside the consciousness of individuals."

"This feeling of contact with a greater power beyond self seems to be a fundamental feature in the natural history of man," he said. It has been found in all cultures, from the most primitive to the most sophisticated, and among all sorts and conditions of men. It "may be as old as consciousness" in the history of human evolution.

DEPLORES VIEW

He deplores the fact that "so many people seem to think that science has banished all the non-material side of life—all that we might call the psychic and the spiritual—to a limbo with superstitious fantasy: that a materialistic view must be the truly scientific, and hence only valid one."

Actually, he says, one of the creative edges of modern research is the study of extra-sensory perception, which points toward "the reality of part of the universe outside the world of the physical senses."

"It is in this apparently non-material part of the world that the power we call God must lie: some source of influence to which man can have access in an extra-sensory way by the communicative act we call prayer."

Sir Alister says he is "far from being an orthodox Christian" and cannot accept "revelation" as a basis for religious beliefs.

But as a scientist he is strongly attracted to "an experimental faith—a faith in the receiving grace in answer to prayer."

"Let us experiment and see," he concludes. "I don't mean selfish prayer for one's own safety or betterment or prayers to alter physical events, like praying for rain, but prayers to have help in our actions. Somehow, in some extraordinary way, I do believe that there is a vast store of wisdom and spiritual strength that we can tap in this way—something which is of the utmost importance to mankind."

Major Stage Production On Mormons

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI)—It was 120 years ago this July 24 when a band of pioneers stood atop a small hill and gazed with mixed emotions on the vast Salt Lake Valley.

The leader of the little group, Brigham Young, recently chosen as head of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, gazed long and hard at the sweeping valley, rimmed on the west by the Great Salt Lake and bounded on three sides with the towering Rocky Mountains.

The ailing leader leaned on his cane and uttered the words church members were to immortalize, "This is the place."

INTO VALLEY

Thus the Mormon pioneers descended into the valley that year of 1847 and began construction of their "State of Deseret," a building plan which, when first envisioned, stretched from the Salt Lake area, took in all of the West's Great Basin region and extended down to a harbor outlet in San Diego, Calif.

Church members are commemorating the arrival of their ancestors this year with a mammouth stage production, "Promised Valley," slated to run from July 1 through August 31 in a newly-constructed Salt Lake City open air theater with seats for 2,000.

PROMISED VALLEY

The story "Promised Valley" recaptures the early struggle of the Mormon pioneers and their trek West. It will be presented free for the entertainment of an estimated 25,000 tourists who pass through Utah each day of the summer.

Producers of the show are the Young Men's and Young Women's Mutual Improvement Associations of the church.

Cost of the theater has been estimated at more than $100,000. Church authorities say they are hopeful the production will become a major tourist attraction in the city, along with the well known Mormon Temple Square directly across the street from the theater site.

The theater is located east of and across the street from the Mormon Temple in downtown Salt Lake City, and each performance of "Promised Valley" will be climaxed with a sudden lighting of the towering, 74-year-old granite structure.

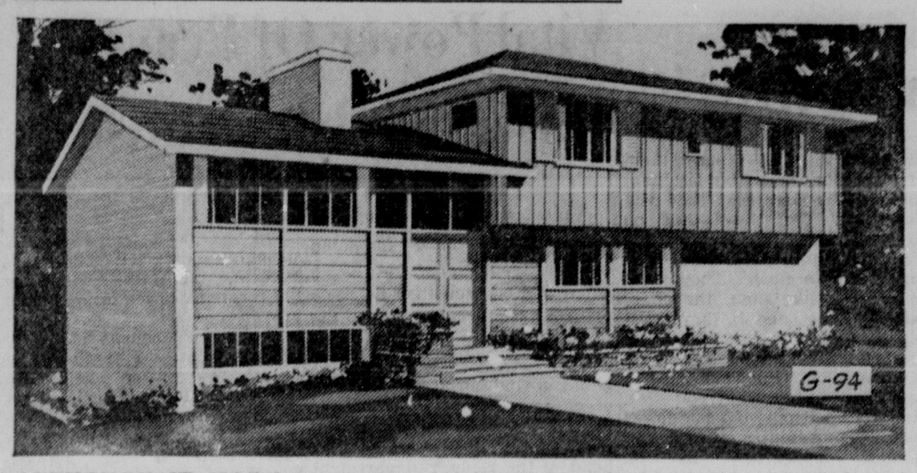
A Friendly Church Where Jesus is Real and Everyone is Welcome



ALTHOUGH IT HAS large areas of brick and glass, this four-bedroom split level is highlighted on the outside by the warm, welcome look of cedar siding and on the inside by a sloped beam ceiling, lending an over-all air of informality.

FLOOR PLANS: Plenty of living space on the three levels of this house. The living room on the ground level is set off by itself for easy maintenance. The family room on the lower level has sliding glass doors to a patio. Each of the four upstairs bedrooms has cross-ventilation.

Exposed Beams Highlight Split Level House Design

By ANDY LANG

There is something about a ceiling with exposed wooden beams that conveys a feeling of warm vitality. Its impression of strong shelter appeals to the male, which has made it a long-time favorite in dens, hunting lodges and studies. Its sweeping symmetry catches the eye of the female, who has discovered its decorative value in both traditional and contemporary motifs.

The form and character of exposed beams are utilized in dramatic fashion in this split level, which provides living space for a fairly large family within the modest over - all dimensions of 58' by 29'.

Guests will be intrigued the moment they enter the foyer. This space, almost two stories high, has a sloping beamed ceiling which extends upward into the living room, maintaining visual continuity between them. Ascending a few steps, one enters the gracious living room with its large glass areas, balcony overlooking the patio below, and attractive fireplace, combined by architect Samuel Paul to form a stimulating atmosphere for social entertaining.

LEND WARMTH

The wood ceiling, the brick fireplace and the wood plank floor lend warmth to the room through the exposure of natural materials. The glass areas, in combination with the balcony, extend the room beyond its interior dimensions, merging the inside with the outside. Windows at both ends of the living room serve well for ventilation as well as vision. The ceiling could, of course, be painted rather than left natural if a family felt that it blended better with its particular type of decor.

Just a few steps down from the living room, the dining room overlooks the rear garden. It is directly accessible from the kitchen for ease of serving.

The well - equipped, efficient kitchen is conveniently located off the entrance foyer and also may be entered from the two-car garage or from the service porch, through the laundry-mud room. This service porch doubles as a children's entry, using one of the large storage closets in the mudroom for outer clothing. Large glass areas in the kitchen keep it bright and cheerful, an atmosphere enhanced by the planter directly outside. There is space for breakfasting near the windows, as well as for other informal family dining. A lavatory is tucked away between the dining room and breakfast area and is just off the garage. This makes it a convenient place for washing up after coming inside from the garage.

FAMILY ROOM

Downstairs from the kitchen is the family room, containing the home's second fireplace and a storage closet. This fireplace uses the same chimney as the one in the living room for economy's sake. Through sliding glass doors, one can emerge on the patio, protected on two sides, and from above by the balcony, allowing for almost year - round outdoor living.

The upper level, reached easily from the foyer or the living room, has four bedrooms, each with cross ventilation and ample closet space, several of the closets being of the walk-in type. The master bedroom has its own private bath with stall shower, while the other bathroom is compartmentalized with a full tub. A large linen closet is located in the central hall.

The exterior of this home carries out the natural theme of the interior, with the extensive use of cedar siding, combined judiciously with areas of brick and glass.

Time To Root Camellias

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Gardener, want to make a cutting from camellias, this is an excellent time. Take the cutting from new, but seasoned growth, in three-inch lengths with two or three leaves. Root in coarse vermiculite in a shady area.

If you, Mrs. Gardener, have an area in your landscape that is difficult to mow or where grass will not grow, then select one of the following ground covers: Ivy, ajuga, or creeping vinca.

One of the most frequent questions of iris growers is why their plants fail to flower. The most common cause of failure to flower is overcrowding. Unless irises are divided every two to four years, flowering will cease. The best time to divide and transplant irises is mid summer. Some authorities find early division and transplanting gives the best results. Make large divisions if you desire an abundance of flowers the first year after planting. Large divisions will require separating in two or three years. So if you do not wish to divide for at least three to five years, make several divisions. Each division must have at least one growing point (fan or leaves) a few inches of healthy rhizomes and several well developed roots. For more color in the landscape, use at least a dozen or more rhizomes of the same variety in one area. Place rhizomes about 15 to 18 inches apart.

STAIN REMOVERS

There are two stains that you, Mrs. Homemaker, may be experiencing at this season in which you need some help — grass stains and fruit stains.

To remove a grass stain from white cotton or linen, rub with a cooking fat or oil and then wash in hot detergent solution — use bleach for any remaining stain. For other washables and colored fabrics, wash in lukewarm detergent solution. Treat stubborn stains with alcohol or hydrogen peroxide.

For fruit stains on white cottons or linens, pour boiling water from a height of two to three feet through stain. If stain remains, bleach. Do not use soap. If the stain is old rub stain well with glycerin or detergent solution, let stand several hours, treat with boiling water as described.

For other washables and colored fabrics, sponge with cool water. If stains remain, apply warm glycerin and let stand a few hours and rinse well. Wash in warm detergent solution.

DURABLE PRESS

Durable press fabrics will reduce the work required to keep the family well groomed, but they must have proper laundering if the easy - care features are to be retained. You, Mrs. Homemaker, get better results if you launder before the garments are heavily soiled and as soon as possible after soiling. Turn the garments inside out to help reduce wear on creases. Launder in the coolest water before machine spins, or hand wringing.

For oil, soil or perspiration measure heavy - duty - liquid detergent required for entire load and apply full strength to the most soiled areas of the garments. Soak in hot water, let water cool then agitate for six to eight minutes.

A THOUGHT

Garden Center Notes

Juniors Make Good Progress

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

The Columbia Junior Garden Club presented the program last Wednesday for the Fifth District Garden Center. Mrs. Evelyn Duke, sponsor for the group, brought the designs for the show. She was accompanied by several members. Since these girls are going into high school, and some already are in high school, Mrs. Duke hopes to organize a High School Gardener's Unit with these girls and let another younger group get started. It is wonderful to see the progress made by them over the past few years. Just imagine what wonderful senior gardeners they'll make—

Paula Duke created the first design, interpretive of "Our Next Holiday," 4th of July. In a white ceramic compote she arranged a massed pattern of white mums against a background of leather fern. For filler she used the chenille twisted pipe cleaners in brilliant red throughout the design representing fireworks. To further interpret, two small American flags were placed within the design completing the oval pattern. A large board, sprayed with blue paint was used beneath the design to give proper balance.

Liza Cummings selected roadside grasses for her line, dock and Johnson grass seed heads in a bright orange ceramic duck container. These materials were placed in a radiating pattern. Yellow zinnias formed a crescent line in the lower part of the design for focal interest. Photenia foliage was used for contrast and depth. This would be lovely for the informal room.

TROPICAL PATIO

Betty Adams was inspired by a very decorative ceramic girl's head as a container for her design which consisted entirely of daylilies placed in a massed design in the top part of the head. The colors ranged from yellow into deep orange. To finish this decorative design she used a flimsy head scarf in colors of the daylilies as a base. This would be ideal in a girl's room on the small table or dressing table in the powder room. This design also would be ideal to add cheer to a bedside table in a hospital room.

Donna Hollis, a high school senior, made a lovely design for the program, using a green and yellow color scheme. Clipped pine formed the overall line in a horizontal green planter. Fugi mums with buds in chartreuse yellow tones filled in the oval pattern formed by the pine. For accent and interest two pine cones were placed within the design. A place mat in identical shade of yellow served as the base.

ORIENTAL MANNER

Another high school girl, Bett Causey, created a design in the oriental manner using the Moribana style. A dried crape myrtle branch formed the heaven, man line in an attractive metal usabata. Dried yarrow formed the earth line within a small ceramic container made onto a Chinese figurine which added a naturalistic touch to the scene. White sand covered the inside of the bowl covering the mechanics.

Multi - colored zinnias, grown by Mrs. Charles Campbell and Doug Ford of Columbia Heights were placed in an old fashioned cookie jar by Mrs. Duke and the girls who informed me that this was their horticulture display. A small ceramic rooster, in all the colors of the zinnias, was used as an accessory. This is a wonderful way to arrange zinnias, and aren't they lovely this season—

Two "extra" designs were presented by Mrs. Wren Causey, our fifth district LGCF director.

Foxgloves, Hollyhocks

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Foxglove and hollyhock time is here again. The tall foxgloves and the still taller hollyhocks put on a show, the likes of which nothing else in the biennials can do in a garden. If you do not have these flowers in your yard or garden somehwere, then you are missing the most festive time in a garden.

Once you have either of these plants, you will likely never have to plant them again, for they will usually replenish themsleves yearly with a healthy crop of seedlings. By fall, the plants will be ready to be moved to new locations where they are wanted for spring effect. If you do not wish to bother with transplanting, just take some fresh seeds in a week or two from your plants and sow them where they are to bloom next year. You will not believe how many seeds will come up; they germinate almost one hundred per cent.

PURPLISH TENDENCY

Foxgloves tend to run to the purple side of pink, but there are some better colors to be had from the seeds in catalogues. There is even a rust colored foxglove that flower arrangers like. Be sure to plant a packet of the white ones because they will set off the others to great advantage. The Shirley hybrids will grow to six feet, so put them in the back of your plantings except where you wish to deliberately bring a few tall plants to the front.

Hollyhock and foxglove time is also orange daylily time and one sees this ugly combination of magentas, pinks and oranges in many gardens. Move one or the other! Lemon - lilies are all right, but the common old orange ones are bad with purple pinks. It is a simple matter to plant yellow or white hollyhocks near daylilies.

SNAPDRAGONS

Our long southern growing season makes it possible for us to have a fine crop of snapdragons in bloom before frost from seeds planted now. These plants are remarkably drought resistant and will not have to be nursed as much as some others until they come into flower. Pick the first flowers for cut flowers, and the plants will built up to quite a display before frost. Then, if the winter is not too severe, you will have a big show next spring and summer.

The biennial canterbury bells are not too fond of our hot summers, but, if you like them enough to water them, they may be grown from seed planted shortly in a place where they will not get full sun all day. Planted in late August, they will still make fine plants for next year.

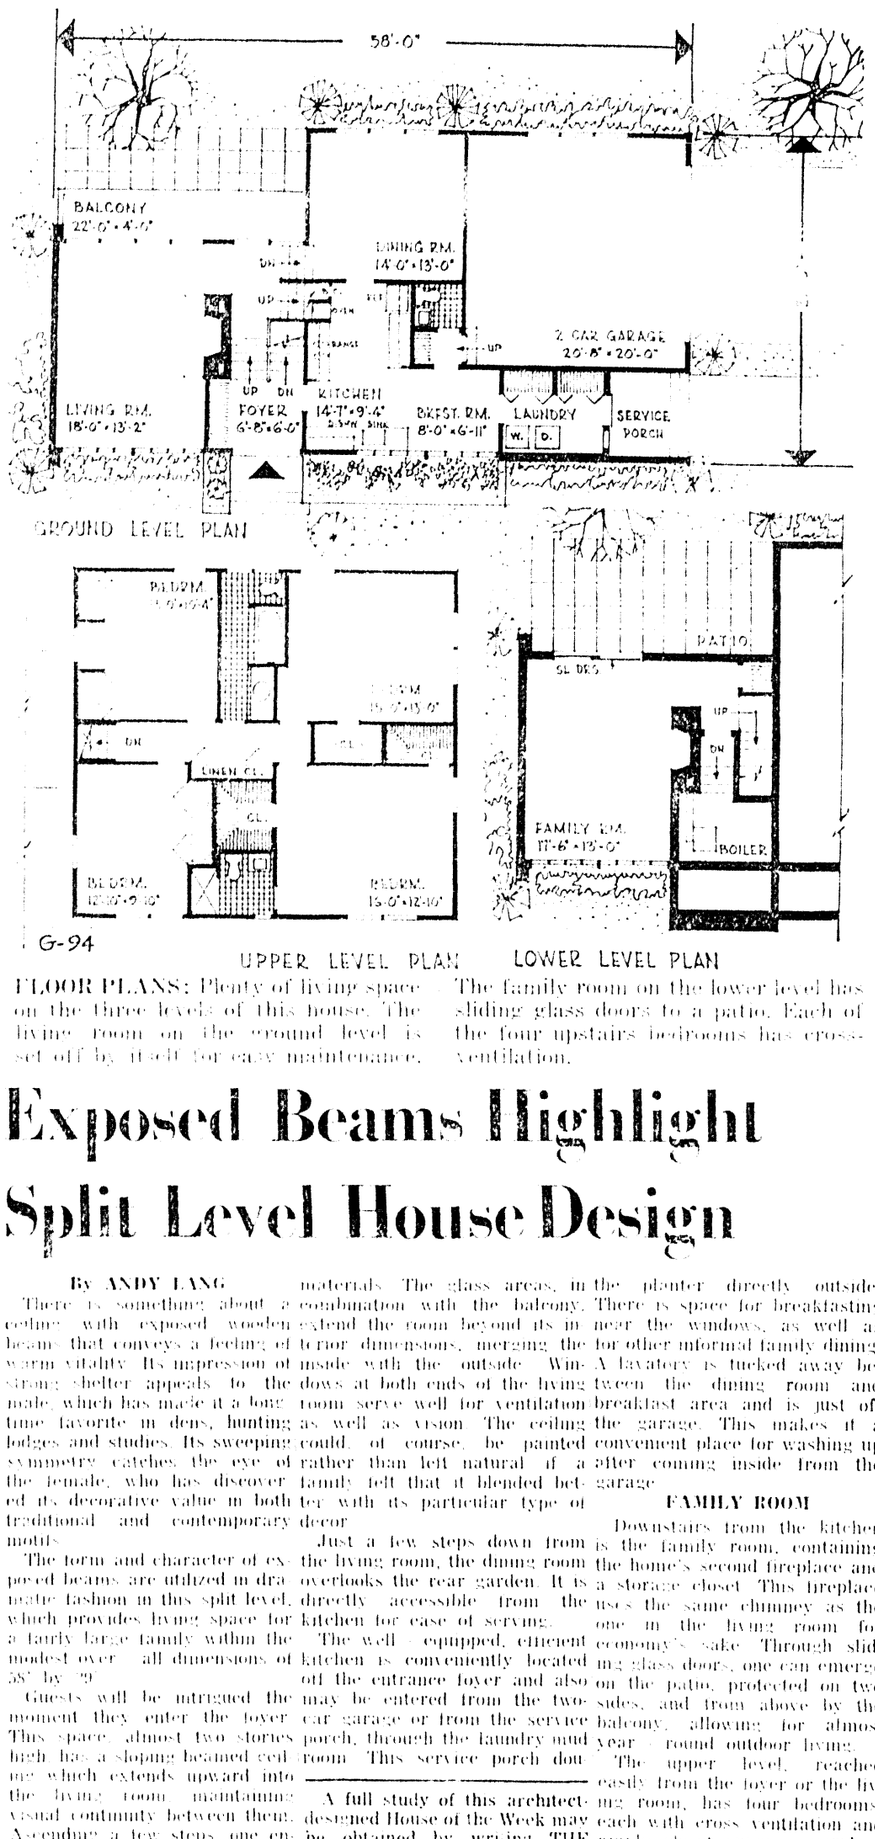
ALTHOUGH IT HAS large areas of brick and glass, this four-bedroom split level is highlighted on the outside by the warm, welcome look of cedar siding and on the inside by a sloped beam ceiling, lending an over-all air of informality.



FLOOR PLANS: Plenty of living space on the three levels of this house. The living room on the ground level is set off by itself for easy maintenance. The family room on the lower level has sliding glass doors to a patio. Each of the four upstairs bedrooms has cross-ventilation.

Exposed Beams Highlight Split Level House Design

By ANDY LANG

There is something about a ceiling with exposed wooden beams that conveys a feeling of warm vitality. Its impression of strong shelter appeals to the male, which has made it a long time favorite in dens, hunting lodges and studies. Its sweeping symmetry catches the eye of the female, who has discovered its decorative value in both traditional and contemporary motifs.

The form and character of exposed beams are utilized in dramatic fashion in this split level, which provides living space for a fairly large family within the modest over-all dimensions of 58' by 29'.

Guests will be intrigued the moment they enter the foyer. This space, almost two stories high, has a sloping beamed ceiling which extends upward into the living room, maintaining visual continuity between them. Ascending a few steps, one enters the gracious living room with its large glass areas, balcony overlooking the patio below, and attractive fireplace, combined by architect Samuel Paul to form a stimulating atmosphere for social entertaining.

LEND WARMTH

The wood ceiling, the brick fireplace and the wood plank floor lend warmth to the room through the exposure of natural materials. The glass areas, in combination with the balcony, extend the room beyond its interior dimensions, merging the inside with the outside. Windows at both ends of the living room serve well for ventilation as well as vision. The ceiling could, of course, be painted rather than left natural if a family felt that it blended better with its particular type of decor.

Just a few steps down from the living room, the dining room overlooks the rear garden. It is directly accessible from the kitchen for ease of serving.

The well-equipped, efficient kitchen is conveniently located off the entrance foyer and also may be entered from the two-car garage or from the service porch, through the laundry-mud room. This service porch doubles as a children's entry using one of the large storage closets in the mudroom for outer clothing. Large glass areas in the kitchen keep it bright and cheerful, an atmosphere enhanced by the planter directly outside. There is space for breakfasting near the windows, as well as for other informal family dining. A lavatory is tucked away between the dining room and breakfast area and is just off the garage. This makes it a convenient place for washing up after coming inside from the garage.

FAMILY ROOM

Downstairs from the kitchen is the family room, containing the home's second fireplace and a storage closet. This fireplace uses the same chimney as the one in the living room for economy's sake. Through sliding glass doors, one can emerge on the patio, protected on two sides, and from above by the balcony, allowing for almost year-round outdoor living.

The upper level, reached easily from the foyer or the living room, has four bedrooms, each with cross ventilation and ample closet space, several of the closets being of the walk-in type. The master bedroom has its own private bath with stall shower, while the other bathroom is compartmentalized with a full tub. A large linen closet is located in the central hall.

The exterior of this home carries out the natural theme of the interior, with the extensive use of cedar siding, combined judiciously with areas of brick and glass.

A full study of this architect-designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c/o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan G-94.

Time To Root Camellias

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Gardener, want to make a cutting from camellias, this is an excellent time. Take the cutting from new, but seasoned growth, in three-inch lengths with two or three leaves. Root in coarse vermiculite in a shady area.

If you, Mrs. Gardener, have an area in your landscape that is difficult to mow, or where grass will not grow, then select one of the following ground covers: Ivy, ajuga, or creeping vinca.

One of the most frequent questions of iris growers is why their plants fail to flower. The most common cause of failure to flower is overcrowding. Unless irises are divided every two to four years, flowering will cease. The best time to divide and transplant irises is mid-summer. Some authorities find early division and transplanting gives the best results. Make large divisions if you desire an abundance of flowers the first year after planting. Large divisions will require separating in two or three years. So if you do not wish to divide for at least three to five years, make several divisions. Each division must have at least one growing point (fan or leaves) a few inches of healthy rhizomes and several well developed roots. For more color in the landscape, use at least a dozen or more rhizomes of the same variety in one area. Place rhizomes about 15 to 18 inches apart.

STAIN REMOVERS

There are two stains that you, Mrs. Homemaker, may be experiencing at this season in which you need some help — grass stains and fruit stains.

To remove a grass stain from white cotton or linen, rub with a cooking fat or oil and then wash in hot detergent solution — use bleach for any remaining stain. For other washables and colored fabrics, wash in lukewarm detergent solution. Treat stubborn stains with alcohol or hydrogen peroxide.

For fruit stains on white cottons or linens, pour boiling water from a height of two to three feet through stain. If stain remains, bleach. Do not use soap. If the stain is old rub stain well with glycerin or detergent solution, let stand several hours, treat with boiling water as described.

For other washables and colored fabrics, sponge with cool water. If stains remain, apply warm glycerin and let stand few hours and rinse well. Wash in warm detergent solution.

DURABLE PRESS

Durable press fabrics will reduce the work required to keep the family well groomed, but they must have proper laundering if the easy-care features are to be retained. You, Mrs. Homemaker, get better results if you launder before the garments are heavily soiled and as soon as possible after soiling. Turn the garments inside out to help reduce wear on creases. Launder in the coolest water before machine spins, or hand wringing.

For oil, soil or perspiration measure heavy-duty liquid detergent required for entire load and apply full strength to the most soiled areas of the garments. Soak in hot water, let water cool then agitate for six to eight minutes.

A THOUGHT

The only ideas that will work for you are the ones you put to work.

Garden Center Notes

Juniors Make Good Progress

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

The Columbia Junior Garden Club presented the program last Wednesday for the Fifth District Garden Center. Mrs. Evelyn Duke, sponsor for the group, brought the designs for the show. She was accompanied by several members. Since these girls are going into high school, and some already are in high school, Mrs. Duke hopes to organize a High School Gardener's Unit with these girls and let another younger group get started. It is wonderful to see the progress made by them over the past few years. Just imagine what wonderful senior gardeners they'll make—

Paula Duke created the first design, interpretive of "Our Next Holiday," 4th of July. In a white ceramic compote she arranged a massed pattern of white mums against a background of leather fern. For filler she used the chenille twisted pipe cleaners in brilliant red throughout the design representing fireworks. To further interpret, two small American flags were placed within the design completing the oval pattern. A large board, sprayed with blue paint was used beneath the design to give proper balance.

Liza Cummings selected roadside grasses for her line, dock and Johnson grass seed heads in a bright orange ceramic duck container. These materials were placed in a radiating pattern. Yellow zinnias formed a crescent line in the lower part of the design for focal interest. Photenia foliage was used for contrast and depth. This would be lovely for the informal room.

TROPICAL PATIO

Fran Morris thought of vacation in far away places—Hawaii perhaps, when she interpreted "Tropical Patio" design. A real pineapple formed the primary placement to one side in a dark brown woven bread tray. Lemons and oranges filled in the space that was left to one side. In a small cup holder she placed yellow dahlias and cut-and-comes-for focal balance in the front part of the design. A woven place mat was used for a base, in tan color. Loquat foliage was the only greenery used as filler and background for fruits.

Betty Adams was inspired by a very decorative ceramic girl's head as a container for her design which consisted entirely of daylilies placed in a massed design in the top part of the head. The colors ranged from yellow into deep orange. To finish this decorative design she used a flimsy head scarf in colors of the daylilies as a base. This would be ideal in a girl's room on the small table or dressing table in the powder room. This design also would be ideal to add cheer to a bedside table in a hospital room.

Donna Hollis, a high school senior, made a lovely design for the program, using a green and yellow color scheme. Clipped pine formed the overall line in a horizontal green planter. Fugi mums with buds in chartreuse yellow tones filled in the oval pattern formed by the pine. For accent and interest two pine cones were placed within the design. A place mat in identical shade of yellow served as the base.

ORIENTAL MANNER

Another high school girl, Bett Causey, created a design in the oriental manner using the Moribana style. A dried crape myrtle branch formed the heaven, man line in an attractive metal usabata. Dried yarrow formed the earth line within a small ceramic container made onto a Chinese figurine which added a naturalistic touch to the scene. White sand covered the inside of the bowl covering the mechanics.

Multi-colored zinnias, grown by Mrs. Charles Campbell and Doug Ford of Columbia Heights were placed in an old fashioned cookie jar by Mrs. Duke and the girls who informed me that this was their horticulture display. A small ceramic rooster, in all the colors of the zinnias, was used as an accessory. This is a wonderful way to arrange zinnias, and aren't they lovely this season—

Two "extra" designs were presented by Mrs. Wren Causey, our fifth district LGCF director.

Southern Gardener

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Foxglove and hollyhock time is here again. The tall foxgloves and the still taller hollyhocks put on a show, the likes of which nothing else in the biennials can do in a garden. If you do not have these flowers in your yard or garden somehwere, then you are missing the most festive time in a garden.

Once you have either of these plants, you will likely never have to plant them again, for they will usually replenish themsleves yearly with a healthy crop of seedlings. By fall, the plants will be ready to be moved to new locations where they are wanted for spring effect. If you do not wish to bother with transplanting, just take some fresh seeds in a week or two from your plants and sow them where they are to bloom next year. You will not believe how many seeds will come up: they germinate almost one hundred per cent.

PURPLISH TENDENCY

Foxgloves tend to run to the purple side of pink, but there are some better colors to be had from the seeds in catalogues. There is even a rust colored foxglove that flower arrangers like. Be sure to plant a packet of the white ones because they will set off the others to great advantage. The Shirley hybrids will grow to six feet, so put them in the back of your plantings except where you wish to deliberately bring a few tall plants to the front.

Hollyhock and foxglove time is also orange daylily time and one sees this ugly combination of magentas, pinks and oranges in many gardens. Move one or the other! Lemon-lilies are all right, but the common old orange ones are bad with purple pinks. It is a simple matter to plant yellow or white hollyhocks near daylilies.

SNAPDRAGONS

Our long southern growing season makes it possible for us to have a fine crop of snapdragons in bloom before frost from seeds planted now. These plants are remarkably drought resistant and will not have to be nursed as much as some others until they come into flower. Pick the first flowers for cut flowers, and the plants will built up to quite a display before frost. Then, if the winter is not too severe, you will have a big show next spring and summer.

The biennial canterbury bells are not too fond of our hot summers, but, if you like them enough to water them, they may be grown from seed planted shortly in a place where they will not get full sun all day. Planted in late August, they will still make fine plants for next year.

TABLETS OF STONE

NEW YORK (AP) — Rabbi Theodore Ross, of Temple Sinai in Queens, recently led an expedition to the top of Mount Sinai in the Holy Land. There, he had two slabs of granite carved out of the famed biblical mountain, where Moses received the 10 Commandments. Shipped back to the temple here, the slabs have been inscribed with those universal moral laws.

TABLETS OF STONE

NEW YORK (AP) — Rabbi Theodore Ross, of Temple Sinai in Queens, recently led an expedition to the top of Mount Sinai in the Holy Land. There, he had two slabs of granite carved out of the famed biblical mountain, where Moses received the 10 Commandments. Shipped back to the temple here, the slabs have been inscribed with those universal moral laws.

$1.47 feeds you fabulously at 1400 Louisville Avenue

Any good restaurant can feed you fabulously, if you don't mind gulping at high prices. But at El Chico, the only thing you'll gulp at is the taste and aroma of that m-mmarvelous Mexican food! Take our enchiladas, for example. Or our Chili con Queso. Or our tamales. Or tacos. Or nachos. Every delightful bite made from recipes that have been closely guarded family secrets for over 40 years. Can you think of a more appetizing change from that tired-out routine of meat and potatoes or chicken and french fries? So m-m-marvelously inexpensive, too! Pile a plate high for just $1.47. You can treat the family to a fiesta frequently, starting this very night!

Another thing. At El Chico, we try to please everyone. So if Mexican food just isn't your spice, (after all, some women aren't crazy about mink coats, either!) try our steaks, roast beef, fried chicken. Best in town, and as reasonably priced as our Mexican favorites. So you see, the El Chico story is no fable.

It's just fabulous.

Start eating your first chapter tonight.

Summer time is busy time with comings and goings, visitors and travelers, brides and baseball, and all the events which seem to come when the sun is hot.

This week CLAYTON KELLOGG was here from Dallas visiting with her mother, MARTHA KILPATRICK. She arrived last weekend, was here until Friday. On Wednes- DOROTHEA GARRETT honored Clayton at luncheon at her home on Lakeside drive. Other guests were members of Clayton's bridge foursome when she lived in Monroe. Bridge was on the schedule, but talk filled the hours with all the catching-up to do. The menu served by Dorothea included devilled crabs, congealed fresh peaches, toasted cheese sandwiches, and blackberry cobbler for dessert.

On Thursday, BETTY MOORE invited a group for luncheon at Bayou DeSiard country club, complimentary to Clayton. Four guests joined Betty and Clayton at the table in the Garden Room.

Another former Monroyan visiting in town this week was FRAN McCROCKLIN, here from Brazil. Husband TED was in town on business, and Fran seized the opportunity for visiting with old friends. On Wednesday, MARGE MULLENS invited a group for luncheon at her home on Spencer. Guests were seated at a table centered with an arrangement of fruit. Salad lunch was served to five who attended. . . . .Others who entertained the McCrocklins during their stay were ALICE and JACK SMITH, JEAN and TOM ZENTNER.

A very special visitor this week in the home of DOT and JACK MASUR on Point Drive was their grandson, SCOTT MASUR McELHANEY. Scott's parents, JACKIE and JOHN McELHANEY, have been in New York this week while he visited in Monroe. Jackie came this weekend and will take the young man home to Dallas today.

A round of social affairs was planned for ladies visiting in town while their husbands participated in the Senior Invitational Golf tournament at Bayou DeSiard country club this week. The ladies, in fact, were enjoying the golf from inside: where the air conditioning prevailed. First event was a luncheon and style show Thursday in the club's Garden Room. Chairman for this affair was JANE HOLLOWAY, who was assisted by MAIDYE BRIMBERRY. Clothes, which were selected from the Palace, included some to be worn now and some foreshadowing fall styles.

To narrate the show, JEHNELL DUPREE wore a suit styled with chocolate brown skirt topped with long sleeved white linen jacket buttoned high at the wide neckline. Just visible at the throat was her beautiful apricot crepe blouse.

First group included the summer daytime dresses. CHRIS COLLINS showed a summer casual shift of white waffle pique buttoned with jet and belted in black patent. . . . YVONNE ANDERSON chose a dressy suit of aqua linen with jacket belted at the high waistline. Her blouse was a shell of silk printed in swirls of blues, purple, and white. . . . .Cuffs and tie of navy silk surah printed with yellow highlighted LAVERNE BURGESS's lemon yellow costume of heavy rough silk . . . . .CHARLOTTIE DENT modeled next a truly handsome outfit consisting of overdress of sky blue linen with embroidered cutwork in white; an underdress of solid blue. . . . .Marillyn Taylor wore a Harvey Berin skimmer of diagonal-weave white cotton, highlighted at yoke and hemline with lace appliques. . . Chris returned in a skimmer with gently A-line skirt, styled of pale blue linen covered with matching organdy appliques.

To begin the section devoted to Transitional clothes, FRANCES ADCOCK chose an afternoon dress of black silk surah plaided in gold. It was styled with easy top with short kimono sleeves and an inset belt rising high in front, dipping in back . . . .Graphite cotton striped in white was used for the gently fitting skimmer worn by Yvonne. Slash pockets at the hipline were accents. . . . .Charlotte modeled next a two piece styled by Geoffrey Beene in a fabric woven in geometric design of hexagonal dots separated by rows of black diamonds. It consisted of a slightly fitted jacket with apron - front skirt. . . . . Chris returned in an easy shift of royal blue Dupioni silk, printed with black squares, styled with turtle neck, and highlighted with a crushed black kid belt.

Giving a tantalizing glimpse into the goodies scheduled for fall wearing was the next section of the show, which featured coats and suits already arriving at the Palace. HELEN WHEELER modelled first an Italian knit costume suit, consisting of a sleeveless turtle - neck shift in dusty pink, topped by a full length coat in otter brown bound with pink. . . . .Laverne wore a black coat of the new brocaded fur blend by Blin and Blin of France, cuffed and collared in Jasmine mink. . . .Two elegant leather coats from Spain were shown next. The first, worn by Charlottie, was of pony skin banded and collared in antelope. The second featured a yoke and sleeves of pony with a skirt of kidskin attached at a slightly raised waistline. . . . Perfect for travel was the Italian knit shown next by Frances. Three pieces, jacket, shell, and low-pleated skirt, were of burnt orange wool. She topped the outfit with a coat of scroll-woven parchment with Palomino mink collar . . . . . Textured white wool woven in Italy was used for the coat shown by Yvonne. It featured a wide shawl collar and cuffs of sheared Canadian beaver. . . .Chris modelled a flaring tent coat of black cut velour collared and cuffed in black mink. . . .For a swinging casual coat, Helen chose a giant plaid tweed in shades of orange, grey, and green. . . .Laverne returned in a casual suede coat in the lovely shade called "silver mist".

Closing the show were the late - day and after dark dresses, some for now and some for cooler weather. First came Yvonne in a summer cocktail suit of an interesting cotton fabric woven in yellow and white diamond design and styled with simple skimmer dress and full length coat. . . .Charlottie showed a late - day design of black Fibranne with side splits and camisole top bound in satin. . . . For a theater suit good for all seasons, Laverne chose a dress of tangerine silk blend topped with matching box jacket.

Pink Pure silk satin woven in Hong Kong was used for the floor length dress worn by Helen. An overblouse heavily beaded with crystals and "rubies" covered the camisole top. . . . . Marillyn modelled a Harvey Berin formal of heavy citron yellow crepe. The classic column, with one seam visible from right shoulder to left hip, was detailed with buttons - and - loops across one shoulder and down the side. . . .Deliciously elegant was the summer formal worn by Frances. Styled of petal pink linen, it was embroidered with white floral motifs and bound with matching satin at bodice and hem. She carried a stole of the linen which reversed to the satin.

More visitors are expected in town for the Miss Louisiana pageant, set for this coming week. The various competitions, bathing suit, evening dress, and talent, will get underway Wednesday evening at Neville auditorium and continue through Saturday.

Another beauty title was almost captured by a Northeast co-ed last weekend when JO DUVAL went home to Morgan City. She participated in the "Miss Morgan City" contest and was first runner-up.

While people are coming to Monroe, Monroe people are travelling. Off to Europe this week were GLORIA McILWAINE of Monroe, KEN GARRISON of WEST MONROE, and BRUCE HARVEY of Tallulah. The three flew to Washington on Monday to join the group comprising the All United States Student Band, Orchestra, and Choir. Then on Thursday, it was on to Switzerland and the start of a tour which includes France, Austria, England, Italy, San Marino, Lichtenstien, Holland. Germany, Monte Carlo, Luxembourg, and Scotland. The band and choir will present concerts at each stop on the itinerary.

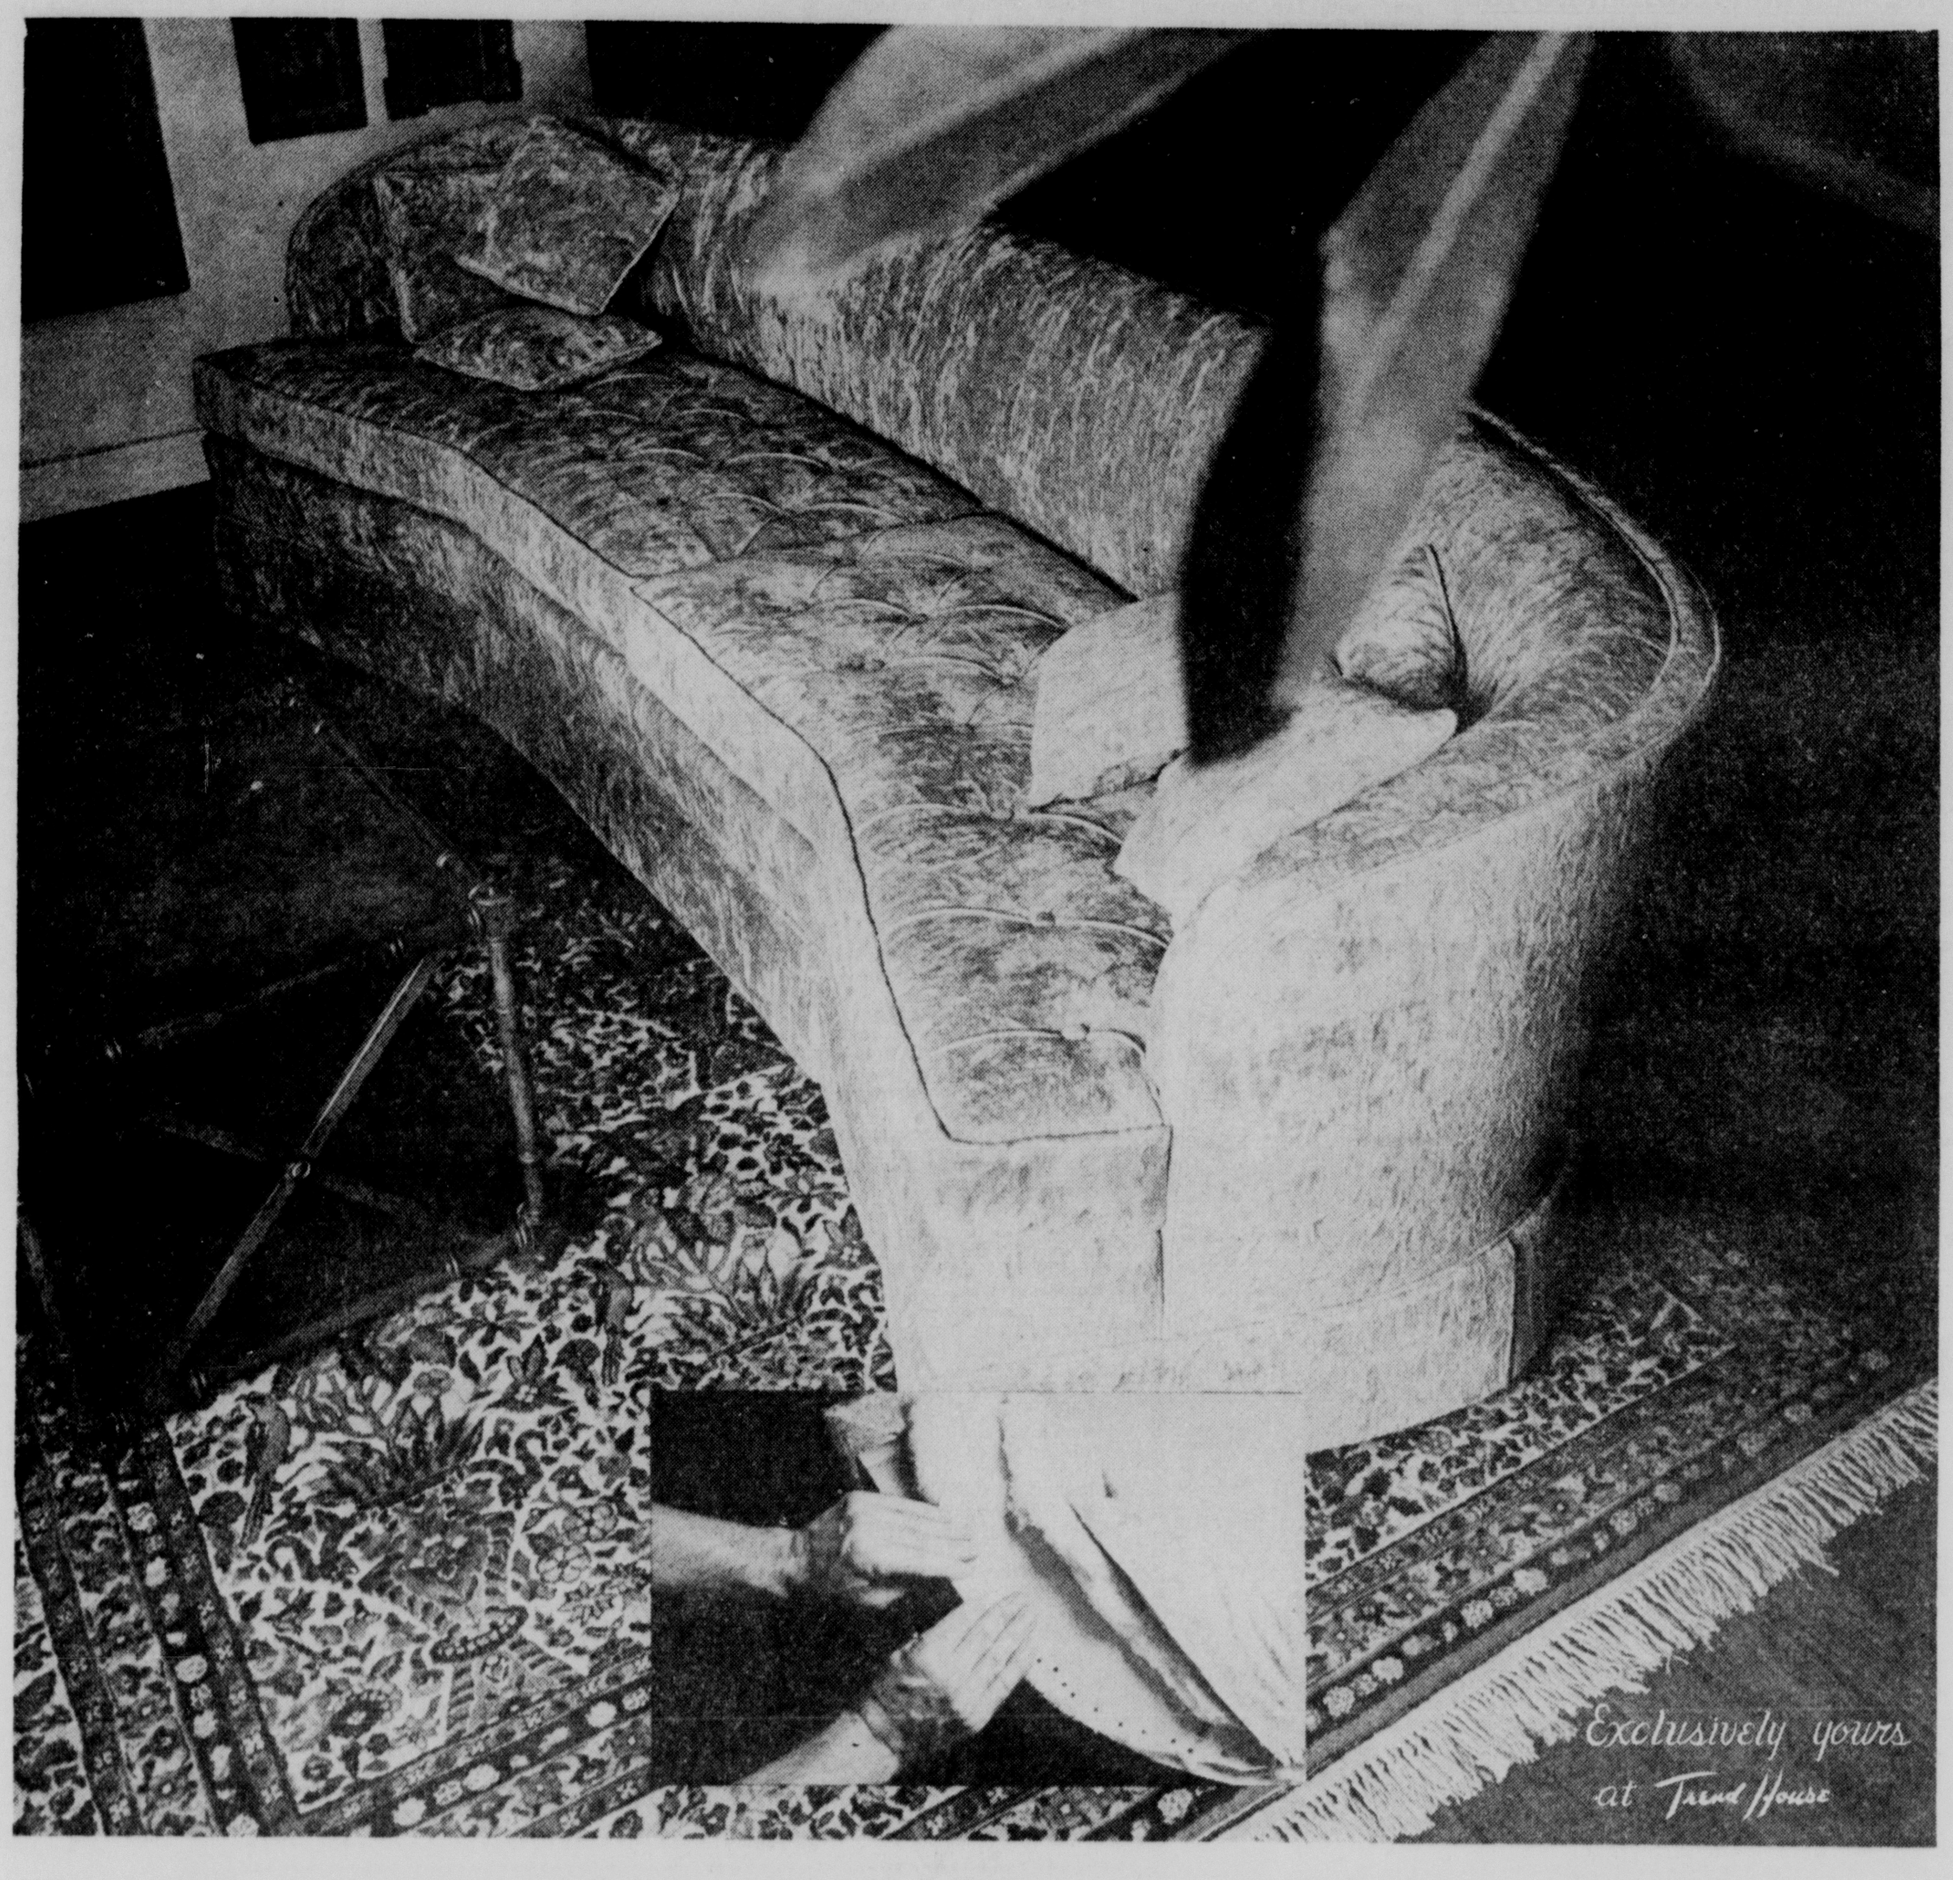
Camping season is here, and boys and girls are off to summer camps all over the South. Among those leaving this week were these, going to Camp DeSoto in Mentone, Alabama: ANN LEDBETTER, DENISE DOWING, SARAH MADISON, MARTY MULLENS, RENE DOWNING, BECKY HUENEFELD, PATTY RILEY, CATHY COTTON, and NANCY THOMPSON, PAT HENRY of Monroe, and Mary READ of Farmerville

A number of girls went from Monroe to Camp Gulfpark in Gulfport, Mississippi. These included KAY SCOTT, MOSSY SARTOR, LOU LEMERT, DEB SCHONLAU, and BECKY BANCROFT. Serving as a counselor here will be BONNIE BANCROFT, who is teaching water skiing.

Our poem today: these words of advice "Experience to Let" by Ogden Nash:

Experience is a futile teacher,
Experience is a prosy preacher,
Experience is a fruit tree fruitless.
Experience is a shoe-tree bootless.
For sterile wearience and drearience,
Depend, My boy, upon experience.
The burnt child, urged by rankling ire,
Can hardley wait to get back at the fire,
And mulcted in the gambling den,
Men stand in line to gamble again.
He who has never tasted jail
Lives well within the legal pale,
While he who's served a heavy sentence,
Renews the racket, not repentance.
The nation bankrupt by a war
Thinks to recoup with just one more.
Experience! wise men do not need it!
Experience! Idiots do not heed it!
I'd trade my lake of experience
For just one drop of common sense.

Marinate candied cherries, thinly sliced, in orange-flavored liquer and serve as a topping for chocolate ice cream. Good enough for guests!



You might be able to find a sofa that looks like this sofa for less money. But you won't be buying the same sofa or one that's even close.

You'll soon find this out when buffet suppers, day-to-day sitting, children and reupholstering start taking their toll on the comfort and looks you bought in the showroom.

Covered in rich crushed velvet, this 101-inch sofa from our galleries will cost you a little more. But, every spring, strip of webbing, length of thread and piece of burlap was hand-picked, then cut, fitted, sewn and secured to support the lines and comfort of this sofa. The arms alone have burlap, fiberfill, muslin and batting back to back beneath the velvet. Even the frame was shaped to support the sofa's design. The price on the sofa, or any other piece of furniture we have means something. Whether it's for extra support behind the looks and comfort of a design. Or the detailed carving and finish in the wood . . . because no cheaper means of manufacturing or shortcut method can match the superb characteristics of fine furniture.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:

For a sanitary, colorful dog bed we bought a 20-gallon plastic garbage can with a lid. They come in different colors and sizes from six to twenty gallons.

We cut a hole in one side, just nine inches from the base.

We put a pillow on the inside . . . and had a new dog bed for less than three dollars.

Color can match the decor of a room, and the plastic is easily washed and kept sanitary.

Mrs. Glenn Robertson

* * *

This is a wonderful idea for pets. And wasn't Mrs. Robertson adorable for telling us about it?

The greatest thing about it is that the lid can be put on in case of rain, if the "house" is left outside, or removed when the weather is hot or the "doghouse" is inside.

You can also cut little air holes around the top if more air is needed.

And, Mrs. Robertson, it's people like you, who take the time to write us with fabulous ideas, who keep this old world going around.

"LITTLE PITCHERS . . ."

DEAR HELOISE:

Nearly every new mother has a one-quart mixing pitcher she uses for making the formula.

I also use my pitcher upside down as a form for drying baby's hats. This should still fit the hats up to about 18 months.

Never wring corduroy bonnets, just place them on the pitcher sopping wet. They will dry looking like new.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

I want to tell you about my new anti-rattling bag for car tools that I carry in the car trunk. It is my wife's discarded pocket book.

It is scuffed a bit, but is strong and large enough to carry everything I need.

When she gets tired of her new one, it will be better yet, as it is bigger and will also hold the car jack —and maybe even the spare tire!

Tyre Jones

THAT GLUE BUGABOO!

DEAR HELOISE:

I have used tubed glue many times and never did know what to do with the tube after I applied the glue. Usually I was still holding what I was glueing, and if I laid the tube down some of the glue would run out.

Yesterday I was going to use a new tube. While I was pulling the cardboard off, I decided to leave some of it on, and stand the tube up.

By putting the tube back in the cardboard holder that I had bent so it would stand up, I didn't get glue all over the table.

Ruth Cheek

SWING LOW

DEAR HELOISE:

I am old and stout, so I use a cotton dish mop to dust the low places that are so hard to reach.

In fact, I have two cotton dish mops—one as is, and one oiled with furniture polish.

Reader

* * *

And you are wise, too!

The short, wooden handles on those cotton mops make them easy to use and the cotton head is nice and absorbent.

They make ideal dusters!

POPCORN-Y IDEA

DEAR HELOISE:

When you are ready to serve popcorn, dip it up with a sugar scoop or cup, and fill plastic sandwich bags. It's great for large families or parties.

The best part of this is that when everyone is finished eating the popcorn, all the sacks can be thrown away. No extra bowls to wash.

A SHORT TALE

DEAR HELOISE:

I saw in your column that someone wanted to know how to fix her husband's collars.

I am a seamstress and here's how I do it: I rip the collar off, use it for a pattern and cut a new collar out of the tail of the shirt.

This way the material of the new collar is exactly like the rest of the shirt. You can sew a replacement piece on the shirt tail that tucks into the pants, and it doesn't show.

DEAR HELOISE:

A small television tray makes a good telephone stand, especially for a wall phone.

The tray holds telephone directories, paper and pencils. It doesn't take up much room and can be moved around if desired.

Gini H.

QUITE A YARN!

DEAR HELOISE:

This is for the ladies who knit:

Store your excess yarn in a 10-section utility shoe bag. It will hang neatly in any closet and has a clear plastic front so you can see the color of yarn you want without digging.

This idea came from our eight-year-old, and I have enjoyed it so much.

Peggy Robin

CUB SCOUT BADGES

DEAR HELOISE:

When sewing Cub Scout badges and arrows on my son's Scout shirt, I slip a piece of cardboard into the pocket to keep from sewing the pocket to the body of the shirt.

Mrs. L. A. Eastman

PERFECT TIMING

DEAR HELOISE:

About 15 minutes before we are to leave in the car each morning, I set the oven timer for 15 minutes.

When it rings, everyone knows it's time to get ready and put on their coats.

Ellen M. Mahoney

SNAPSHOT STICKUM

DEAR HELOISE:

The tape that is sticky on both sides is great for putting pictures in albums.

None of those tricky little paper picture corners for me.

C. S. B.

AT THE JUG AGAIN!

DEAR HELOISE:

I have found empty plastic bleach bottles very useful for holding my curlers, pencils, etc. The smaller bottles are best for holding pencils.

I cut the top off (except the handle) and label the container or draw a design on it with a felt-tipped marker.
